U. S. WILL HELP COLOMBIA WITH DEFENSE FORCES

Naval And Air Missions Will Be Sent Soon To That Country

SHOWS LATIN AMERICAN FRIENDSHIP IS STRONGER

Publication Of Cordial Exchange Of Notes Accompanies Announcement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The United States government announced today that naval and military air missions would go to the Republic of Colombia soon to cooperate with that country in improving its defensive forces.

The step symbolized, to some students of Pan-American affairs, growing bonds between the United States and Latin America for the common defense of the new world against any foreign aggressor. Five such missions already are on duty in other Latin American countries.

"The department of state is pleased to announce," a formal statement said, "that in response to the request of the government of Colombia, agreements were signed November 23 providing for the furnishing by the United States of a naval mission and a military aviation mission to cooperate with the Colombian ministry of war. The two missions will function in an advisory capacity to the Colombian navy and military air force."

The action is of particular importance to the United States because of Colombia's proximity to the Panama Canal. The Canal Zone formerly was part of Colombia.

The announcement was accompanied by publication of a friendly exchange of notes between President Roosevelt and the Colombian senate.

The senate in a formal resolution expressed its gratitude to the president "for his effective defense of democratic ideas and systems, for his

2 CONVICTED ON ARSON CHARGES

Pair Found Guilty Of Burning Brown Mattress Factory Last March

J. G. Brown, 68-year-old West Monroe man, and his son-in-law, Clarence Brown, 43, jointly accused of arson of the Brown Mattress factory of West Monroe last March, were convicted by a 12-man jury in district criminal court here yesterday afternoon. The defendants were remanded to jail by Judge J. T. Shell to await sentence.

The Brown Mattress factory, located on the Monroe-Shreveport highway near the West Monroe city limits was burned on the night of last March 14, but it was almost a month later before evidence was uncovered that led officers to suspect a case of arson, it was brought out in the trial.

The first break in the case came with the arrest of James Price, young West Monroe man, on April 14 on a minor larceny charge. While under questioning by parish authorities, Price revealed that he and the Browns had burned the mattress factory. The arrest of the Browns followed.

Price was jointly accused of arson with the other two defendants, but turned state's evidence and appeared in the trial as a witness against the Browns.

Prosecuting attorneys showed evidence that the mattress factory had been insured for $1,000 and the furnishings for $250. A $940 mortgage was on record against the factory.

The completion of the trial brought to a close the fall term of district criminal court with the exception of a few sentences yet to be given against convicted persons.

FOUL PLAY SEEN IN TRAIN DEATH

Ruston Man's Body Found On Track Near Choudrant With Throat Slashed

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—B. E. Hobbs, about 60, of Ruston, was reported killed when a train plowed into an automobile near Choudrant early tonight, but Lincoln parish authorities, after viewing the body, expressed opinions that Hobbs had been a victim of foul play and left dead or dying in the automobile on the railroad crossing.

Dr. J. J. Bennett, Lincoln parish coroner, stated while getting together a coroner's jury late tonight, that Hobbs' throat had been cleanly cut as though by a razor or some other exceedingly sharp instrument and that the wound could have been the cause of his death.

An Illinois Central train, No. 211, traveling west about 8 p.m., hit the automobile on the Choudrant crossing about seven miles east of here.

The engineer of the train was quoted as saying the car appeared to be stalled on the crossing.

The train crew removed the body from the wreckage and brought it to Ruston in a baggage car.

Hobbs' body was identified by his son-in-law, G. W. Harkness, of Ruston.

According to reports here, Hobbs, who came here from Arcadia about a year ago, left his home at 1 p.m. today with two negroes. Sheriff's officers were seeking the two negroes tonight for questioning.

Hobbs' son-in-law was quoted as saying the elderly man seldom drove an automobile and expressed the opinion that one of the negroes had been the driver of the machine in which Hobbs was riding.

Hobbs is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. G. W. Harkness.

FORMER CHAIN GANG YOUTH NOW HOPEFUL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Paul Johnson, 19-year-old former fugitive from a Georgia chain gang, was more optimistic today about his chances in life.

The youth, who, records show, attempted suicide after his arrest in Los Angeles, went to court yesterday and had William Jones, Lancaster, Calif., farmer, appointed his guardian.

The move was necessary since several motion picture studios have expressed interest in the possible purchase of Johnson's life story, and a guardian would be necessary to protect his interest.

Johnson, suffering from a lung ailment, was released by Los Angeles police after Georgia authorities wired they no longer wanted him.

The youth told police he was originally sentenced for an attempted burglary when he was 15 years of age, and escaped five months ago after six futile attempts.

Discrimination Against American Creditors In Austria Stirs Complaint

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Signs of strained relations with Germany multiplied today when the state department assigned its ambassador to an indefinite tour of duty in Washington and published new protests against Nazi treatment of American creditors.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, announced that Ambassador Hugh Wilson, who returned here today from Berlin on his way to confer with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., had been assigned to the department as an adviser on relations between the two countries. Other officials said later that the assignment, while for an indefinite period, was a temporary one.

Thereafter the department disclosed that the United States embassy in Berlin had complained to the German government yesterday against "acts or policies of foreign governments which discriminate against American creditors and give foreign creditors more favorable treatment than Americans."

This referred to the fact that Germany had not continued service on Austrian debts outstanding in this country when Austria became a part of the Reich. An exchange of notes published by the department said Germany already was making payments on Austrian obligations to creditors in Great Britain, France and some other nations.

Ambassador Wilson conferred with officials here briefly before his scheduled departure at midnight for Atlanta, en route to the "Little White House."

KING CAROL MEETS MARSHAL GOERING

LEIPZIG, Germany, Nov. 26.—(AP)—King Carol of Rumania and Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering met here today for what the official German news agency described as "a detailed discussion particularly regarding the state of economic relations" between Rumania and Germany.

The talk was believed to be a continuance in detail of a conversation the king had with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler last Thursday at Berchtesgaden.

Late in the afternoon Carol headed homeward on a special train and Goering returned to Berlin.

DALADIER PUTS MILITARY RULE UPON RAILROADS

Takes Steps To Prevent Employes From Going On Strike Wednesday

PRACTICALLY ALL PHASES OF WORK ORDERED HALTED

Tense Truce Prevails Between French Government And Labor

PARIS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier tonight decreed the military requisition of all the principal railroad lines of France in his campaign to prevent the one-day general strike called by French labor for next Wednesday.

Daladier signed a decree imposing army control on the railroad workers, who had voted to join the general strike. It will be effective with publication in the official journal tomorrow.

Earlier in the day similar tactics smashed strikes among miners, metal workers and local railroad hands in the north of France, where fifty thousand workers had walked out.

The French Confederation of Labor, which ordered its 5,000,000 members to strike Wednesday in protest against Daladier's decree laws suspending the 40-hour week, had ordered a stoppage in every phase of work, except such necessary services as water, gas and electricity. These services are to be manned by skeleton staffs.

Daladier won the first round by using army measures in the north.

The carload of beeves will number from 40 to 45 head. They will average six months each in age, will weigh from 350 to 400 pounds each and will cost per head approximately $35.

They will be fed on the range on specially planted crops which will be augmented with a protein suppliment

COLD WEATHER TAKES 92 LIVES

Forecast Of Abnormally Low Temperatures Continues Over Much Of Nation

(By Associated Press)

A preview of winter with abnormally low temperatures, high winds and a forecast of more snow persisted over much of the nation today (Sunday) following one of the worst November storms in years. The onslaught caused at least 92 deaths.

Traffic accidents, frigidity, and over-exertion added to the toll steadily.

The weather bureau reported a large mass of cold air centered over the Great Lakes region was sweeping slowly eastward. At the same time it drew warmer weather to the Pacific coast, adding to the menace of forest fires.

Much of the northern part of the nation was blanketed by snow. Houghton, Mich., reported the fall was 16 inches deep. Albany, N. Y., had six inches; Boston, five, and Philadelphia, four.

The forecast for New England was cloudy and more snow, the north central states more snow; the south clear but colder than last night.

Travel by train was delayed at Chicago. Trains ran from one-half to one and a half hours late, but airlines reported normal operations. Bus transportation also was interrupted, especially in New England.

Recapitulation of storm deaths of the Thanksgiving season showed, New York 25, New England 22, New Jersey 12, Pennsylvania 7, the south 5, Ohio 9, Maryland 3, Michigan, Illi-

Plane Leaves Selman Field For Region Of North Pole

Santa Claus is coming to Monroe—by airplane.

A specially chartered plane of the Delta Airlines took off from Selman field last night with the North Pole as its destination. The crew, who were selected with much care for their hardiness and ability to cope with the most trying of flying conditions, gaily soared from the field and right now are on their way to bring Santa Claus to this community to grace the opening of the Christmas festive season and to ride in the great and spectacular parade up and down DeSiard street on Saturday morning.

Hardships and dangers galore are anticipated as a part of their daring exploit by these men, who are right now on their way to the frozen north. When leaving, they declared that they would never be satisfied until they land Santa safely in the plane and head back to Monroe. They said he might insist on bringing his reindeer team along but, if that is required, they are prepared to humor the festive soul for they know that he will spread cheer to young and old when he arrives.

The crew, undaunted by the prospect of flying through miles and miles of uncharted snow country, admitted that it might prove a bit difficult to coax the merry old soul to leave his big toy factory right at the time when pre-Christmas production is at its very height.

The Crystal Ice Palace of Santa Claus is believed to be located only a short distance from the North Pole, although it is said that it may have shifted greatly with snows and great ice floes that are frequent in that region.

That Santa will welcome the intrepid Monroe aviators is assured but whether he will yield to their persuasion and return with them is another question that has yet to be determined.

An urgent invitation to come to Monroe is being carried in a letter of introduction that was written by Mayor H. H. Benoit in which he

POPE AFFECTED BY SLIGHT CHILL

Arises From Sick Bed To Carry On His Official Duties

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Vatican sources said tonight that Pope Pius XI was seized with a slight chill about 5 p.m. (10 a.m., central standard time) after he had left his sick bed to carry on his official duties. The chill lasted only a few minutes.

The pope had been helped from bed and had sat up part of the day despite the heart attack from which he collapsed yesterday morning. He had been warned that his weakened heart might not survive another such attack.

The supreme head of the Catholic church, 81 years old last May 31, gave proof of his extraordinary fortitude by holding a one-hour conference with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state.

Most of the day the pope matched his will against that of his chief physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, head of the Vatican state's sanitary department.

Dr. Milani said his patient expresed for tomorrow the firm desire to receive Cardinal Pacelli, Mgr. Filippo Soccorsi, director of the Vatican radio station, and Camillo Serafini, governor of Vatican city receptions which have been part of the pope's Sunday routine.

The physician was as firm as the pope in his objections. He said he would not permit his holiness to re-

TALLULAH AVIATOR DIES OF INJURIES

TALLULAH, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Windsor Ford, 25-year-old aviator, who was critically injured when a gas explosion destroyed his trailer home near here early in the week, died of his injuries in a local hospital Friday. TWO INMATES OF ALCATRAZ GUILTY

Lucas And Franklin Found Guilty Of Murdering Guard On 'Rock'

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A jury of business men today convicted two young Alcatraz convicts, James C. Lucas and Rufus Franklin, of murdering a guard during an escape attempt, but refused to send them to death in the lethal gas chamber.

The result was that Franklin, 22, had another life sentence added to the two already standing against him and an indeterminate amount of time was appended to the 30-year stretch the 26-year-old Lucas is doing for Texas bank robbery and automobile theft.

In the few minutes between pronouncement of the life sentences and their start back to Alcatraz, the two convicts had time to tell reporters that they expected to spend the rest of their lives in isolation on "the Rock" where the government keeps 300 or more of its most dangerous prisoners. They said isolation would mean continuous imprisonment in unlighted cells on one meal a day.

Harold Faulkner, defense attorney, who contended the government's witnesses from Alcatraz made "a mess" of the prosecution, reiterated his argument that Franklin and Lucas did not kill the guard, Royal C. Cline, and that the federal prosecutors had fallen far short of so proving.

Cline was beaten to death in the saw room of the prison's carpenter shop last May 23, shortly before Lu-

NEW DEAL OFFERED IN DEBUTANTE BALL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The ninth annual black and white ball offered capital bachelors a new deal in debutantes tonight.

The young men gathered at the Mayflower hotel to meet Eleanor Roosevelt, debutante niece and namesake of the first lady, and several dozen other pretty misses who are "coming out" this season.

The debutantes were in white, with coronets of gardenias in their powdered hair, their costumes contrasting vividly with the bachelors' formal black.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt will honor Miss Roosevelt at a White House ball next month.

After the debutantes greeted the guests, the program called for a grand march led by the guest of honor and two White House aides—Lieutenant-Commander Walter R. Jones, skipper of the president's yacht, and Lieutenant Loren Fletcher Cole of the army.

Miss Roosevelt, who is 18, was accompanied from Boston by Miss Margaret MacVeagh, daughter of Lincoln MacVeagh, United States ambassador to Greece. Eleanor is the daughter of Mrs. Roosevelt's brother, Hall Roosevelt of New York, and Mrs. John Cutter of Boston.

RUSTON DRIVER HELD IN DEATH

Charge Of Involuntary Homicide Placed Against Elton Sumlin

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—As a result of a traffic collision in which her husband was killed, Mrs. Raymond W. Ballard of [illegible] has filed a charge of "involuntary homicide by reckless operation of an automobile" against Elton Sumlin, Ruston bakery truck driver. Sumlin has been released under a bond of $1,000 and the case will be presented to the grand jury, which will hold its next regular session in March, Sheriff Bryan Thigpen said.

Following the wreck, which occurred at the intersection of South Trenton street and California avenue here on November 7, a coroner's jury voted 3 to 2 to return a verdict of "unavoidable accident," Dr. J. J. Bennett, parish coroner, reported.

Ballard was employed in hauling gravel for the new Ruston-Farmerville highway. He was driving his empty truck west on California avenue when his vehicle and a bakery truck being driven north on Trenton street by Sumlin collided at the intersection. Ballard was knocked from his truck, which had no cab, and was crushed. He died at the Ruston-Lincoln sanitarium about an hour later.

PRACTICALLY ALL PHASES OF WORK ORDERED HALTED

Tense Truce Prevails Between French Government And Labor

PARIS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier tonight decreed the military requisition of all the principal railroad lines of France in his campaign to prevent the one-day general strike called by French labor for next Wednesday.

Daladier signed a decree imposing army control on the railroad workers, who had voted to join the general strike. It will be effective with publication in the official journal tomorrow.

Earlier in the day similar tactics smashed strikes among miners, metal workers and local railroad hands in the north of France, where fifty thousand workers had walked out.

The French Confederation of Labor, which ordered its 5,000,000 members to strike Wednesday in protest against Daladier's decree laws suspending the 40-hour week, had ordered a stoppage in every phase of work, except such necessary services as water, gas and electricity. These services are to be manned by skeleton staffs.

Daladier won the first round by using army measures in the north.

4-H BOYS WILL RAISE BEEVES

Chamber Of Commerce To Back Them Financially Next Year

The agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce, cooperating with D. L. Bornman, Jr., parish agricultural agent, has announced its willingness to underwrite the cost of a carload of baby beeves to be placed at the disposal of 4-H boys in carrying out a special program.

The purpose of the project will be to afford the boys an opportunity to demonstrate that stock raising can be made to pay in this area when carried on in a systematic manner and with suitable feed crops raised to maintain stock.

The carload of beeves will number from 40 to 45 head. They will average six months each in age, will weigh from 350 to 400 pounds each and will cost per head approximately $35.

They will be fed on the range on specially planted crops which will be augmented with a protein suppliment

'CURIOSITY CLUB'S' ACTIVITIES ENDED

The black-garbed "Curiosity club" of Oklahoma City has reached the end of its activities; the law has stepped in and opened an investigation of the anti-religious and semi-military cult. COLD WEATHER TAKES 92 LIVES

Forecast Of Abnormally Low Temperatures Continues Over Much Of Nation

(By Associated Press)

A preview of winter with abnormally low temperatures, high winds and a forecast of more snow persisted over much of the nation today (Sunday) following one of the worst November storms in years. The onslaught caused at least 92 deaths.

Traffic accidents, frigidity, and over-exertion added to the toll steadily.

The weather bureau reported a large mass of cold air centered over the Great Lakes region was sweeping slowly eastward. At the same time it drew warmer weather to the Pacific coast, adding to the menace of forest fires.

Much of the northern part of the nation was blanketed by snow. Houghton, Mich., reported the fall was 16 inches deep. Albany, N. Y., had six inches; Boston, five, and Philadelphia, four.

The forecast for New England was cloudy and more snow, the north central states more snow; the south clear but colder than last night.

Travel by train was delayed at Chicago. Trains ran from one-half to one and a half hours late, but airlines reported normal operations. Bus transportation also was interrupted, especially in New England.

Recapitulation of storm deaths of the Thanksgiving season showed, New York 25, New England 22, New Jersey 12, Pennsylvania 7, the south 5, Ohio 9, Maryland 3, Michigan, Illi-

POPE AFFECTED BY SLIGHT CHILL

Arises From Sick Bed To Carry On His Official Duties

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Vatican sources said tonight that Pope Pius XI was seized with a slight chill about 5 p.m. (10 a.m., central standard time) after he had left his sick bed to carry on his official duties. The chill lasted only a few minutes.

The pope had been helped from bed and had sat up part of the day despite the heart attack from which he collapsed yesterday morning. He had been warned that his weakened heart might not survive another such attack.

The supreme head of the Catholic church, 81 years old last May 31, gave proof of his extraordinary fortitude by holding a one-hour conference with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state.

Most of the day the pope matched his will against that of his chief physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, head of the Vatican state's sanitary department.

Dr. Milani said his patient expresed for tomorrow the firm desire to receive Cardinal Pacelli, Mgr. Filippo Soccorsi, director of the Vatican radio station, and Camillo Serafini, governor of Vatican city receptions which have been part of the pope's Sunday routine.

The physician was as firm as the pope in his objections. He said he would not permit his holiness to re-

Plane Leaves Selman Field For Region Of North Pole

Santa Claus is coming to Monroe—by airplane.

A specially chartered plane of the Delta Airlines took off from Selman field last night with the North Pole as its destination. The crew, who were selected with much care for their hardiness and ability to cope with the most trying of flying conditions, gaily soared from the field and right now are on their way to bring Santa Claus to this community to grace the opening of the Christmas festive season and to ride in the great and spectacular parade up and down DeSiard street on Saturday morning.

Hardships and dangers galore are anticipated as a part of their daring exploit by these men, who are right now on their way to the frozen north. When leaving, they declared that they would never be satisfied until they land Santa safely in the plane and head back to Monroe. They said he might insist on bringing his reindeer team along but, if that is required, they are prepared to humor the festive soul for they know that he will spread cheer to young and old when he arrives.

The crew, undaunted by the prospect of flying through miles and miles of uncharted snow country, admitted that it might prove a bit difficult to coax the merry old soul to leave his big toy factory right at the time when pre-Christmas production is at its very height.

The Crystal Ice Palace of Santa Claus is believed to be located only a short distance from the North Pole, although it is said that it may have shifted greatly with snows and great ice floes that are frequent in that region.

That Santa will welcome the intrepid Monroe aviators is assured but whether he will yield to their persuasion and return with them is another question that has yet to be determined.

An urgent invitation to come to Monroe is being carried in a letter of introduction that was written by Mayor H. H. Benoit in which he

TWO INMATES OF ALCATRAZ GUILTY

Lucas And Franklin Found Guilty Of Murdering Guard On 'Rock'

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A jury of business men today convicted two young Alcatraz convicts, James C. Lucas and Rufus Franklin, of murdering a guard during an escape attempt, but refused to send them to death in the lethal gas chamber.

The result was that Franklin, 22, had another life sentence added to the two already standing against him and an indeterminate amount of time was appended to the 30-year stretch the 26-year-old Lucas is doing for Texas bank robbery and automobile theft.

In the few minutes between pronouncement of the life sentences and their start back to Alcatraz, the two convicts had time to tell reporters that they expected to spend the rest of their lives in isolation on "the Rock" where the government keeps 300 or more of its most dangerous prisoners. They said isolation would mean continuous imprisonment in unlighted cells on one meal a day.

Harold Faulkner, defense attorney, who contended the government's witnesses from Alcatraz made "a mess" of the prosecution, reiterated his argument that Franklin and Lucas did not kill the guard, Royal C. Cline, and that the federal prosecutors had fallen far short of so proving.

Cline was beaten to death in the saw room of the prison's carpenter shop last May 23, shortly before Lu-

NEW DEAL OFFERED IN DEBUTANTE BALL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The ninth annual black and white ball offered capital bachelors a new deal in debutantes tonight.

The young men gathered at the Mayflower hotel to meet Eleanor Roosevelt, debutante niece and namesake of the first lady, and several dozen other pretty misses who are "coming out" this season.

The debutantes were in white, with coronets of gardenias in their powdered hair, their costumes contrasting vividly with the bachelors' formal black.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt will honor Miss Roosevelt at a White House ball next month.

After the debutantes greeted the guests, the program called for a grand march led by the guest of honor and two White House aides—Lieutenant-Commander Walter R. Jones, skipper of the president's yacht; and Lieutenant Loren Fletcher Cole of the army.

Miss Roosevelt, who is 18, was accompanied from Boston by Miss Margaret MacVeagh, daughter of Lincoln MacVeagh, United States ambasador to Greece. Eleanor is the daughter of Mrs. Roosevelt's brother, Hall Roosevelt of New York, and Mrs. John Cutter of Boston.

Tigers Unable To Do Anything To Stop Two Shifty Halfbacks

FANS SEE ROUGH CONTEST TURNED INTO FIST FIGHT

Louisiana State Suffers Penalties For Clipping, Roughing And Slugging

By Norman Walker

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Tulane's fast football team trounced Louisiana State today, 14 to 0, before 40,000 fans in a rough and tumble game that saw a general fight of fans and players on the field before and after the final whistle blew.

The Tigers could do nothing to stop Tulane's shifty halfbacks, Bob Kellogg and Fred Cassibry, who sparked the Wave's attack and scored a touchdown apiece.

The game was one of the fiercest of the 36 the teams have played. Bronco Brunner, Tulane brilliant back, and Jake Staples, Tiger first-string fullback, were carried from the field with painful injuries.

In the fourth quarter officials ousted James (Jabbo) Stell, Tiger left-halfback, and Tom O'Boyle, Tulane guard, for swapping punches. In this period the Tigers were penalized for clipping, unnecessary roughness and slugging. Bruce Hedric, L. S. U. field general, was put out of the contest on the slugging charge.

That was like ringing a bell. The players cut loose with swings and wallops. Fans streamed down out of the stands, but some of them not so quickly that they forgot to tear up sections of the stands for clubs. Subs from the benches joined in the fistic frolic.

Finally coaches from both benches quieted the struggling mob, a few more plays were run, the last whistle blew, some Tulane admirers ripped up the Tiger goalposts, and the battling started all over again.

The fist-swinging went on till darkness put an end to it.

Charge Of Involuntary Homicide Placed Against Elton Sumlin

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—As a result of a traffic collision in which her husband was killed, Mrs. Raymond W. Ballard of Ida has filed a charge of "involuntary homicide by reckless operation of an automobile" against Elton Sumlin, Ruston bakery truck driver. Sumlin has been released under a bond of $1,000 and the case will be presented to the grand jury, which will hold its next regular session in March, Sheriff Bryan Thigpen said.

Following the wreck, which occurred at the intersection of South Trenton street and California avenue here on November 5, a coroner's jury voted 3 to 2 to return a verdict of "unavoidable accident," Dr. J. J. Bennett, parish coroner, reported.

Ballard was employed in hauling gravel for the new Ruston-Farmerville highway. He was driving his empty truck west on California avenue when his vehicle and a bakery truck being driven north on Trenton street by Sumlin collided at the intersection. Ballard was knocked from his truck, which had no cab, and was crushed. He died at the Ruston-Lincoln sanitarium about an hour later.

EX-WEST MONROE WOMAN SENTENCED

EL RENO, Okla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A middle-aged woman convicted of poisoning her small granddaughter to collect a $200 insurance policy, was sentenced to life imprisonment here today.

Mrs. Romie Sullivan, 49, the grandmother, formerly of West Monroe, La., received the sentence without a word and without apparent emotion.

She was given the life term by District Judge Lucius Babcock after he overruled a motion for a new trial on the charge she poisoned Clara Jean Hay, her 2½-year-old granddaughter,

DALADIER USES MILITARY RULE

[illegible] striking workers and ordering them to work as part of the army. [illegible] were established for those refusing to work.

The [illegible] quickly gave in by ordering strikers to resume work pending the general strike.

The railroad decree said simply that "in view of present circumstances" [illegible] for the lines of the National Railway company. This rule led the men to six great networks serving more than 26,000 miles which were banded together into a single great national company on August 31, 1937.

Although the decree will become effective [illegible] of the officials [illegible] the [illegible] would be carried out. [illegible] to the ministries of [illegible] public works.

In the Paris region, where another [illegible] workers went on strike, all factories were closed or [illegible] strikers [illegible] was not yet ordered [illegible] by the managements.

In effect, a [illegible] prevailed between the government and labor pending the scheduled nation-wide walkout Wednesday.

[illegible] labor ranks [illegible] the government in [illegible] mass meetings late today demanding the resignation of Daladier and abrogation of his decree laws.

Unions of the Paris region published an appeal to their followers to maintain order.

"It is necessary," said their message, "that today's demonstrations keep the great power and great character of discipline and order which will help assure success of the general strike Wednesday."

The government's steel-helmeted armed mobile guards mounted guard around the meetings.

Workers swarmed by the thousands to three major meetings in the capital region. About 30 meetings were held in the provinces. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the government's three-year recovery plan decrees approved by the government November 12, terming them an unfair taxation burden on the lower classes.

They protested abandonment of the People's Front social reforms, especially the 40-hour week.

The workers protested also against the government's use of police to break the sit-in strikes.

In the background of the conflict, however, there loomed the mounting political enmities between Premier Daladier's Radical-Socialists on the one hand and their former allies, the Socialists, Communists and the General Confederation of Labor, on the other.

The crisis rapidly approached a climax which promised either to leave Daladier in power with a new conservative majority in the chamber of deputies or to set up a new government.

WINTER COMES TO KANSAS CITY

Warm, dry weather came to an end at Kansas City with the arrival of a snowstorm. Here a policeman and a schoolboy chat while the flakes fall. What are they talking about? Well, sir, your guess is as good as ours, but we have an idea that it's — you guessed it — the weather.

cas, Franklin and another prisoner, Thomas Limerick, climbed to the roof of the building and rushed a guard tower in an attempt to flee the island.

The tower guard, Harold P. Stites, fatally shot Limerick, drilled Franklin through both shoulders with rifle bullets and cowed Lucas while other guards raced to the spot and ended the threat.

Star witness for the government, Texas Ma[illegible] Robber Convict Milton Pettyjohn, placed Franklin, Lucas and Limerick at or near the saw filing room just before the killing, but the defense produced a bloody work jacket which the prosecution [illegible] held from evidence and which was identified as Pettyjohn's.

The defense admitted the three convicts had been trying to escape but contended the killing of the guard was not necessary for the success of their plans and that Cline could have been slain by any one of six prisoners who had been in the saw filing room about that time.

Franklin, who already was serving a 30-year federal sentence for an Alabama bank robbery, has two life sentences pending against him in that state, one for robbery and one for murder.

Increasingly jubilant as they were led to the United States marshal's iron-barred cage, the felon pair talked freely of the mysterious "Rock" and its famed inmate, Al Capone.

"Capone is punchy," said Lucas, who once stabbed Chicago's ex-gang lord with a pair of shears. "He throws fits and he tries to jump everybody."

Lucas said he stabbed Capone "in self-defense" when Capone "tried to jump me" in the prison barber shop.

Attorney Faulkner has five days in which to file an appeal.

United States Attorney Frank J. Hennessy said the verdict was "fair enough."

Assistant United States Attorney William E. Licking said the two might be transferred to some other prison in case any tendency developed among the other convicts to "heroize" them for "beating" the death penalty.

Faulkner quoted Lucas as saying:

"I think the judge gave us a fair trial but the jurors could not help feeling a prejudice against us because we were convicts. To save our lives we had to prove our innocence."

questions which none of the Central or South American states ever has brought up for discussion."

The whole tenor of the German strictures is a warning to South American states against these [illegible] North American machinations. In contrast, according to Korrespondenz, are German economic efforts in the new world "which are wholly free from all aggressiveness and tutelage."

ROOSEVELT TO CONFER WITH TWO AMBASSADORS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The whole range of America's relations with Germany and Italy, with particular reference to the treatment of Jews in those countries, is expected to be reviewed by President Roosevelt at a conference tomorrow night with Ambassadors Hugh R. Wilson and William Phillips.

The temporary White House announced today Wilson, summoned home from Berlin for "consultation and report," and Phillips, home on leave from Rome, would arrive here around 6 p.m., central standard time, tomorrow and go immediately to the Roosevelt retreat on Pine mountain. The two diplomats will be overnight guests at the "Little White House."

Pending their arrival, officials had no comment on news from Washington Wilson would remain there indefinitely, after his trip here, as a state department consultant on German affairs.

Although the ambassadors are not expected to have anything to say here for publication, there is a possibility an announcement of a general nature may be made before their departure.

While waiting for the ambassadors to arrive, the president today continued his conferences, begun last night, with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board on what was officially described as the general economic situation.

There were reports the reserve official may be discussing new tax legislation.

Tonight, the chief executive received Aubrey Williams, deputy works progress administrator and head of the National Youth administration, and Dr. Will W. Alexander, farm security administrator. It was not announced what they talked about, but it was understood to have covered various angles on the relief problem.

Before going for his daily drive this afternoon, accompanied by Eccles, the president had a brief talk with James H. Cromwell, banker-economist.

PLANE DEPARTS FOR NORTH POLE

described the people here as specially desirous that Santa Claus return with the aviators and assuring him that every minute of his time spent in the Twin Cities will be made as happy for him as it is humanly possible to be made.

No word has as yet been received from the airplane but it is known that its route will be across the country to Seattle, thence over Alaska and direct to the North Pole. With no unlooked-for delays it is said that the party should arrive in Monroe in good time for the Saturday morning party that is planned for all north Louisiana youngsters.

The plane, as a precaution, was equipped with a special ski landing gear. Extra tanks for gasoline were added so that it was possible to carry as much as 1,100 gallons of fuel. It was said that after a refueling stop at Seattle that no further Alaskan stops will be required, of course provided that no emergencies are encountered on this hazardous and romantic flight.

But while the plane is on its way to get Santa Claus, feverish preparations are in progress for the big parties here that are proposed for this week-end. On Friday night, from 7 to 10 p.m., there will be a promenade and jubilee, store windows will be unveiled, displaying their holiday wares, a street dance will be held and the music will be provided by large sound trucks. But the real party for the "kiddies" will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. Ten floats, the most gorgeous that have ever been seen in Monroe and West Monroe at any previous time, will be entered in a mammoth parade. A well-known float decorator of Memphis, Tenn., is being engaged at large expense to prepare the floats which will parade through both Monroe and West Monroe.

The floats will show scenes that are connected with fairyland legends. The first gaily colored float will depict "Merry Christmas"; then will come one that will show "Cupid and Apollo"; next will be "Old Mother Hubbard"; "Hi Diddle Diddle" will be shown on the next float; while the following float will show "Humpty Dumpty"; "Little Boy Blue" will be then in the line; the "Land of Oz" will be represented by the next float, "The Tortoise and the Hare" is to be on the following float; "Hickory Dickory Dock" and Santa Claus himself will complete the floats of fairyland.

Ten bands will provide music and the entire project will be such as to be long remembered, state those in charge.

The slogan adopted is "Let No Child in All North Louisiana Be Deprived Opportunity of Seeing This Thrilling Christmas Fairyland Spectacle."

Children and their parents and other grown folks from all over this section of the state are specially invited to plan to come to Monroe next Saturday morning to join in the fun.

The promenade and jubilee and fairyland parade are both being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe.

UNITED STATES TO AID COLOMBIA

intervention to safeguard peace within and without the continent, and for the loyal and constant carrying out of the good neighbor policy which is based upon the respect of the sovereignty of all peoples."

Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"The cordial spirit which inspired this generous manifestation could not but impress me anew with the realization of the identity of the Democratic ideals of our two nations, and of our common determination to join with our American neighbors in perfecting understanding and friendship among the republics of the new world."

Passage of a senate resolution praising the head of another state in such glowing terms is rare in present day diplomacy. Some officials here felt it finally closed the breach between the two governments which followed the revolt that brought the Republic of Panama into being. The United States, which had been unwilling to pay Colombia's price for the Canal Zone, recognized the new republic and bought the zone from it for less. Years later congress paid Colombia $15,000,000 as compensation, but hard feelings that developed over the previous action spread through Latin America.

The military air mission will consist of two regular army officers, probably a major and captain, and three non-commissioned officers serving for three years. The naval mission will be headed by a captain or commander on the active list, serving for four years.

The United States now supports a naval mission of eight officers and a military mission of four officers in Brazil. Three American naval advisors and eight army officers are on duty in Argentina. Four naval advisors are presently serving in Peru, two army officers in Haiti, and one army officer in Guatemala.

The state department was further gratified today to announce that Ecuador's decision to attend the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, insured attendance of all the American republics at that parley. There had been some question whether Ecuador would attend, following recent collapse of negotiations to settle her boundary dispute with Peru.

which will cost an estimated sum of $10 per head for the six months period in which they are to be prepared for market and at which time they should weigh about 800 to 900 pounds each. The profit per head to the boys is estimated at $25.

The delivery of the young stock here is to take place on or about July 15 next, but plans are being made far in advance so that the boys can make advance provision with crops that will be raised for their feed.

It is planned to exhibit the baby beeves, possibly at the Ouachita Valley fair in West Monroe next year, and later at the state stock show in Baton Rouge.

It is believed that there is a great future for livestock raising and that with proper encouragement that it may be greatly expanded in Ouachita parish and neighboring parishes. The agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce feels that in promoting this project that it will be contributing to something worthwhile in an agricultural sense in this part of the state and are optimistic of the results that should be obtained.

ed for home also, to report on President Roosevelt's attitude toward the Nazi measures against Jews.

Today's publication of notes regarding the Austrian debt question disclosed the United States now has addressed four increasingly pointed notes to Berlin since Germany absorbed Austria and suspended service on Austrian debts and bonds in this country without recognizing responsibility for paying those obligations.

The third note, sent October 19, warned Germany that if the uncertainty of the debt situation continued it would be "certain to intensify a feeling of injustice and discrimination." It brought a preliminary German reply in which it was stated the question was being studied, but that no way had been found to pay American creditors as yet.

It was to this German note that the American embassy in Berlin replied yesterday.

About $50,000,000 is believed involved in the bonds and obligations of the old Austrian government and its municipalities and sub-divisions. No understanding has yet been reached, although Germany has not formally renounced her obligation to assume some of these debts.

GERMAN PRESS TURNS BARRAGE UPON U. S.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The German press with one accord is turning its guns on the United States with the charge that Washington has imperialistic designs in connection with the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru.

Reports that the Jewish emigration question is to be put on the agenda sufficed today to loosen a barrage of taunts at "dollar diplomacy."

The Boersenzeitung in a front page editorial charged the United States with "fostering in South America a morbid war psychosis" with the transparent purpose of forming a solid bloc against "alleged aggression by certain European states."

The newspaper Nachtausgabe warned Americans that "some time they will discover they have gotten their information on world politics from lunatics."

The Pan-American conference, which will open at Lima December 9, has brought the foreign office mouthpiece, Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, into the chorus of anti-American attacks.

It complained that "the United States persists in bringing forward

"Since the little girls had their tonsils and adenoids removed recently they have shown much improvement and we expect a great change in their health by spring.

"But there has been no consideration given as yet to move them from their comfortable little nursery here."

Dionne recalled censure in some quarters for a vaudeville tour he and Mrs. Dionne made in 1935. He pointed out this had been called "cheap exploitation" and added, "I wonder what they consider showing the quints in New York would be?"

As one of the guardians of his daughters he said he never would consent and "as father I am against it and just as strenuously opposed as a guardian."

Shortly after the quintuplets were born May 28, 1934, the father signed a contract for appearance of the babies at the Chicago World's fair but changed his mind and said the contract was not binding because his wife had not been consulted.

The contract was nullified by the Ontario government. It became the subject of a lawsuit in Chicago but the claim against Dionne was dismissed.

DALADIER USES MILITARY RULE

mobilizing striking workers and ordering them to work as part of the army. Courts martial were established for those refusing to work.

The unions quickly gave in by ordering strikers to resume work pending the general strike.

The railroad decree said simply that "in view of present circumstances" requisition is authorized for the lines of the National Railway company. This extended the move to six great networks covering more than 26,000 miles which were banded together into a single great nationalized company on August 31, 1937.

Although the decree will become effective with publication of the official journal, it was not disclosed when the actual commandeering would be carried out. This is left to the ministries of war and public works.

In the Paris region, where another 50,000 metal workers went on strike, all factories were cleared of sit-in strikers, although work was not yet ordered resumed by the managements.

In effect, a tense truce prevailed between the government and labor pending the scheduled nation-wide walkout Wednesday.

France's left wing labor ranks shouted defiance at the government in nation-wide mass meetings late today, demanding the resignation of Daladier and abrogation of his decree laws.

Unions of the Paris region published an appeal to their followers to maintain order.

"It is necessary," said their message, "that today's demonstrations keep the great power and great character of discipline and order which will help assure success of the general strike Wednesday."

The government's steel-helmeted armed mobile guards mounted guard around the meetings.

Workers swarmed by the thousands to three major meetings in the capital region. About 50 meetings were held in the provinces. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the government's three-year recovery plan decrees approved by the government November 12, terming them an unfair taxation burden on the lower classes.

They protested abandonment of the People's Front social reforms, especially the 40-hour week.

The workers protested also against the government's use of police to break the sit-in strikes.

In the background of the conflict, however, there loomed the mounting political enmities between Premier Daladier's Radical-Socialists on the one hand and their former allies, the Socialists, Communists and the General Confederation of Labor, on the other.

The crisis rapidly approached a climax which promised either to leave Daladier in power with a new conservative majority in the chamber of deputies, or to set up a new government.

which will cost an estimated sum of $10 per head for the six months period in which they are to be prepared for market and at which time they should weigh about 800 to 900 pounds each. The profit per head to the boys is estimated at $25.

The delivery of the young stock here is to take place on or about July 15 next, but plans are being made far in advance so that the boys can make advance provision with crops that will be raised for their feed.

It is planned to exhibit the baby beeves, possibly at the Ouachita Valley fair in West Monroe next year, and later at the state stock show in Baton Rouge.

It is believed that there is a great future for livestock raising and that with proper encouragement that it may be greatly expanded in Ouachita parish and neighboring parishes. The agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce feels that in promoting this project that it will be contributing to something worthwhile in an agricultural sense in this part of the state and are optimistic of the results that should be obtained.

intervention to safeguard peace within and without the continent, and for the loyal and constant carrying out of the good neighbor policy which is based upon the respect of the sovereignty of all peoples."

Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"The cordial spirit which inspired this generous manifestation could not but impress me anew with the realization of the identity of the Democratic ideals of our two nations, and of our common determination to join with our American neighbors in perfecting understanding and friendship among the republics of the new world."

Passage of a senate resolution praising the head of another state in such glowing terms is rare in present day diplomacy. Some officials here felt it finally closed the breach between the two governments which followed the revolt that brought the Republic of Panama into being. The United States, which had been unwilling to pay Colombia's price for the Canal Zone, recognized the new republic and bought the zone from it for less. Years later congress paid Colombia $15,000,000 as compensation, but hard feelings that developed over the previous action spread through Latin America.

The military air mission will consist of two regular army officers, probably a major and captain, and three non-commissioned officers serving for three years. The naval mission will be headed by a captain or commander on the active list, serving for four years.

The United States now supports a naval mission of eight officers and a military mission of four officers in Brazil. Three American naval advisors and eight army officers are on duty in Argentina. Four naval advisors are presently serving in Peru, two army officers in Haiti, and one army officer in Guatemala.

The state department was further gratified today to announce that Ecuador's decision to attend the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, insured attendance of all the American republics at that parley. There had been some question whether Ecuador would attend, following recent collapse of negotiations to settle her boundary dispute with Peru.

exhibit the quints," the physician said, "but we have laughed at them and in the past it has been considered that any such move would not be in the health interests of the quintuplets.

"Since the little girls had their tonsils and adenoids removed recently they have shown much improvement and we expect a great change in their health by spring.

"But there has been no consideration given as yet to move them from their comfortable little nursery here."

Dionne recalled censure in some quarters for a vaudeville tour he and Mrs. Dionne made in 1935. He pointed out this had been called "cheap exploitation" and added, "I wonder what they consider showing the quints in New York would be?"

As one of the guardians of his daughters he said he never would consent and "as father I am against it and just as strenuously opposed as a guardian."

Shortly after the quintuplets were born May 28, 1934, the father signed a contract for appearance of the babies at the Chicago World's fair but changed his mind and said the contract was not binding because his wife had not been consulted.

The contract was nullified by the Ontario government. It became the subject of a lawsuit in Chicago but the claim against Dionne was dismissed.

TWO INMATES OF ALCATRAZ GUILTY

cas, Franklin and another prisoner, Thomas Limerick, climbed to the roof of the building and rushed a guard tower in an attempt to flee the island.

The tower guard, Harold P. Stites, fatally shot Limerick, drilled Franklin through both shoulders with rifle bullets and cowed Lucas while other guards raced to the spot and ended the threat.

Star witness for the government, Texas Mail Robber Convict Milton Pettijohn, placed Franklin, Lucas and Limerick at or near the saw filing room just before the killing, but the defense produced a bloody work jacket which the prosecution had withheld from evidence and which was identified as Pettijohn's.

The defense admitted the three convicts had been trying to escape but contended the killing of the guard was not necessary for the success of their plans and that Cline could have been slain by any one of six prisoners who had been in the saw filing room about that time.

Franklin, who already was serving a 30-year federal sentence for an Alabama bank robbery, has two life sentences pending against him in that state—one for robbery and one for murder.

Increasingly jubilant as they were led to the United States marshal's iron-barred cage, the felon pair talked freely of the mysterious "Rock" and its famed inmate, Al Capone.

"Capone is punchy," said Lucas, who once stabbed Chicago's ex-gang lord with a pair of shears. "He throws fits, and he tries to jump everybody."

Lucas said he stabbed Capone "in self-defense" when Capone "tried to jump me" in the prison barber shop.

Attorney Faulkner has five days in which to file an appeal.

United States Attorney Frank J. Hennessy said the verdict was "fair enough."

Assistant United States Attorney William E. Licking said the two might be transferred to some other prison in case any tendency developed among the other convicts to "heroize" them for "beating" the death penalty.

Faulkner quoted Lucas as saying:

"I think the judge gave us a fair trial but the jurors could not help feeling a prejudice against us because we were convicts. To save our lives we had to prove our innocence."

AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN IN U. S.

ed for home also, to report on President Roosevelt's attitude toward the Nazi measures against Jews.

Today's publication of notes regarding the Austrian debt question disclosed the United States now has addressed four increasingly pointed notes to Berlin since Germany absorbed Austria and suspended service on Austrian debts and bonds in this country without recognizing responsibility for paying those obligations.

The third note, sent October 19, warned Germany that if the uncertainty of the deft situation continued it would be "certain to intensify a feeling of injustice and discrimination." It brought a preliminary German reply in which it was stated the question was being studied, but that no way had been found to pay American creditors as yet.

It was to this German note that the American embassy in Berlin replied yesterday.

About $50,000,000 is believed involved in the bonds and obligations of the old Austrian government and its municipalities and sub-divisions. No understanding has yet been reached, although Germany has not formally renounced her obligation to assume some of these debts.

GERMAN PRESS TURNS BARRAGE UPON U. S.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The German press with one accord is turning its guns on the United States with the charge that Washington has imperialistic designs in connection with the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru.

Reports that the Jewish emigration question is to be put on the agenda sufficed today to loosen a barrage of taunts at "dollar diplomacy."

The Boersenzeitung in a front page editorial charged the United States with "fostering in South America a morbid war psychosis" with the transparent purpose of forming a solid bloc against "alleged aggression by certain European states."

The newspaper Nachtausgabe warned Americans that "some time they will discover they have gotten their information on world politics from lunatics."

The Pan-American conference, which will open at Lima December 9, has brought the foreign office mouthpiece, Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, into the chorus of anti-American attacks.

It complained that "the United States persists in bringing forward questions which none of the Central or South American states ever has brought up for discussion."

The whole tenor of the German strictures is a warning to South Americans against these "insidious North American machinations." In contrast, according to Korrespondenz, are "German economic efforts in the new world," which "are wholly free from all aggressiveness and tutelage."

ROOSEVELT TO CONFER WITH TWO AMBASSADORS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The whole range of America's relations with Germany and Italy, with particular reference to the treatment of Jews in those countries, is expected to be reviewed by President Roosevelt at a conference tomorrow night with Ambassadors Hugh R. Wilson and William Phillips.

The temporary White House announced today Wilson, summoned home from Berlin for "consultation and report," and Phillips, home on leave from Rome, would arrive here around 6 p.m., central standard time, tomorrow and go immediately to the Roosevelt retreat on Pine mountain. The two diplomats will be overnight guests at the "Little White House."

Pending their arrival, officials had no comment on news from Washington Wilson would remain there indefinitely, after his trip here, as a state department consultant on German affairs.

Although the ambassadors are not expected to have anything to say here for publication, there is a possibility an announcement of a general nature may be made before their departure.

While waiting for the ambassadors to arrive, the president today continued his conferences, begun last night, with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board on what was officially described as the general economic situation.

There were reports the reserve official may be discussing new tax legislation.

Tonight, the chief executive received Aubrey Williams, deputy works progress administrator and head of the National Youth administration, and Dr. Will W. Alexander, farm security administrator. It was not announced what they talked about, but it was understood to have covered various angles on the relief problem.

Before going for his daily drive this afternoon, accompanied by Eccles, the president had a brief talk with James H. Cromwell, banker-economist.

PLANE DEPARTS FOR NORTH POLE

described the people here as specially desirous that Santa Claus return with the aviators and assuring him that every minute of his time spent in the Twin Cities will be made as happy for him as it is humanly possible to be made.

No word has as yet been received from the airplane but it is known that its route will be across the country to Seattle, thence over Alaska and direct to the North Pole. With no unlooked-for delays, it is said that the party should arrive in Monroe in good time for the Saturday morning party that is planned for all north Louisiana youngsters.

The plane, as a precaution, was equipped with a special ski landing gear. Extra tanks for gasoline were added so that it was possible to carry as much as 1,100 gallons of fuel. It was said that after a refueling stop at Seattle that no further Alaskan stops will be required, of course provided that no emergencies are encountered on this hazardous and romantic flight.

But while the plane is on its way to get Santa Claus, feverish preparations are in progress for the big parties here that are proposed for this week-end. On Friday night, from 7 to 10 p.m., there will be a promenade and jubilee, store windows will be unveiled, displaying their holiday wares, a street dance will be held and the music will be provided by large sound trucks. But the real party for the "kiddies" will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. Ten floats, the most gorgeous that have ever been seen in Monroe and West Monroe at any previous time, will be entered in a mammoth parade. A well-known float decorator of Memphis, Tenn., is being engaged at large expense to prepare the floats which will parade through both Monroe and West Monroe.

The floats will show scenes that are connected with fairyland legends. The first gaily colored float will depict "Merry Christmas"; then will come one that will show "Cupid and Apollo"; next will be "Old Mother Hubbard"; "Hi Diddle Diddle" will be shown on the next float; while the following float will show "Humpty Dumpty"; "Little Boy Blue" will be then in the line; the "Land of Oz" will be represented by the next float; "The Tortoise and the Hare" is to be on the following float; "Hickory Dickory Dock" and Santa Claus himself will complete the floats of fairyland.

Ten bands will provide music and the entire project will be such as to be long remembered, state those in charge.

The slogan adopted is: "Let No Child in All North Louisiana Be Deprived Opportunity of Seeing This Thrilling Christmas Fairyland Spectacle!"

Children and their parents and other grown folks from all over this section of the state are specially invited to plan to come to Monroe next Saturday morning to join in the fun.

The promenade and jubilee and fairyland parade are both being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe.

JAPANESE MAKE RAPID PROGRESS

Advance Toward Border Of British-Leased Territory Of Kowloon

SHANGHAI, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Japanese troops in south China were reported tonight to be making rapid progress toward the border of the British-leased territory of Kowloon.

The Japanese vanguard was said to be only half a mile from the frontier as the invaders swept aside what they called Chinese army "remnants" on the eastern shore of the Pearl river delta.

(The peninsula of Kowloon, on the Chinese mainland, was ceded to Great Britain in October, 1860, and now forms a part of the crown colony of Hongkong.)

Japanese reports said Chinese forces caught near the frontier had suffered heavy losses.

(A Hongkong dispatch said Japanese warplanes bombed the town of Shumchun, on the crown colony's border, increasing the number of refugees and wounded Chinese soldiers seeking to enter the colony.

(It said at least 1,000 Chinese soldiers already had crossed into British territory and were interned.)

As this action proceeded in the sector southeast of Canton, the Japanese air force reported great activity in the vicinity of the fallen southern metropolis.

Fifty warplanes attacked an estimated 12,000 Chinese near Samshui, 30 miles west of Canton, with what one Japanese described as "fearful results."

To the north, between Canton and Hankow, Chinese reported they had halted the Japanese drive down the Canton-Hankow highway toward Changsha, defeating the Japanese at Taolin and Tungcheng.

The mean temperature of Mexico City varies from 50 to 65 degrees the year round.

POLISH AIR LINES ORDER U. S. PLANES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lockheed Aircraft corporation, Burbank, Calif., announced today it had received a $250,000 order for four twin-engined transport planes from the Polish air lines, making the third major foreign contract signed this month.

The order increases Lockheed's unfilled business to about $20,000,000, the company said.

Other Lockheed contracts in November included an order from the Australian air board for 50 bombing planes and a commitment from the French air ministry for three high-speed transports for its Europe-Africa line, "Air Afrique."

CUTTER PICKS UP DISABLED VESSEL

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Dismasted except for a portion of her foremast, with foreyards hanging by lifts, the barkentine Marsala was towed into Hampton Roads and anchored off Newport News in the Middleground channel tonight by the coast guard cutter Mendota.

High seas and strong northeast winds made the cutter's task difficult and she was able to make only about four miles an hour with her helpless charge in tow.

Although the Marsala was only a few feet from the Mendota at the end of a tow line, the coast guard craft was unable to get her signals understood.

The cutter used her Morse lights or blinkers in efforts to communicate with the Marsala, but visibility was so poor the dots and dashes in lights could not be distinguished.

The cutter picked up the disabled ship about 40 miles southeast of Cape Charles at 8 a.m. today. The Marsala was dismasted in a storm Thursday night.

She was sighted riding at anchor yesterday morning by the American steamer City of Savannah, which reported to the coast guard that the barkentine was in no danger but needed a tow to port.

A crew of 25 was believed aboard the Marsala, used as a training ship for officers of the merchant marine.

She was built in 1919 at Pascagoula, Miss., is of 2,422 tons and 254 feet long.

MILITARY AIDES NOT ALL AGREED

Roosevelt Makes Clear Arms Should Be Sufficient To Assure Security

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has made it clear he believes the nation must be made sufficiently strong on land, at sea and in the air to contribute at least to the security of the entire western hemisphere from foreign aggression.

His immediate military advisors and other experts apparently are far from complete accord, however, as to the emphasis which should be placed on different types of armament.

Better equipment for the army and a greater store of war munitions reserves were the latest published recommendations of General Malin Craig, chief of staff.

His annual report, issued this month, included no proposal for a greatly increased air force such as Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he will recommend to congress early in January.

The navy needs more men and shore bases and continued expansion of the fleet toward the limits of this year's billion-dollar expansion act, Secretary Swanson and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, have reported.

A fleet strong enough to keep a foe hundreds of miles distant from the coast would make unnecessary huge land forces, Leahy told congress.

Rather than an air force mighty enough to rival Germany's, some naval champions would prefer a fleet sufficiently powerful to defend both the Atlantic and Pacific frontiers at the same time against any conceivable combination of foes.

Mr. Roosevelt has said "no" to a question as to whether such a two-fleet navy was contemplated now. He made this statement at the same press conference where he commented that national defense had become a matter of continental defense, and that continental safety was far too low against Europe's mounting air power.

Only from Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, have come detailed recommendations for planes, guns and munitions in the quantities the chief executive has hinted he has in mind.

Johnson, a key figure in the current restudy of defense requirements, projected in a Boston address a four fold increase in the army air corps to an aerial armada of upwards of 9,280 war planes.

The failure of some advisors to visualize requirements on the same scale as the president is more apparent than real, however.

Their recommendations were drafted mostly during the summer following the ending on June 30 [illegible]

[illegible]

Assistant Secretary Johnson: "To meet the tremendous pace that the rest of the world is setting, we must double, yes treble and perhaps even quadruple, our present air forces. Mass production of airplanes we must achieve." He indicated in an address November 18 at Boston that a six-month store of arms and supplies for an army of a million men was another administrative objective.

General Craig—As "a matter of major military importance" urged that the army's reserve of munitions be built up as soon as possible. He reported a "deficiency" [illegible] estimated [illegible] cost $[illegible] to remedy.

Admiral Leahy—More men, modernization of five battleships, two aircraft carriers and other vessels are needed, he reported. Has proposed a start next year on the seventh and eighth new battleships and a score of other warships in addition to the four-score now on the ways.

Representative Snyder, Democrat, Pennsylvania, chairman of the house military appropriations subcommittee—Indicated he favored creation of the world's strongest air force by 1942, an increase of $[illegible] in the war department budget, and additional outlays as considered needed.

Representative Thomason, Democrat, Texas, ranking Democrat on the house military affairs committee—Favored a larger air force, increases for both the regular army and national guard, and expansion of the Thomason act providing for training of reserve officers for the regular army.

Bernard M. Baruch, 1917-18 chairman of the war industries board—Urged on his return from Europe in the midst of the September war scare a radical, immediate expansion of American air forces and the navy to forestall any Nazi or Fascist "power politics" in the western hemisphere.

METHODISTS PLAN PHYSICAL CHANGES

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Alabama conference Methodists began preparations today to make physical changes in administrative work when the three branches of Methodism complete their unification program next April.

Bishop J. L. Decell, who earlier had told the conference that "American Methodism faces a new hour and a great day," appointed committees to study the re-making of circuit lines and re-districting of the Alabama-Florida territory embraced by the conference he heads.

"Southern Methodism does not pass away," the bishop said.

"It becomes Methodism in the south. We will continue with the same prerogative and rights we have always had."

The conference already had endorsed a proposal asking that "local autonomy" be preserved as nearly as possible under the united church, instructing in effect its delegates to take the suggestion to the Kansas City meeting.

WPA BEGINNING TO REDUCE ENROLLMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Works Progress administration has begun to reduce its enrollment by not replacing persons who obtained work in private industry.

It reported today that enrollment decreased 14,043 during the week ended November 19. The total stood at 3,243,549 on that date, compared with 3,257,592 the previous week.

WPA officials expressed the opinion that the policy of not replacing persons who left WPA might reduce the rolls sufficiently to carry on to March 1 without additional appropriations as requested by President Roosevelt.

EXTORTION THWARTED

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The federal bureau of investigation announce an alleged plan to extort $10,000 from Shirley Temple, juvenile film star, was thwarted today with the arrest of Hinton C. Hardison, 22, at Galice, Ore. J. D. Swenson, agent in charge, said Hardison admitted mailing a purported extortion note November 17.

JAPANESE MAKE RAPID PROGRESS

Advance Toward Border Of British-Leased Territory Of Kowloon

SHANGHAI, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Japanese troops in south China were reported tonight to be making rapid progress toward the border of the British-leased territory of Kowloon.

The Japanese vanguard was said to be only half a mile from the frontier as the invaders swept aside what they called Chinese army "remnants" on the eastern shore of the Pearl river delta.

(The peninsula of Kowloon, on the Chinese mainland, was ceded to Great Britain in October, 1860, and now forms a part of the crown colony of Hongkong.)

Japanese reports said Chinese forces caught near the frontier had suffered heavy losses.

(A Hongkong dispatch said Japanese warplanes bombed the town of Shumchun, on the crown colony's border, increasing the number of refugees and wounded Chinese soldiers seeking to enter the colony.

(It said at least 1,000 Chinese soldiers already had crossed into British territory and were interned.)

As this action proceeded in the sector southeast of Canton, the Japanese air force reported great activity in the vicinity of the fallen southern metropolis.

Fifty warplanes attacked an estimated 12,000 Chinese near Samshui, 30 miles west of Canton, with what one Japanese described as "fearful results."

To the north, between Canton and Hankow, Chinese reported they had halted the Japanese drive down the Canton-Hankow highway toward Changsha, defeating the Japanese at Taolin and Tungcheng.

The mean temperature of Mexico City varies from 50 to 65 degrees the year round.

POLISH AIR LINES ORDER U. S. PLANES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lockheed Aircraft corporation, Burbank, Calif., announced today it had received a $320,000 order for four twin-engined transport planes from the Polish air lines, making the third major foreign contract signed this month.

The order increases Lockheed's unfilled business to about $29,900,000, the company said.

Other Lockheed contracts in November included an order from the Australian air board for 50 bombing planes and a commitment from the French air ministry for three high-speed transports for its Europe-Africa line, "Air Afrique."

CUTTER PICKS UP DISABLED VESSEL

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Dismasted except for a portion of her foremast, with foreyards hanging by lifts, the barkentine Marsala was towed into Hampton Roads and anchored off Newport News in the Middleground channel tonight by the coast guard cutter Mendota.

High seas and strong northeast winds made the cutter's task difficult and she was able to make only about four miles an hour with her helpless charge in tow.

Although the Marsala was only a few feet from the Mendota—at the end of a tow line—the coast guard craft was unable to get her signals understood.

The cutter used her Morse lights or blinkers, in efforts to communicate with the Marsala, but visibility was so poor the dots and dashes in lights could not be distinguished.

The cutter picked up the disabled ship about 40 miles southeast of Cape Charles at 8 a.m. today. The Marsala was dismasted in a storm Thursday night.

She was sighted riding at anchor yesterday morning by the American steamer City of Savannah, which reported to the coast guard that the barkentine was in no danger but needed a tow to port.

A crew of 25 was believed aboard the Marsala, used as a training ship for officers of the merchant marine.

She was built in 1919 at Pascagoula, Miss., is of 2,422 tons and 284 feet long.

FIREMEN PUT OUT FOUR GRASS FIRES

Four grass fires, two caused by trash fires and the other two said to have been set, were extinguished yesterday by members of the Monroe fire department.

The fires were located at Breard and North 27th streets, on Pershing avenue, at Georgia and Pecan streets and at Isabelle and Pope streets.

MILITARY AIDES NOT ALL AGREED

Roosevelt Makes Clear Arms Should Be Sufficient To Assure Security

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has made it clear he believes the nation must be made sufficiently strong on land, at sea and in the air to contribute at least to the security of the entire western hemisphere from foreign aggression.

His immediate military advisors and other experts apparently are far from complete accord, however, as to the emphasis which should be placed on different types of armament.

Better equipment for the army and a greater store of war munitions reserves were the latest published recommendations of General Malin Craig, chief of staff.

His annual report, issued this month, included no proposal for a greatly increased air force such as Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he will recommend to congress early in January.

The navy needs more men and shore bases and continued expansion of the fleet toward the limits of this year's billion-dollar expansion act, Secretary Swanson and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, have reported.

A fleet strong enough to keep a foe hundreds of miles distant from the coast would make unnecessary huge land forces, Leahy told congress.

Rather than an air force mighty enough to rival Germany's, some naval champions would prefer a fleet sufficiently powerful to defend both the Atlantic and Pacific frontiers at the same time against any conceivable combination of foes.

Mr. Roosevelt has said "no" to a question as to whether such a two-fleet navy was contemplated now. He made this statement at the same press conference where he commented that national defense had become a matter of continental defense, and that continental safety was far too low against Europe's mounting air power.

Only from Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, have come detailed recommendations for planes, guns and munitions in the quantities the chief executive has hinted he has in mind.

Johnson, a key figure in the current restudy of defense requirements, projected in a Boston address a four-fold increase in the army air corps to an aerial armada of upwards of 9,280 war planes.

The failure of some advisors to visualize requirements on the same scale as the president is more apparent than real, however.

Their recommendations were drafted mostly during the summer following the ending on June 30 of the last fiscal year.

Europe's big war scare and the Munich peace occurred since then.

Pronouncements and recommendations of presidential advisors and other military experts include:

Secretary Woodring—Counseled in his latest published report that "in an uneasy world, made restless by actual or potential warfare, ordinary prudence suggests that we look to our defenses."

Secretary Swanson—"Urgently recommended" in his 1938 report that the fleet be manned as soon as possible at full war strength, instead of the existing 85.3 per cent, stressed that more replacements and additions of warships were needed, and hinted he had urged the size of new battleships be increased from 35,000 to 45,000 tons.

Assistant Secretary Johnson—"To meet the tremendous pace that the rest of the world is setting, we must double, yes treble and perhaps even quadruple, our present air forces, . . . Mass production of airplanes we must achieve." He indicated in an address November 18 at Boston that a six-month store of arms and supplies for an army of a million men was another administrative objective.

General Craig—As "a matter of major military importance" urged that the army's reserves of munitions be built up as soon as possible. He reported a "deficiency" which it is estimated will cost $428,000,000 to remedy.

Admiral Leahy—More men, modernization of five battleships, two aircraft carriers and other vessels are needed, he reported. Has proposed a start next year on the seventh and eighth new battleships and a score of other warships in addition to the four-score now on the ways.

Representative Snyder, Democrat, Pennsylvania, chairman of the house military appropriations subcommittee—Indicated he favored creation of the world's strongest air force by 1942, an increase of $100,000,000 in the war department budget, and additional outlays as considered needed.

Representative Thomason, Democrat, Texas, ranking Democrat on the house military affairs committee—Favored a larger air force, increases for both the regular army and national guard, and expansion of the Thomason act providing for training of reserve officers for the regular army.

PARTY LEADERS TO WATCH, WAIT

Both Sides In Congress Expected To Feel Way Slowly At First

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Post-election speculation as to the probable course of events in the new congress is being grooved gradually to the expectation that a period of watchful waiting is in prospect on both sides, administration and anti-administration.

Republican leadership, on one side, appears moving toward a policy of careful strategy in exploiting the election victories which almost doubled minority party strength in the next house and increased its senate representation by 50 per cent. John D. M. Hamilton, the national chairman, has emphasized to party audiences that even these gains leave the Republicans too far in the minority to be legislatively effective except in hoped-for close cooperation with some Democrats.

Republicans house and senate caucuses in January, when the new congress convenes, are generally expected to reflect that view in shaping party tactics for the session. It all spells an effort to avoid antagonizing not only those Democrats openly hostile to some administration methods and proposals but also the larger group of Democratic doubtfuls.

An effective coalition of Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats would require the cooperation of more congressional Democrats than can be set down as ready to declare open warfare on the president and his policies.

Mr. Roosevelt has said he did not expect any such coalition to develop importantly. Behind that lies a conviction in administration circles that even the most extreme anti-New Dealers must look ahead to 1940. The loss of the presidency in 1940 would mean, even to those congressional Democrats from the south or elsewhere who survived a national party defeat, the loss of federal patronage perquisites they have enjoyed for six years.

That is the leverage the White House counts on to check Republican angling for active legislative alliances with anti-New Deal Democratic factions.

RETURN OF PART OF RAIL PRICE ASKED

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Purchasers of the 23,000-mile Van Sweringen railroad empire, saying they paid too much for it, today sued the man from whom they bought it—George A. Ball, 75-year-old Muncie, Ind., fruit jar manufacturer and capitalist—in an effort to get back $3,000,000 of their money.

The suit, filed in federal court, was brought by Robert R. Young, Newport, R. I., Allan K. Kirby, Convent, N. J., and the Seaboard company, Ltd., of Nassau, Bahamas islands, under the federal securities exchange act of 1934.

It asks $5,000,000 damages on grounds that Ball, after control of the vast rail empire was dumped into his lap by the death of the Van Sweringen brothers, violated the securities act by engaging in certain transactions on the New York stock exchange for the purpose of creating "both actual and apparent active trading in the securities of the Alleghany corporation," parent Van Sweringen company.

Ball's transactions, the suit alleges, were intended to induce the plaintiffs to buy the securities "at the false, fraudulent, fictitious and excessive prices" provided in the purchase agreement.

The Alleghany corporation, through the Chesapeake corporation, a subsidiary holding company, has substantial stock holdings in many railroads. Among them are the Chesapeake and Ohio, Erie, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, Missouri Pacific, Wheeling, and Denver and Rio Grande.

JURY DELIBERATES ON DR. BERRY CASE

OLYMPIA, Wash., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A jury deliberated tonight on the guilt or innocence of Dr. Kent W. Berry, 50-year-old physician, and three others accused of kidnaping and assault in the alleged abduction and torture of Irving Baker.

Imposition of the death penalty was possible in the event of first degree convictions on the kidnaping charge. The jury was under court instruction to disregard any "unwritten law" defense contention.

Dr. Berry allegedly tortured and threatened to emasculate Baker after accusing the latter of criminally attacking attractive 27-year-old Mrs. Berry following a party last July 4. Baker denied the physician's charge.

ceive even members of his family let alone any other visitors.

Dr. Milani permitted his patient to drink a small cup of diluted coffee this afternoon after the pope took some broth and sipped a little champagne.

The physician was seen leaving the papal apartment in late afternoon for a brief stroll.

He intended to spend another night near the pontiff.

Dr. Milani supervises medical care of Vatican employes at a four-room clinic-pharmacy-first aid station but when the pope is ill he devotes all his time to the supreme head of the church. Dr. Milani is 61, tall and distinguished. His hair and moustache are iron gray.

Except for the conference in the library with Cardinal Pacelli today, the pope spent his time while sitting up beside the stained glass window of his bedroom. He wore a long white robe, a woolen skull cap and slippers of silk and wool. With him constantly were two male nurses—monks of the Do Good brotherhood.

People from all walks of life went to St. Peter's cathedral to kneel in prayer for the pontiff's recovery.

Messages expressing hope for the pope's recovery continued to pour in. Among notables calling to inquire as to the pope's condition was the German ambassador to the Holy See, Diego von Bergen.

Occasionally during the day hushed, reverent persons formed small groups in the vast square in front of St. Peter's and stood in the fine mild weather gazing toward the window of the pope's bedroom, high on a corner of the papal palace.

It is estimated by the National Safety council that more Americans died in traffic accidents during the past year and a half than were killed during the World war.

Let's Rally To Railroads' Support

In view of the fact that railroads throughout the country are confronted with greatly lessened business because of the present era of automobiles, motor trucks and barge lines, which are proving competitors to be reckoned with, and as conditions in Ouachita parish are quite similar to those elsewhere, attention is being called to the railroads' plight. The Chamber of Commerce the past week held a "smoker" in Hotel Virginia for the purpose of concentrating attention on the needs of railroads.

Ouachita parish owes a great deal to railroads which in the past have been producers of a large percentage of the revenue of laboring classes here. Two railroad shops flourished here and the payrolls were large. But times have changed, the old V. S. and P. shops have been closed down and the Missouri Pacific shops are operating at a lessened capacity than in times past. As was pointed out at the "smoker," when support is diverted from the railroads, these cannot employ as many men, and lessened payrolls mean that less money will be expended in the community, so that the merchants also lose.

But even with curtailment in evidence by the railroads consequent upon business conditions, one person out of every 12 in Monroe and West Monroe, depends on our railroads for sustenance. The three local roads, the Arkansas and Louisiana Missouri railway, the Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific, today are employing a total of 636 men and their combined annual payroll is $873,248. Taxes paid by these three roads in Ouachita parish, a large percentage of which is devoted to the school fund, total $123,816 annually.

It is true that the railroad problem is national in scope, but it is also a problem of vital local significance. The fact remains that the railroads pay more taxes, provide more employment and payrolls in the Twin Cities than any other industry. Unless we as citizens realize fully the situation and endeavor to improve conditions, we stand to lose heavily in constantly shrinking revenues as railroads cannot continue their programs if passengers fail to ride in trains and if freight is sent over other transportation systems. We can and should mobilize sentiment that will mean the continued and greatly increased support of the railroads.

The fact must not be lost sight of that railroads have pushed out the country's frontier, have settled cities and towns in barren wastes, and have been one of the greatest civilizing factors in America's unrivalled growth and expansion. The public owes a debt to the railroads and the Twin Cities, like all other cities of the land, have a seemingly moral obligation to see that their support is continued. And this will well repay even from a selfish standpoint for bigger volume of business in Monroe and West Monroe and elsewhere will mean that there will be more money expended, merchants will prosper in a greater degree, and the communities will reap a rich and substantial reward thereby.

THRIFT AGAIN REWARDED

An encouraging seasonal sign that the American people have come to anticipate annually is the aggregate of bank payments on Christmas club savings. Each year the prospect of brisk holiday trade is brightened by the announcement of vast sums soon to be paid those thrifty folk who have had the will and common sense to set aside weekly amounts with a view to the accumulation of an adequate Yuletide budget.

The fact that national payments are expected to exceed $330,000,000, must be regarded as an indication of the economic significance of this particular savings plan.

Of course, not all of the money will be used for Christmas purchases. Some of it will go for the payment of back taxes and for the acquisition of life's necessities. But whatever objects the depositors may have in mind, the net effect upon the national economy is bound to be one of marked stimulation. And that is good news—especially in times like these.

FIORELLO'S FUN

Fiorello La Guardia is at it again. His political philosophy does not allow for dictators of any kind. This explains why he is in a small jam with Mussolini and a nice big one with Hitler. But as the mayor of America's largest city and as the political hero of many people the Little Flower doesn't worry much.

His latest exploit which leaves the nation chuckling is the appointment of three special police officers to guard against possible disturbances around the German consulate in New York. And those three men are Jews—Captain Finkelstein, Lieutenant Licker, and Sergeant Goldstein. Today while Goering, Goebbels and Adolf are cursing the Semitic race three of the race protect their commercial agent in New York and the world has a good chuckle, with Fiorello joining in on the chorus.

Radio transmission of photos has been improved, it is alleged, but those shots of Hitler always look as if they had been snapped through a saloon Venetian blind.

News comes that the army may put the soldiers in blue uniforms. It looks like the north won.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—David Sarnoff, head of the Radio Corporation of America and peer of the realm in his field, came to Washington to exchange blows with the government in the monopoly investigation, and in his first dozen sentences dropped a hint of horrors to come for unhandsome politicians.

Said Sarnoff: Television is just around the corner.

Now such a warning coming from Sarnoff is not to be biffed aside like a fly on the butter. He is on the inside track. His statement puts solidly behind all the rumors and reports of television heard heretofore.

And when it comes, what will happen to our bustle-faced politicians who have depended on their superior logic, wise cracks and stentorian voices to overcome the fact that their noggins don't look well in print?

New Major Consideration

It may sound silly, but to us it seems a better than fair bet that by 1940 one of the important considerations for a president will be.

Is he good looking? Does he have a "strong" face?

It is not to be forgotten the part radio has played in the past two elections. Roosevelt, master o' the mike, made Hoover in 1932 sound like a man with his head in a duffle bag. In 1936 Governor Landon tried to remedy his own microphonic defects by studying under a voice tutor during part of the campaign. At times, such was the value of the training, he could repeat a dozen "s" words without hissing one. It couldn't be said that he was defeated because of a hissed "s," but he went down trying not to.

May Become Actor

Come another election, the aspiring candidate may well have to carry along not only a voice expert but a makeup man. He may need a stage director. If he has a nervous habit of tugging at his ear or a lock of hair while he pours his message into the air, he might lose Pennsylvania and Ohio in one swat.

The nearest thing we now have to television is the news reel talkies where the boys with messages for the public are invited to sound off. In the news reels a speaker with a shiny spot peeking out from beneath a misplaced lock is always good for a titter. Moreover, in the talkie versions, the films are edited so that a silly gesture can be cut out.

But in television the product will go directly from producer to consumer without benefit of friendly retouching. If a man has a nervous habit of twitching his nose or a way of saying "peanuts" that looks odd in closeup, he'll be no great help to the party even if he can coin great phrases like "Back to Normalcy" or "The Forgotten Man."

Young Tom Dewey, with a head of black hair, may do splendidly in television unless his crisp mustache touches the national funnybone. So far as we know, his adams apple doesn't duck up and down around his collar button. From a sartorial standpoint, Republicans might "do well with Dewey."

Democratic Possibilities

Solicitor General Robert Jackson is a handsome enough Democratic prospect, with a good head of hair and clean cut features. Secretary Wallace of Agriculture might go well with the farming help, as his forelock is forever dropping across his brow in a manner suggesting homely Will Rogers.

After all, these things are taken seriously by party figures who remember "the Voice" that swelled the totals in the two past campaigns. A noble mien may help in 1940. Great as was Lincoln, no telling what might have happened had television put his homely face before a jibing public in 1860.

Truly it would be terrible for either party next time to be defeated by a margin of buck teeth and a receding chin.

BATHHOUSE JOHN

By BRUCE CATTON

It was somehow surprising to read of the death the other day of Chicago's famous alderman, "Bathhouse John" Coughlin. The man belonged to another era; he was a set piece from the day of the muckrakers, and it was hard to realize that he had survived into these post-depression times.

Alderman Coughlin was a picturesque figure—a canny, dapper, jovial person with a flair for writing verse and a marvelous sense of political realism. And although it was this picturesqueness of his which made him famous, he was a significant figure in American politics—a man whose career is deeply instructive for all students of the ins and outs of democracy.

The ward boss is a familiar creature in our municipal life, and Coughlin was typical of the breed. In alliance with the equally-famous "Hinky Dink" Kenna, he ruled the first ward of Chicago for decades, delivering its votes with monotonous regularity and battening on the time-honored mainstays of privilege, protection and perquisites. Naturally enough, he was execrated by the good people who are pained by civic corruption and misrule; yet somehow he held his place to the end, and the periodic waves of reform never unseated him.

For the reformers seldom understand the Bathhouse Johns and the Hinky Dinks. Usually they look on such men as the causes of corrupt government, whereas in reality they are the symptoms of it. And it is that little fact which makes the career of a man like Coughlin worth study.

The ward boss doesn't exist in a vacuum. Like all other social institutions, he arises because he is needed. He is the product of forces which our social organization sets in motion, and the only way to end the kind of government he represents is to change those forces.

If we have wide slum areas, great masses of people who live forever on the knife edge of utter insecurity, a city government which has at its disposal favors that will mean millions to the recipients, powerful interests which insist that that government do nothing to disturb them—if we have all of those things, as we have in most cities, then we have the ingredients of bad government.

The bad government which results may operate through such men as Bathhouse John; but such men are not the prime movers. Chicago's government will be no better, now that this particular boss is dead. The conditions which produced him have not changed.

Through public education, through the evolution of a more just social system, through the raising of our standards of civic morality—in such ways we may eventually attain honest, efficient and impartial civic government. Until that day comes, we shall just have to put up with our ward bosses.

The Knights of the White Camelia is something new in our already large and diversified fall line of cuckoo salvationists. There is a current story that when Gracie Allen went into a room where there was cuckoo clock on the wall, the cuckoo popped out and dived out of the window, screaming, "This room isn't big enough for both of us." We may soon observe in America vast migratory flights of cuckoos, if things keep on as they are.

The Cameliaistas, as they probably will be called when they mount the barricades, were turned up by the Dies committee. They have stocked a complete line of anti-Semitism, totalitarianism, and hard-boiled arrogance—all staple goods in this field of merchandising—and are whooping up their brand of high-proof, jig-saw corn juice all over the country, according to evidence heard by the committee.

They and their allies, such as the fantastic "Silver Shirts," assail democracy, foment hatred and fan up racial and religious bigotry, with preposterous voodoo incantations, all on the lower swamp levels of the national intelligence quotient. We don't see them, but if we listen carefully we can hear the beat of their jungle drums.

The original Ku Klux Klan of the reconstruction years and its revival in the post-war epoch have provided us with a helpful clinical case history for a study of the above and many similar aberrations. They are all of a piece—Ku Klux and its later spawn. Basically, they have these elements in common: 1—They effectively organize ignorance. 2—They quickly become a business and acquire a shrewd commercial motivation. 3—They recruit venal politicians and acquire political power. 4—They rise in times of emotional tension and they employ romantic, juvenile and symbolic nonsense all in exactly the same manner—as did the German Nazis in their historic atavistic backslide into the ancient huggermuggery of the gods of the mountain.

Any student of this vestigial squirrelogoly will note that most of its early devotees have swamp moss in their hair. Just plain boredom accounts for many potentially decent and sensible men getting mixed up in this kind of foolishness. You sit around for a few years swatting flies in the remote environs of some dreary whistle stop. You are fed up with the mail order catalogue, and the whistle of the 3:15 isn't quite the diurnal excitement it used to be. Life is just a snooze and a yawn.

Along comes an outfit with klaverns, kleagles, hooded robes, nightshirts or what not, blood-oaths, midnight rituals, and above all, three or four made-to-order goats—Gabardine swine into which you may drive all the devils of debt, failure and frustration which have been pitchforking you all these years. (Incidentally, the last should have been No. 5 in the above summary of least common denominators, or possibly No. 1. Picking a proscribed group to be hated and persecuted is the first rule of procedure, if you want to set up a new squirrel-cage and get your cut on membership fees.) All the above being true, you join up with a whoop.

Immunities against these germ-carriers of hatred and bigotry are a good job, two or three decent suits of clothes, at least the rudiments of a sound education, a trip to the movies once in a while, with the missus and the kids, a bone buried somewhere, even if it's only a small insurance policy or bank account, and, above all, some leisure concerns and interests which validate you as a human being and an individual.

Real individuality is as insoluble as a chunk of slag in this flux of hate and stupidity. It gets only the congenital "mass man."

Several weeks ago, in an account of "an expedition into the jungles of youth," this department remarked that perhaps the blocking of the normal channels of adulthood, jobs, responsibility and marriage, were making youth turn back to patterns of juvenile behavior.

A friend of mine, a well-known New York physician, who also is a leading psychiatrist, backs me up in this and gives the suggestion a much wider application than I had intended. He says this accounts for much of Silver Shirt and White Camelia dementia. With the world economic breakdown, as the doctor sees it, the oncoming generation is having the devil's own time growing up. Growing up is important. We may go to the scriptures for confirmation of this. "When I became a man I put away childish things," wrote St. Paul.

And so may we all, if we can achieve a wholesome renovation of our entire house of democracy.

Italian East Africa—New Name on Maps

NO longer are Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and Italian Ethiopia to be found separately on world maps; the three territories have been combined as one to be known henceforth as Italian East Africa.

Together they comprise an area of 590,000 square miles, stretching from the torrid shores of the Indian Ocean to Ethiopia's towering mountains. The lands are relatively unsettled as yet except for the native populations.

Eritrea consists of about 45,000 square miles, and has a population of more than 600,000. Its capital is Asmara. Here Italy's colonial venture in Africa began in 1870 when the port of Assab, in the extreme southern part of Eritrea, was purchased. Eritrea stretches for 670 miles along the African coast of the Red Sea.

Italian Somaliland, with an area of 194,000 square miles and a population of roughly 1,000,000, extends along the Indian Ocean from the Gulf of Aden to the Juba river. The coastline is 1100 miles long. Its chief products are oil, gum, hides, kapok and ivory and it is the source of half the world's supply of incense.

Ethiopia, 350,000 square miles in area, is the most densely populated of the three sections. It has nearly 8,000,000 inhabitants. As far back as 1889 Italy had tried to establish a protectorate over Ethiopia, but was upset by King Menelik, who with an army of 80,000 annihilated a force of 12,000 Italians at the battle of Adowa.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

"Frankie, now remember, I want you to stay in your own yard. Don't go outside it."

"If you promise to stay in front of your own house, and not go off the block, you can. But remember, you stay where I can see you."

"Yes'm."

Frankie was willing to promise anything if it meant he was free to ride on the sidewalk. People passed along the walk and he could say, "Hello" to them and they could smile down at him and say, "Hello" back. That meant a great deal to Frankie who was desolate without human companionship.

Then, of course, Jimmy and Paul came out, and they had their wheels. "Hi, Frankie. Come on over." Frankie's wheels threw out sparks in their speed to get there. The three velocipedes made a fine train, too fine and speedy a train, and much too big, to stay on one little block. Quite without thought it made its way down the long avenue, two blocks, ten blocks, before it reached the station—the traffic light at the head of Main street. Here the train was headed back toward the home depot.

Mother looked out after a time, to make sure that Frankie was in front of the house. He wasn't in sight. The street was bare of children for blocks. She hurried down to Jimmy's house. No, Jimmy wasn't home. Probably out with Paul and Frankie, his mother said calmly. The same word at Paul's house. No, he wasn't about. Maybe down street with the other two. Mother was not only worried now, she was provoked to wrath by the coolness of the other two mothers. If they didn't care where their children were, she did, and she would see to it that Frankie stayed where she could see him if it was the last thing she did on earth. But she couldn't find Frankie.

No, the officer at the traffic light had not seen any children cross his street and he would certainly have seen them had they tried to do so. O, now that he thought of it, three kids on velocipedes had stopped on the other side of the street and had gone up Hamilton street. Could they be the ones she wanted?

Up Hamilton street went mother, anger lending speed to her heels. You see, Hamilton street paralleled her own street, and the train had decided to go around and make a circular track of it. But the time mother had arrived on her own block she got word that the train had just left the station. When Frankie got home, late for lunch, he was spanked. And his velocipede was put in the cellar for one solid week.

A child of five needs playfellows. If you are afraid of his going out of sight of home, don't give him a velocipede; or if you do, don't let him out without escort. Riding under escort is not exactly a five-year-old's idea of fun. If the neighborhood is safe, let him go along with his crowd. If not, don't provide the means for his own hurt. But above all, remember that the nature of a small boy is to seek the companionship of other little boys and provide for it. Mothers of such a group have to cooperate to insure their happiness and safety.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

(Rodney Dutcher is dead—of a heart attack which occurred in his office. A veteran capital correspondent at 37, he had been chief of the NEA Service Washington bureau since 1928. Mr. Dutcher had been a newspaper man since 18, when he started working in Worcester, Mass. Later he became associated with the United Press, when that organization started a night feature wire service. At Washington, he directed NEA's bureau during the terms of three presidents and covered every important capital story during the last 10 years. He was the most widely published of all Washington columnists.

This column was written a few hours before his death.)

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—Some of the 1938 lame ducks in congress have discovered it's just as important to play to the folks back home as to the national gallery.

More often than not defeated members of congress find their mistake was to become too engrossed in big-time affairs without keeping in touch with constituents. That's one reason the mortality rate among national figures is likely to be relatively high in a congressional election, while inconspicuous fellows never heard of outside Washington and their own bailiwicks continue to roost comfortably because they know enough to keep one ear tuned to constituents.

Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, who was leader of the house liberal bloc, is a good example of a man who became a "statesman" too rapidly and overestimated his political security in his San Antonio district.

Maverick was elected four years ago and turned out to be a hard-fighting leader. He came from an old American family and his progressivism wasn't tinged with the Minnesota and Wisconsin brands of "radicalism." He was just what the assortment of 50 or more house liberals had been looking for and they flocked behind him.

Forgot Fences

After that Maverick became a national figure, leaped into the fray on one national issue after another, made speeches over the country, wrote a book and was lionized by New Dealers in Washington.

Maverick got plenty of federal money for his district, but overestimated his personal strength there. He went home last summer confident of renomination in the primaries, unaware that his fences were in disrepair.

The middle-class voters of San Antonio had decided Maverick was too radical, especially because he had become friendly with John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. That was what beat him in the primary and it was an especially sad lesson because his opponent's margin was only 485 votes. With a margin as small as that against him it seemed obvious that a little more attention to the constituents would have saved his skin.

Maverick wasn't the only candidate to learn such a lesson.

But he is now going out to build up his own fences, hoping to knock down those of his political foes by running for mayor of San Antonio next May. The city is practically equivalent to Maverick's congressional district. Customarily the mayor decides who the congressman will be. Although Maverick beat the city machine in 1934 and 1936, it organized against him this year and licked him. Maverick hasn't anything to do except be in San Antonio between now and May, when the voters will tell him whether he has been able to wheedle them back by running as a home town boy for a home town job. If elected he probably will decide Maverick should be San Antonio's next congressman.

It's Still Frankfurter

Dr. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard law school continues to be the leading candidate for the supreme court and odds are five to one or so that President Roosevelt will appoint him to the vacancy left by Justice Cardozo's death. Although some prominent Jews have sent word that the appointment might stir up smoldering anti-Semitism in the country, the Nazi persecutions have hardened Roosevelt's intention.

It's also felt at the White House that Roosevelt will have one or two other supreme court appointments to make during his present term and that the next new justice after Frankfurter is likely to be Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan, who meanwhile is expected to be placed in a cabinet job or equally important post.

In his prospective appointments Roosevelt thus far shows no sign of leaning toward conservatism.

Let's Rally To Railroads' Support

In view of the fact that railroads throughout the country are confronted with greatly lessened business because of the present era of automobiles, motor trucks and barge lines, which are proving competitors to be reckoned with, and as conditions in Ouachita parish are quite similar to those elsewhere, attention is being called to the railroads' plight. The Chamber of Commerce the past week held a "smoker" in Hotel Virginia for the purpose of concentrating attention on the needs of railroads.

Ouachita parish owes a great deal to railroads which in the past have been producers of a large percentage of the revenue of laboring classes here. Two railroad shops flourished here and the payrolls were large. But times have changed, the old V. S. and P. shops have been closed down and the Missouri Pacific shops are operating at a lessened capacity than in times past. As was pointed out at the "smoker," when support is diverted from the railroads, these cannot employ as many men, and lessened payrolls mean that less money will be expended in the community, so that the merchants also lose.

But even with curtailment in evidence by the railroads consequent upon business conditions, one person out of every 12 in Monroe and West Monroe, depends on our railroads for sustenance. The three local roads, the Arkansas and Louisiana Missouri railway, the Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific, today are employing a total of 636 men and their combined annual payroll is $873,248. Taxes paid by these three roads in Ouachita parish, a large percentage of which is devoted to the school fund, total $123,815 annually.

It is true that the railroad problem is national in scope, but it is also a problem of vital local significance. The fact remains that the railroads pay more taxes, provide more employment and payrolls in the Twin Cities than any other industry. Unless we as citizens realize fully the situation and endeavor to improve conditions, we stand to lose heavily in constantly shrinking revenues as railroads cannot continue their programs if passengers fail to ride in trains and if freight is sent over other transportation systems. We can and should mobilize sentiment that will mean the continued and greatly increased support of the railroads.

The fact must not be lost sight of that railroads have pushed out the country's frontier, have settled cities and towns in barren wastes, and have been one of the greatest civilizing factors in America's unrivalled growth and expansion. The public owes a debt to the railroads and the Twin Cities, like all other cities of the land, have a seemingly moral obligation to see that their support is continued. And this will well repay even from a selfish standpoint for bigger volume of business in Monroe and West Monroe and elsewhere will mean that there will be more money expended, merchants will prosper in a greater degree, and the communities will reap a rich and substantial reward thereby.

THRIFT AGAIN REWARDED

An encouraging seasonal sign that the American people have come to anticipate annually is the aggregate of bank payments on Christmas club savings. Each year the prospect of brisk holiday trade is brightened by the announcement of vast sums soon to be paid those thrifty folk who have had the will and common sense to set aside weekly amounts with a view to the accumulation of an adequate Yuletide budget.

The fact that national payments are expected to exceed $330,000,000, must be regarded as an indication of the economic significance of this particular savings plan.

Of course, not all of the money will be used for Christmas purchases. Some of it will go for the payment of back taxes and for the acquisition of life's necessities. But whatever objects the depositors may have in mind, the net effect upon the national economy is bound to be one of marked stimulation. And that is good news—especially in times like these.

FIORELLO'S FUN

Fiorello La Guardia is at it again. His political philosophy does not allow for dictators of any kind. This explains why he is in a small jam with Mussolini and a nice big one with Hitler. But as the mayor of America's largest city and as the political hero of many people the Little Flower doesn't worry much.

His latest exploit which leaves the nation chuckling is the appointment of three special police officers to guard against possible disturbances around the German consulate in New York. Today while Goering, Goebbels and Adolf are cursing the Semitic race three of the race protect their commercial agent in New York and the world has a good chuckle, with Fiorello joining in on the chorus.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—David Sarnoff, head of the Radio Corporation of America and peer of the realm in his field, came to Washington to exchange blows with the government in the monopoly investigation, and in his first dozen sentences dropped a hint of horrors to come for unhandsome politicians.

Said Sarnoff—Television is just around the corner.

Now such a warning coming from Sarnoff is not to be biffed aside like a fly on the butter. He is on the inside track. His statement puts solidly behind all the rumors and reports of television heard heretofore.

And when it comes, what will happen to our bustle-faced politicians who have depended on their superior logic, wise cracks and stentorian voices to overcome the fact that their noggins don't look well in print?

New Major Consideration

It may sound silly, but to us it seems a better than fair bet that by 1940 one of the important considerations for a president will be:

Is he good looking? Does he have a "strong" face?

It is not to be forgotten the part radio has played in the past two elections. Roosevelt, master o' the mike, made Hoover in 1932 sound like a man with his head in a duffle bag. In 1936 Governor Landon tried to remedy his own microphonic defects by studying under a voice tutor during part of the campaign. At times, such was the value of the training, he could repeat a dozen "s" words without hissing one. It couldn't be said that he was defeated because of a hissed "s," but he went down trying not to.

May Become Actor

Come another election, the aspiring candidate may well have to carry along not only a voice expert but a makeup man. He may need a stage director. If he has a nervous habit of tugging at his ear or a lock of hair while he pours his message into the air, he might lose Pennsylvania and Ohio in one swat.

The nearest thing we now have to television is the news reel talkies where the boys with messages for the public are invited to sound off. In the news reels a speaker with a shiny spot peeking out from beneath a misplaced lock is always good for a titter. Moreover, in the talkie versions, the films are edited so that a silly gesture can be cut out.

But in television the product will go directly from producer to consumer without benefit of friendly retouching. If a man has a nervous habit of twitching his nose or a way of saying "peanuts" that looks odd in closeup, he'll be no great help to the party even if he can coin great phrases like "Back to Normalcy" or "The Forgotten Man."

Young Tom Dewey, with a head of black hair, may do splendidly in television unless his crisp mustache touches the national funnybone. So far as we know, his adams apple doesn't duck up and down around his collar button. From a sartorial standpoint, Republicans might "do well with Dewey."

Democratic Possibilities

Solicitor General Robert Jackson is a handsome enough Democratic prospect, with a good head of hair and clean cut features. Secretary Wallace of Agriculture might go well with the farming help, as his forelock is forever dropping across his brow in a manner suggesting homely Will Rogers.

After all, these things are taken seriously by party figures who remember "the Voice" that swelled the totals in the two past campaigns. A noble mien may help in 1940. Great as was Lincoln, no telling what might have happened had television put his homely face before a jibing public in 1860.

Truly it would be terrible for either party next time to be defeated by a margin of buck teeth and a receding chin.

BATHHOUSE JOHN

By BRUCE CATTON

It was somehow surprising to read of the death the other day of Chicago's famous alderman, "Bathhouse John" Coughlin. The man belonged to another era; he was a set piece from the day of the muckrakers, and it was hard to realize that he had survived into these post-depression times.

Alderman Coughlin was a picturesque figure—a canny, dapper, jovial person with a flair for writing verse and a marvelous sense of political realism. And although it was this picturesqueness of his which made him famous, he was a significant figure in American politics—a man whose career is deeply instructive for all students of the ins and outs of democracy.

The ward boss is a familiar creature in our municipal life, and Coughlin was typical of the breed. In alliance with the equally famous "Hinky Dink" Kenna, he ruled the first ward of Chicago for decades, delivering its votes with monotonous regularity and battening on the time-honored mainstays of privilege, protection and perquisites. Naturally enough, he was execrated by the good people who are pained by civic corruption and misrule; yet somehow he held his place to the end, and the periodic waves of reform never unseated him.

For the reformers seldom understand the Bathhouse Johns and the Hinky Dinks. Usually they look on such men as the causes of corrupt government, whereas in reality they are the symptoms of it. And it is that little fact which makes the career of a man like Coughlin worth study.

The ward boss doesn't exist in a vacuum. Like all other social institutions, he arises because he is needed. He is the product of forces which our social organization sets in motion, and the only way to end the kind of government he represents is to change those forces.

If we have wide slum areas, great masses of people who live forever on the knife edge of utter insecurity, a city government which has at its disposal favors that will mean millions to the recipients, powerful interests which insist that that government do nothing to disturb them—if we have all of those things, as we have in most cities, then we have the ingredients of bad government.

The bad government which results may operate through such men as Bathhouse John; but such men are not the prime movers. Chicago's government will be no better, now that this particular boss is dead. The conditions which produced him have not changed.

Through public education, through the evolution of a more just social system, through the raising of our standards of civic morality—in such ways we may eventually attain honest, efficient and impartial civic government. Until that day comes, we shall just have to put up with our ward bosses.

I had to ask Gable to leave Lombard at home when he came to look at his car.—Howard Darrin, custom auto builder in Hollywood, explaining that his men would do no work while Carole Lombard was in the factory.

The bear was sitting in a rocking chair in front of the stove rubbing its elbow with liniment.—Charles Hubert, Bangor, Me., describing a most intelligent bear that escaped from a trap and invaded a cabin.

I don't feel bad, but I felt I ought to see if there is anything the matter with me.—Mrs. Annie Durganian, when she reported at the Cook County hospital at the age of 112 for a physical check-up.

My!—Mrs. Elizabeth House, president, Oklahoma W. C. T. U., when four youths staggered down the aisle at the society's annual convention in Oklahoma City.

Human Side Of The News

By EDWIN C. HILL

(Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The Knights of the White Camelia is something new in our already large and diversified fall line of cuckoo salvationists. There is a current story that when Gracie Allen went into a room where there was cuckoo clock on the wall, the cuckoo popped out and dived out of the window, screaming, "This room isn't big enough for both of us." We may soon observe in America vast migratory flights of cuckoos, if things keep on as they are.

The Cameliaistas, as they probably will be called when they mount the barricades, were turned up by the Dies committee. They have stocked a complete line of anti-Semitism, totalitarianism, and hard-boiled arrogance—all staple goods in this field of merchandising—and are whooping up their brand of high-proof, jig-saw corn juice all over the country, according to evidence heard by the committee.

They and their allies, such as the fantastic "Silver Shirts," assail democracy, foment hatred and fan up racial and religious bigotry, with preposterous voodoo incantations, all on the lower swamp levels of the national intelligence quotient. We don't see them, but if we listen carefully we can hear the beat of their jungle drums.

The original Ku Klux Klan of the reconstruction years and its revival in the post-war epoch have provided us with a helpful clinical case history for a study of the above and many similar aberrations. They are all of a piece—Ku Klux and its later spawn. Basically, they have these elements in common: 1—They effectively organize ignorance. 2—They quickly become a business and acquire a shrewd commercial motivation. 3—They recruit venal politicians and acquire political power. 4—They rise in times of emotional tension and they employ romantic, juvenile and symbolic nonsense all in exactly the same manner—as did the German Nazis in their historic atavistic backslide into the ancient huggermuggery of the gods of the mountain.

Any student of this vestigial squirrelogoly will note that most of its early devotees have swamp moss in their hair. Just plain boredom accounts for many potentially decent and sensible men getting mixed up in this kind of foolishness. You sit around for a few years swatting flies in the remote environs of some dreary whistle stop. You are fed up with the mail order catalogue, and the whistle of the 3:15 isn't quite the diurnal excitement it used to be. Life is just a snooze and a yawn.

Along comes an outfit with klaverns, kleagles, hooded robes, nightshirts or what not, blood-oaths, midnight rituals, and above all, three or four made-to-order goats—Gabardine swine into which you may drive all the devils of debt, failure and frustration which have been pitchforking you all these years. (Incidentally, the last should have been No. 5 in the above summary of least common denominators, or possibly No. 1. Picking a proscribed group to be hated and persecuted is the first rule of procedure, if you want to set up a new squirrel-cage and get your cut on membership fees.) All the above being true, you join up with a whoop.

Immunities against these germ-carriers of hatred and bigotry are a good job, two or three decent suits of clothes, at least the rudiments of a sound education, a trip to the movies once in a while, with the missus and the kids, a bone buried somewhere, even if it's only a small insurance policy or bank account, and, above all, some leisure concerns and interests which validate you as a human being and an individual.

Real individuality is as insoluble as a chunk of slag in this flux of hate and stupidity. It gets only the congenital "mass man."

Several weeks ago, in an account of "an expedition into the jungles of youth," this department remarked that perhaps the blocking of the normal channels of adulthood, jobs, responsibility and marriage, were making youth turn back to patterns of juvenile behavior.

A friend of mine, a well-known New York physician, who also is a leading psychiatrist, backs me up in this and gives the suggestion a much wider application than I had intended. He says this accounts for much of Silver Shirt and White Camelia dementia. With the world economic breakdown, as the doctor sees it, the oncoming generation is having the devil's own time growing up. Growing up is important. We may go to the scriptures for confirmation of this. "When I became a man I put away childish things," wrote St. Paul.

And so may we all, if we can achieve a wholesome renovation of our entire house of democracy.

Italian East Africa—New Name on Maps

No longer are Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and Italian Ethiopia to be found separately on world maps; the three territories have been combined as one to be known henceforth as Italian East Africa.

Together they comprise an area of 590,000 square miles, stretching from the torrid shores of the Indian Ocean to Ethiopia's towering mountains. The lands are relatively unsettled as yet except for the native populations.

Eritrea consists of about 45,000 square miles, and has a population of more than 600,000. Its capital is Asmara. Here Italy's colonial venture in Africa began in 1870 when the port of Assab, in the extreme southern part of Eritrea, was purchased. Eritrea stretches for 670 miles along the African coast of the Red Sea.

Italian Somaliland, with an area of 194,000 square miles and a population of roughly 1,000,000, extends along the Indian Ocean from the Gulf of Aden to the Juba river. The coastline is 1100 miles long. Its chief products are oil, gum, hides, kapok and ivory and it is the source of half the world's supply of incense.

Ethiopia, 350,000 square miles in area, is the most densely populated of the three sections. It has nearly 8,000,000 inhabitants. As far back as 1889 Italy had tried to establish a protectorate over Ethiopia, but was upset by King Menelik, who with an army of 80,000 annihilated a force of 12,000 Italians at the battle of Adowa.

The new Italian territory now has its own postage stamps, one of which is shown above, an airmail issue.

During 1936, transatlantic steamships entering and departing New York City carried 151,397 first class and cabin passengers. The airlines' combined totals for 1937, operating in and out of New York City, transported 303,891 passengers.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

"Frankie, now remember. I want you to stay in your own yard. Don't go outside it."

"If you promise to stay in front of your own house, and not go off the block, you can. But remember, you stay where I can see you."

"Yes'm."

Frankie was willing to promise anything if it meant he was free to ride on the sidewalk. People passed along the walk and he could say, "Hello" to them and they could smile down at him and say, "Hello" back. That meant a great deal to Frankie who was desolate without human companionship.

Then, of course, Jimmy and Paul came out, and they had their wheels. "Hi, Frankie. Come on over." Frankie's wheels threw out sparks in their speed to get there. The three velocipedes made a fine train, too fine and speedy a train, and much too big, to stay on one little block. Quite without thought it made its way down the long avenue, two blocks, ten blocks, before it reached the station—the traffic light at the head of Main street. Here the train was headed back toward the home depot.

Mother looked out after a time, to make sure that Frankie was in front of the house. He wasn't in sight. The street was bare of children for blocks. She hurried down to Jimmy's house. No, Jimmy wasn't home. Probably out with Paul and Frankie, his mother said calmly. The same word at Paul's house. No, he wasn't about. Maybe down street with the other two. Mother was not only worried now, she was provoked to wrath by the coolness of the other two mothers. If they didn't care where their children were, she did, and she would see to it that Frankie stayed where she could see him if it was the last thing she did on earth. But she couldn't find Frankie.

No, the officer at the traffic light had not seen any children cross his street and he would certainly have seen them had they tried to do so. O, now that he thought of it, three kids on velocipedes had stopped on the other side of the street and had gone up Hamilton street. Could they be the ones she wanted?

Up Hamilton street went mother, anger lending speed to her heels. You see, Hamilton street paralleled her own street, and the train had decided to go around and make a circular track of it. But the time mother had arrived on her own block she got word that the train had just left the station. When Frankie got home, late for lunch, he was spanked. And his velocipede was put in the cellar for one solid week.

A child of five needs playfellows. If you are afraid of his going out of sight of home, don't give him a velocipede; or if you do, don't let him out without escort. Riding under escort is not exactly a five-year-old's idea of fun. If the neighborhood is safe, let him go along with his crowd. If not, don't provide the means for his own hurt. But above all, remember that the nature of a small boy is to seek the companionship of other little boys and provide for it. Mothers of such a group have to cooperate to insure their happiness and safety.

Mr. Patri has prepared a special booklet (No. 301) entitled, "Obedience," in which he tells parents how to cope with the difficult problems of disobedience. Send for it, enclosing ten cents. BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

(Rodney Dutcher is dead—of a heart attack which occurred in his office. A veteran capital correspondent at 37, he had been chief of the NEA Service Washington bureau since 1928. Mr. Dutcher had been a newspaper man since 16, when he started working in Worcester, Mass. Later he became associated with the United Press, when that organization started a night feature wire service. At Washington, he directed NEA's bureau during the terms of three presidents, and covered every important capital story during the last 10 years. His was the most widely published of all Washington columns. (This column was written a few hours before his death.)

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—Some of the 1938 lame ducks in congress have discovered it's just as important to play to the folks back home as to the national gallery.

More often than not defeated members of congress find their mistake was to become too engrossed in big-time affairs without keeping in touch with constituents. That's one reason the mortality rate among national figures is likely to be relatively high in a congressional election, while inconspicuous fellows never heard of outside Washington and their own bailiwicks continue to roost comfortably because they know enough to keep one ear tuned to constituents.

Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, who was leader of the house liberal bloc, is a good example of a man who became a "statesman" too rapidly and overestimated his political security in his San Antonio district.

Maverick was elected four years ago and turned out to be a hard-fighting leader. He came from an old American family and his progressivism wasn't tinged with the Minnesota and Wisconsin brands of "radicalism." He was just what the assortment of 50 or more house liberals had been looking for and they flocked behind him.

Forgot Fences

After that Maverick became a national figure, leaped into the fray on one national issue after another, made speeches over the country, wrote a book and was lionized by New Dealers in Washington.

Maverick got plenty of federal money for his district, but overestimated his personal strength there. He went home last summer confident of renomination in the primaries, unaware that his fences were in disrepair.

The middle-class voters of San Antonio had decided Maverick was too radical, especially because he had become friendly with John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. That was what beat him in the primary and it was an especially sad lesson because his opponent's margin was only 485 votes. With a margin as small as that against him, it seemed obvious that a little more attention to the constituents would have saved his skin.

Maverick wasn't the only candidate to learn such a lesson.

But he is now going out to build up his own fences, hoping to knock down those of his political foes by running for mayor of San Antonio next May. The city is practically equivalent to Maverick's congressional district. Customarily the mayor decides who the congressman will be. Although Maverick beat the city machine in 1934 and 1936, it organized against him this year and licked him. Maverick hasn't anything to do except be in San Antonio between now and May, when the voters will tell him whether he has been able to wheedle them back by running as a home town boy for a home town job. If elected he probably will decide Maverick should be San Antonio's next congressman.

It's Still Frankfurter

Dr. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard law school continues to be the leading candidate for the supreme court and odds are five to one or so that President Roosevelt will appoint him to the vacancy left by Justice Cardozo's death. Although some prominent Jews have sent word that the appointment might stir up smoldering anti-Semitism in the country, the Nazi persecutions have hardened Roosevelt's intention.

It's also felt at the White House that Roosevelt will have one or two other supreme court appointments to make during his present term and that the next new justice after Frankfurter is likely to be Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan, who meanwhile is expected to be placed in a cabinet job or equally important post.

In his prospective appointments Roosevelt thus far shows no sign of leaning toward conservatism.

HE STARRED AT CENTER, TOO

Bob Kellogg, the former Northeast Center of L. S. U. halfback, who entered Tulane this year, proved more than the Louisiana State university Tigers could handle yesterday as he sparked the Green Wave to a 14 to 0 victory over the Bayou Bengals in their traditional renewal of grid rivalry.

Kellogg, who figured prominently in the Wave's first touchdown drive, and personally scored the second after one of his passes had put the ball in scoring position, was living up to predictions of his former Northeast Center coach, James L. Malone, who last fall predicted a bright future for the diminutive halfback on some "big league" aggregation despite his size.

During his two seasons here, Kellogg turned in some impressive performances and last year led the Northeast Center Tribesmen through an undefeated season. In 1937, his last season with the Tribe, the flashy little halfback was the leading scorer of the nation and his parade of touchdowns put the Indians among the high scoring teams of the nation.

the ball over on a neat run wide around his left end. Kellogg converted.

Shortly after the second half began, Kellogg shot a beautiful pass on fourth down to Paul Krueger, Tulane substitute quarterback, for a first down on the L. S. U. six. Kellogg scampered through right tackle for a touchdown on the next play and then stepped back to convert the extra point.

The Tigers got the ball on a fumble early in the first quarter and made their only real threat of the game. A short spot pass from Stell to Guy (Cotton) Milner shoved L. S. U. to Tulane's 25-yard line, but Stell fumbled and Ray Miller, Tulane tackle, recovered for the Greenies.

L. S. U. opened up a spectacular aerial game in the final period in a futile attempt to score, although several sensational passes were completed.

FLORIDA CLAIMS HEADLINES WITH WIN OVER AUBURN

'Gators' Victory Overshadows Georgia's Upset Tie Against Tech

ATLANTA, Nov. 26—(AP)—Florida's fighting footballers snatched the headlines from a flock of traditional skirmishes along the Southeastern conference gridiron front today by trimming highly-favored Auburn, 9-7.

This great climax to the Gainesville 'Gators' late-season comeback overshadowed Georgia's upset scoreless tie against Georgia Tech, Tulane's stormy 14-0 march through Louisiana State and Mississippi's hard-earned 19-6 verdict over Mississippi State.

Florida's feat was doubly sweet to the orange staters because, after building pre-season hopes sky-high, the 'Gators took licking after licking, including a couple from small intrastate rivals. They started out of the wilderness two weeks ago by trimming Maryland, kept going in a scoreless deadlock with Georgia Tech last week and capped it off with today's bang-up victory.

Georgia Tech rolled up more than 240 yards against Georgia but the Bulldogs wouldn't budge with their backs to the goal and gained a richly deserved "moral victory" before about 25,000 customers at Athens. Beers and Bartlett sparked three drives that carried inside the Georgia ten but all fizzled in the face of a courageous defense, one only a yard from the double line.

About 40,000 fans saw a football game and a free-for-all at Baton Rouge when tempers snapped in this heated rivalry in the fourth quarter after Tulane had run up a 14-0 lead. Three players were ejected and athletes and spectators all joined in before the coaching staff and police stopped the bout. Kellogg and Cassibry were the big guns for Green Wave in the football end of the business.

Ole Miss had to come from behind to gain its expected victory but Parker Hall and company proved equal to the occasion.

The day's firing almost wound up the season for the conference. The Tennessee-Ole Miss date at Memphis Saturday is the only inter-conference test left. Florida meets Temple Saturday, Georgia plays Miami there Friday night and Georgia Tech will go west to play California December 26 if that team doesn't get the Rose Bowl bid.

WOMAN TENNIS STAR TO SING FOR LIVING

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Alice Marble gave out the news today that she'd blossom out next week as a night club singer and that, said she, makes her the first women's tennis champion to become a professional singer.

But she isn't going to let her singing interfere with her court career.

The United States Lawn Tennis association, it seems, has bestowed its blessing on her vocal ambitions, and she still has her eye on Wimbledon and Forest Hills next year.

Alice says she's taking up singing because you've got to earn a living.

DUKE'S RECORD

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 26—(AP)—Duke university's mighty Blue Devils, by beating Pitt's Panthers, 7 to 0, today, completed a nine-game schedule, which included three intersectional opponents, without having their goal line crossed.

Unbeaten, untied, unscored-on—that's the Duke record for 1938, and here are the teams and the scores by which they were defeated:

Duke 18, Virginia Tech 0.
Duke 27, Davidson 0.
Duke 7, Colgate 0.
Duke 6, Georgia Tech 0.
Duke 7, Wake Forest 0.
Duke 14, North Carolina 0.
Duke 21, Syracuse 0.
Duke 7, North Carolina State 0.
Duke 7, Pittsburgh 0.

The total points they rolled up against their opponents in the nine victories was only 114.

Not since 1932 has a major team gone through a nine-game schedule without being scored on. Colgate did it that year.

end zone today, grabbed it on the bounce and scored the touchdown that defeated mighty Pitt for the Blue Devils, 7 to 0, and ended the most remarkable season in the history of Duke football.

The fourth-quarter touchdown was enough to send the 52,000 spectators into joy and maintain the Blue Devils' position as the nation's only major undefeated, untied, unscored-on eleven.

But if Perdue's touchdown won the game, the trusty right foot of Eric Tipton saved it. The senior tailback on Wallace Wade's 20th and greatest eleven kept the Blue Devils in and the Panthers out of the ball game with 20 punts that averaged 39.4 yards from scrimmage and which held the weary Pittsburgh backs pinned in their own territory in the last quarter.

By then Jock Sutherland's eleven, which played through with only six substitutions, was dog-tired. Twice in the first half it had bid terrifically hard for touchdowns, with the great Marshall Goldberg leading the attacks with reckless and brilliant running and deadly blocking.

The solid, seaworthy Duke line halted the first savage charge on the 10 and the second failed when Larry Peace, replacement for the injured Goldberg, fumbled on the 19.

Goldberg was the spearhead of each drive. The first time he made first downs on the Pitt 31 and 46, pounded out two more on the Duke 39 and 24 and then smashed out the last on the 10. But the Duke forwards stopped Dick Cassiano cold on two reverses,

REBEL PASSES TOO MUCH FOR MAROON ELEVEN

Mississippi Beats State College, 19 To 6, To Regain 'Golden Egg'

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Ole Miss Rebels took to the air today to give the Mississippi State college Maroons a 19-6 lacing before 15,000 fans and win back the "Golden Egg" symbol of their 36-year football rivalry.

The Maroons, the underdogs, took the lead early in the second period, when Jack Nix intercepted Parker Hall's pass on the 13-yard line and raced 87 yards for State's touchdown.

A few minutes later Sonny Bruce took Hall's punt on the 10 and raced 66 yards before he was pulled down on the Ole Miss 24. The Rebels, getting the ball on the 20, where Bill Schneller nabbed Bruce's pass, took to the air for an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, climaxed by Hall's one-foot end run for the score. Massengale added the extra point from placement.

In the third period Ole Miss took the ball on its 28 after a punt exchange and uncorked another passing attack. From the nine-yard line, Hall tossed to Schneller for the marker.

The Maroons, battling gamely, came back down the field only to lose the ball on a pass interception. They held the Rebels, took the kick on the 40 and staged another good drive, but failed to muster scoring punch.

The University of Mississippi clinched victory in the final period, when Hall passed to Bisbing on the 27 for a touchdown set-up. Hall ran to the four and John Lehnhardt, substitute fullback, rammed through tackle for the tally. Hall's kicks were wide in tries for extra points after the second and third touchdowns.

Fumbles put State college in the hole several times. Line plays were tight. The Maroon forwards, concentrating on stopping the Ole Miss running attack, kept Hall bottled up on the ground except for a 31-yard run in the second period.

Bids Of Claimants, Including Ouachita, To Be Considered Today

Bids for the north Louisiana district Class AA football championship playoff by Ouachita Parish High school of Monroe, Haynesville's Golden Tornado and the Yellow Jackets of Byrd High school of Shreveport, the latter the defending champions, will be considered this afternoon at a meeting of the district Class AA committee at 1:30 o'clock in the office of the Webster parish school board at Minden.

Plans for the playoff, the first game of which is expected to be played next Friday, will also be completed at the meeting.

Jack Hayes, principal of Ouachita Parish High school; Grover C. Koffman, principal of Byrd High school; and L. W. Ferguson, principal of Haynesville High school, will represent their schools at the meeting.

The final standing of the Class AA teams of this district at the close of their regular schedule is:

Teams	Won	Lost	Pct.
Ouachita	3	1	.750
Haynesville	3	1	.750
Byrd	3	1	.750
Vivian	1	3	.250
Fair Park	0	4	.000

Ouachita and Byrd, although each were tied by Fair Park's Indians of Shreveport, claimed victory over the hapless Tribesmen on first downs. And, although Fair Park has failed to win a conference game, the Indians have played a brand of ball all season that should rate them one of the best teams in the league and especially as the conference's best defensive aggregation.

The conference records of the seasons for the claimants to places in the title playoff are:

Ouachita: Beat Haynesville, 26 to 0, and Vivian, 27 to 0; lost to Byrd, 20 to 6; and tied by Fair Park, 0 to 0. (Ouachita claimed victory over Fair Park on first downs, 11 to 8).

Haynesville: Beat Fair Park, 13 to 0; Vivian 25 to 0; and Byrd, 25 to 6, but lost to Ouachita.

Byrd: Beat Ouachita, 20 to 6, and Vivian, 13 to 0; lost to Haynesville, and tied Fair Park, 7 to 7. (Byrd claimed Fair Park game on first downs, 8 to 7.)

The winner of the north Louisiana title will have a chance at the state title against some south Louisiana team. The winner of the New Orleans district double A title will meet the winner of the three-way playoff between Lake Charles, Istrouma and Baton Rouge High schools for the south Louisiana crown and the right to meet the north Louisiana champs in the state championship game.

THREE TEAMS IN PLAYOFF

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lake Charles, Istrouma and Baton Rouge high schools will participate in the district AA playoff to determine the district champion, it was decided today by the district committee of the Louisiana High School association which met here.

The three-cornered playoff was brought about after Catholic High, whose claim to the title was also recognized, had withdrawn because of excessive football in the last two seasons, when the team has been in playoffs. The Golden Bears withdrew "for the physical well-being" of the players.

Lake Charles with three wins, one loss and a tie, drew a bye and will meet the winner of the Baton Rouge-Istrouma game for the district championship.

Baton Rouge and Istrouma will play the first game of the playoff Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the L. S. U. stadium. The winner of that game will play Lake Charles at a place and time to be determined later.

The committee handling the claims today was composed of P. E. Wilson of Jennings, A. M. Boyette of Vinton, president of the high school association, and P. C. Rogers, executive secretary of the teachers' retirement fund. The group acted in the place of the regular committee, two members of which were unable to attend.

Tallulah, Jonesboro, Minden In Class A Title Playoff

Trojans And Tigers To Clash In First Game Of Series Friday

TALLULAH, Jonesboro and Minden will fight it out for the north Louisiana Class A football championship with the Trojans of Tallulah and the Jonesboro Tigers clashing in the first game of the title series next Friday night at Jonesboro, it was announced following a meeting of the district Class A committee at Ruston.

Minden's Tide, drawing a bye, will meet the winner of the Jonesboro-Tallulah battle for the district championship vacated by the Homer Pelicans, who were eliminated from a chance to defend the title when beaten by Ruston on first downs and stopped by Minden, 32 to 6.

Coach M. A. Phillips' Trojans clinched a place in the playoff Thursday when they defeated the Rayville Hornets, 26 to 0.

The Jonesboro Tigers, experiencing one of their best seasons in years under the direction of Coach C. E. "Sonny" Maroney, formerly of Monroe, defeated the Ruston Bearcats, 19 to 0, Thursday night to claim their place in the playoff.

Jonesboro, Tallulah and Minden have been undefeated and untied in Class A competition this season.

Season records for the three title contenders are:

Tallulah: Defeated Farmerville, 27 to 0; Newellton, 7 to 6; Ouachita of Monroe, 6 to 0; Lake Providence, 14 to 7; Delhi, 39 to 7; Winnsboro, 48 to 0; Mangham, 20 to 6; and Rayville, 26 to 0. Lost to the American Foundation school of Mexico City, 7 to 2, and Waterproof (Class B), 7 to 0.

Jonesboro: Defeated St. John's of Shreveport, 47 to 6; Farmerville, 54 to 0; Bossier City, 27 to 6; Rayville, 47 to 0; Winnfield, 46 to 0; Arcadia, 38 to 0; Mansfield, 32 to 7; Homer, 21 to 7; and Ruston, 19 to 0.

Minden: Defeated Springhill, 30 to 0; Texarkana, Ark., 33 to 6; Winnfield, 54 to 0; Mansfield, 13 to 6; Choudrant, 49 to 13; Vivian, 45 to 0; Bossier City, 45 to 0; Homer, 32 to 6; Cotton Valley, 47 to 13; and lost to Haynesville (Class AA) 7 to 6.

Members of the district committee attending the meeting at Ruston were Chairman Robinson, principal of Homer High school; W. B. Glover, principal of Winnsboro High school; H. S. Hargis, principal of Rayville High school; and W. D. Walker, principal of Winnfield High school.

The Jonesboro-Tallulah game will begin at 7:45 p.m. Friday. The time and place of the game involving Minden will be decided after the Trojan-Tiger battle.

STANFORD UPSETS DARTMOUTH TEAM BY 23 TO 13 SCORE

Defeated Six Times, Indians Were Expected To Take Another Licking

By Russel J. Newland

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 26—(AP)—Stanford's Indians, defeated six times and expected to take another licking, provided a startling climax to an otherwise dull football season today with a 23 to 13 victory over Dartmouth.

Stanford in the last quarter turned an evenly fought encounter into a rout to win the third game in the intersectional series.

An intercepted pass, late in the opening pediod, paved the way for the first Stanford touchdown.

From the Dartmouth 40, Fullback Paulman shot a pass to Left Halfback Pete Fay, who lateralled to Byron West, sub right tackle, who lumbered along the sidelines 20 yards for the score.

Midway in the second quarter, Dartmouth's Hutchinson bumped through center for the last two yards to climax a 66-yard advance, completed almost entirely by Right Halfback MacLeod, outstanding ball-carrier of the day.

Shortly after the third period opened, MacLeod fumbled and Harlan Pool, Stanford right guard, recovered on Dartmouth's 29. Two passes netted 25 yards and Quarterback Norman Standlee charged through center for the second score.

Dartmouth came back to score when MacLeod caught a pass from Hutchinson and ran 55 yards. Hutchinson's point kick was good.

In the final quarter, the Dartmouth line crumbled as the Californians put together 14 grounds plays and three passes for 70 yards. Paulman went over finally from the one-foot line.

A safety contributed the last two points.

FORDHAM TRAMPLES NEW YORK U., 25-0

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The once-beaten Fordham Rams kept alive their bowl hopes by pile driving the New York university Violets, 25 to 0, in their final game today before 50,000 frost-bitten spectators in Yankee stadium. They made the annual "battle of the Bronx" one-sided.

Wearing basketball sneakers for half the game to afford better footing on the icy grass, Fordham's plunging backs struck swiftly for two touchdowns in the opening quarter and finished with a couple more in the fourth.

American motorists are literally sitting on top of a $300,000,000 power-generating business which is annually producing one-sixth as much electricity as the 113,602,000-kilowatt output of all the nation's turbines.

DUKE AND T. C. U. FINISH SEASON WITHOUT DEFEAT

Blue Devils Likely Candidates For Invitation To Rose Bowl

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP)—Duke's Blue Devils, the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian university and the gray-clad Cadets of the United States military academy survived the last big Saturday of the 1938 football season and marched to greater gridiron fame today.

Duke completed an undefeated, untied and unscored-on season with a rather surprising 7-0 conquest of Pittsburgh, before a southern record crowd of 52,000. T. C. U. finished a perfect season in the tough Southwest conference by routing Souther Methodist, its only challenger for the conference title, 29 to 7.

The season's largest football crowd, 102,000 in the Philadelphia municipal stadium, saw Army whip Navy 14 to 7 in the 39th game of the service rivalry.

The Cadets staged a remarkable comeback to score their winning touchdown on an 81-yard march in the third quarter after Navy had pushed them all over the frozen field to tie the score at 7-7 in the first. A 79-yard runback of a punt by Charles (Huey) Long brought the first Army score.

Dukes Eric Tipton virtually kicked Pitt into defeat with booming punts that set the Panthers back toward their goal line, but it was Willard Perdue who finished the job by making it a perfect season. He blocked a punt and recovered it for the only touchdown that made the Blue Devils likely candidates for an invitation to play in the Rose Bowl New Year's day.

Texas Christian also got in line for a bowl bid, probably the Cotton Bowl, by overpowering S. M. U. Connie Sparks blasted the Mustang line and

WOMAN TENNIS STAR TO SING FOR LIVING

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Alice Marble gave out the news today that she'd blossom out next week as a night club singer and that, said she, makes her the first women's tennis champion to become a professional singer.

But she isn't going to let her singing interfere with her court career.

The United States Lawn Tennis association, it seems, has bestowed its blessing on her vocal ambitions, and she still has her eye on Wimbledon and Forest Hills next year.

Alice says she's taking up singing because you've got to earn a living.

Led by Captain Bill Cason, sensational middleweight from Savannah, Ga., the Tiger pugilists have been working out the last month. The team includes Harvey Ferguson, Southern conference light heavyweight champion.

DUKE'S RECORD

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Duke university's mighty Blue Devils, by beating Pitt's Panthers, 7 to 0, today, completed a nine-game schedule, which included three intersectional opponents, without having their goal line crossed.

Unbeaten, untied, unscored-on—that's the Duke record for 1938, and here are the teams and the scores by which they were defeated:

Duke 18, Virginia Tech 0.
Duke 27, Davidson 0.
Duke 7, Colgate 0.
Duke 6, Georgia Tech 0.
Duke 7, Wake Forest 0.
Duke 14, North Carolina 0.
Duke 21, Syracuse 0.
Duke 7, North Carolina State 0.
Duke 7, Pittsburgh 0.

The total points they rolled up against their opponents in the nine victories was only 114.

Not since 1932 has a major team gone through a nine-game schedule without being scored on. Colgate did it that year.

end zone today, grabbed it on the bounce and scored the touchdown that defeated mighty Pitt for the Blue Devils, 7 to 0, and ended the most remarkable season in the history of Duke football.

The fourth-quarter touchdown was enough to send the 52,000 spectators into joy and maintain the Blue Devils' position as the nation's only major undefeated, untied, unscored-on eleven.

But if Perdue's touchdown won the game, the trusty right foot of Eric Tipton saved it. The senior tailback on Wallace Wade's 20th and greatest eleven kept the Blue Devils in and the Panthers out of the ball game with 20 punts that averaged 39.4 yards from scrimmage and which held the weary Pittsburgh backs pinned in their own territory in the last quarter.

By then Jock Sutherland's eleven, which played through with only six substitutions, was dog-tired. Twice in the first half it had bid terrifically hard for touchdowns, with the great Marshall Goldberg leading the attacks with reckless and brilliant running and deadly blocking.

The solid, seaworthy Duke line halted the first savage charge on the 10 and the second failed when Larry Peace, replacement for the injured Goldberg, fumbled on the 19.

Goldberg was the spearhead of each drive. The first time he made first downs on the Pitt 31 and 46, pounded out two more on the Duke 39 and 24 and then smashed out the last on the 10. But the Duke forwards stopped Dick Cassiano cold on two reverses,

North Louisiana Class AA Playoff Plans To Be Made

Bids Of Claimants, Including Ouachita, To Be Considered Today

Bids for the north Louisiana district Class AA football championship playoff by Ouachita Parish High school of Monroe, Haynesville's Golden Tornado and the Yellow Jackets of Byrd High school of Shreveport, the latter the defending champions, will be considered this afternoon at a meeting of the district Class AA committee at 1:30 o'clock in the office of the Webster parish school board at Minden.

Plans for the playoff, the first game of which is expected to be played next Friday, will also be completed at the meeting.

Jack Hayes, principal of Ouachita Parish High school; Grover C. Koffman, principal of Byrd High school; and L. W. Ferguson, principal of Haynesville High school, will represent their schools at the meeting.

The final standing of the Class AA teams of this district at the close of their regular schedule is:

Teams	Won	Lost	Pct.
Ouachita	3	1	.750
Haynesville	3	1	.750
Byrd	3	1	.750
Vivian	1	3	.250
Fair Park	0	4	.000

Ouachita and Byrd, although each were tied by Fair Park's Indians of Shreveport, claimed victory over the hapless Tribesmen on first downs. And, although Fair Park has failed to win a conference game, the Indians have played a brand of ball all season that should rate them one of the best teams in the league and especially as the conference's best defensive aggregation.

The conference records of the seasons for the claimants to places in the title playoff are:

Ouachita: Beat Haynesville, 26 to 0, and Vivian, 27 to 0; lost to Byrd, 20 to 6; and tied by Fair Park, 0 to 0. (Ouachita claimed victory over Fair Park on first downs, 11 to 8).

Haynesville: Beat Fair Park, 13 to 0; Vivian 25 to 0; and Byrd, 25 to 6, but lost to Ouachita.

Byrd: Beat Ouachita, 20 to 6, and Vivian, 13 to 0; lost to Haynesville, and tied Fair Park, 7 to 7. (Byrd claimed Fair Park game on first downs, 8 to 7.)

The winner of the north Louisiana title will have a chance at the state title against some south Louisiana team. The winner of the New Orleans district double A title will meet the winner of the three-way playoff between Lake Charles, Istrouma and Baton Rouge High schools for the south Louisiana crown and the right to meet the north Louisiana champs in the state championship game.

THREE TEAMS IN PLAYOFF

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lake Charles, Istrouma and Baton Rouge high schools will participate in the district AA playoff to determine the district champion, it was decided today by the district committee of the Louisiana High School association which met here.

The three-cornered playoff was brought about after Catholic High, whose claim to the title was also recognized, had withdrawn because of excessive football in the last two seasons, when the team has been in playoffs. The Golden Bears withdrew "for the physical well-being" of the players.

Lake Charles with three wins, one loss and a tie, drew a bye and will meet the winner of the Baton Rouge-Istrouma game for the district championship.

Baton Rouge and Istrouma will play the first game of the playoff Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the L. S. U. stadium. The winner of that game will play Lake Charles at a place and time to be determined later.

The committee handling the claims today was composed of P. E. Wilson of Jennings, A. M. Boyette of Vinton, president of the high school association, and P. C. Rogers, executive secretary of the teachers' retirement fund. The group acted in the place of the regular committee, two members of which were unable to attend.

REBEL PASSES TOO MUCH FOR MAROON ELEVEN

Mississippi Beats State College, 19 To 6, To Regain 'Golden Egg'

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Ole Miss Rebels took to the air today to give the Mississippi State college Maroons a 19-6 lacing before 15,000 fans and win back the "Golden Egg" symbol of their 36-year football rivalry.

The Maroons, the underdogs, took the lead early in the second period, when Jack Nix intercepted Parker Hall's pass on the 13-yard line and raced 87 yards for State's touchdown.

A few minutes later Sonny Bruce took Hall's punt on the 10 and raced 66 yards before he was pulled down on the Ole Miss 24. The Rebels, getting the ball on the 20, where Bill Schneller nabbed Bruce's pass, took to the air for an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, climaxed by Hall's one-foot end run for the score. Massengale added the extra point from placement.

In the third period Ole Miss took the ball on its 28 after a punt exchange and uncorked another passing attack. From the nine-yard line, Hall tossed to Schneller for the marker.

The Maroons, battling gamely, came back down the field only to lose the ball on a pass interception. They held the Rebels, took the kick on the 40 and staged another good drive, but failed to muster scoring punch.

The University of Mississippi clinched victory in the final period, when Hall passed to Bisbing on the 27 for a touchdown set-up. Hall ran to the four and John Lehnhardt, substitute fullback, rammed through tackle for the tally. Hall's kicks were wide in tries for extra points after the second and third touchdowns.

Fumbles put State college in the hole several times. Line plays were tight. The Maroon forwards, concentrating on stopping the Ole Miss running attack, kept Hall bottled up on the ground except for a 31-yard run in the second period.

STANFORD UPSETS DARTMOUTH TEAM BY 23 TO 13 SCORE

Defeated Six Times, Indians Were Expected To Take Another Licking

By Russel J. Newland

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Stanford's Indians, defeated six times and expected to take another licking, provided a startling climax to an otherwise dull football season today with a 23 to 13 victory over Dartmouth.

Stanford in the last quarter turned an evenly fought encounter into a rout to win the third game in the intersectional series.

An intercepted pass, late in the opening pediod, paved the way for the first Stanford touchdown.

From the Dartmouth 40, Fullback Paulman shot a pass to Left Halfback Pete Fay, who lateralled to Byron West, sub right tackle, who lumbered along the sidelines 20 yards for the score.

Midway in the second quarter, Dartmouth's Hutchinson bumped through center for the last two yards to climax a 66-yard advance, completed almost entirely by Right Halfback MacLeod, outstanding ball-carrier of the day.

Shortly after the third period opened, MacLeod fumbled and Harlan Pool, Stanford right guard, recovered on Dartmouth's 29. Two passes netted 25 yards and Quarterback Norman Standlee charged through center for the second score.

Dartmouth came back to score when MacLeod caught a pass from Hutchinson and ran 55 yards. Hutchinson's point kick was good.

In the final quarter, the Dartmouth line crumbled as the Californians put together 14 grounds plays and three passes for 70 yards. Paulman went over finally from the one-foot line.

A safety contributed the last two points.

FORDHAM TRAMPLES NEW YORK U., 25-0

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The once-beaten Fordham Rams kept alive their bowl hopes by pile driving the New York university Violets, 25 to 0, in their final game today before 50,000 frost-bitten spectators in Yankee stadium. They made the annual "battle of the Bronx" one-sided.

Wearing basketball sneakers for half the game to afford better footing on the icy grass, Fordham's plunging backs struck swiftly for two touchdowns in the opening quarter and finished with a couple more in the fourth.

FLORIDA UPSETS AUBURN BY SCORE OF 9 TO 7

Georgia Battles Georgia Tech To Scoreless Deadlock

SAFETY MARGIN OF VICTORY FOR LOWLY 'GATORS

Often-Defeated Team Strikes With Fury To Turn In Major Upset

By John Wilds

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Florida's football team struck out today with fury stored up through a disappointing season and downed Auburn, 9 to 7, in a major upset.

A blocked punt, converted into a fourth period safety, offset Auburn's superior offensive showing. The Gators held a defensive edge throughout.

The deciding break came late in the game, after Auburn had surged several times into scoring distance. Three times Bo Russell, Auburn's tackle and captain, missed placekicks for field goals.

Bud Walton, the Gators kicking ace, put the Plainsmen deep into their own territory with a lengthy punt. Spec Kelly dropped back to punt with the ball on the 21-yard line. Much Battista knocked down the ball, which bounded into the end zone.

Tom Walker of Auburn knocked it out of the playing field, thereby making a safety and giving Florida the two deciding points.

Auburn jumped to a lead early in the second period when sub Halfback Dick McGowen found a hole at right tackle and sprinted 74 yards for a touchdown.

The Gators came right back with a touchdown that was called back. The officials ruled Walton was less than five yards from the line of scrimmage when he passed to Ted Taylor.

After kicking out of bounds on the Plainsmen four, Walton ran back Kelly's punt 14 yards to the 27. Walton and Tex Hanna carried it to the three. On fourth down with seven to go, Walton dropped back again and flipped to Jack Blalock on the two. Blalock stumbled over and Walton placekicked the tying point.

The Tigers made nine first downs to five for Florida, and led on net yards gained rushing, 197 to 62.

BAYLOR OVERWHELMS RICE ELEVEN, 21 TO 6

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Bullet Bill Patterson and the Baylor Bears passed, kicked and ran the Rice institute Owls ragged, overwhelming them 21 to 6 here today.

It was Patterson's final game for Baylor and his 15th consecutive 60-minute performance.

Patterson and that bearded man who plays end for Baylor, Sam Boyd, had Rice so befuddled in the last quarter that Ernie Lain was passing to Ken Whitlow, Rice center, and twice Rice lost the ball because Whitlow was ineligible to receive passes.

ARMSTRONG OKAY DESPITE TOUGH GARCIA TANGLE

After Few Days' Rest, He'll Be Ready For Manfredo In Cleveland

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Henry Armstrong perched the world welterweight and lightweight crowns cockily on his brow today and sat down to his delayed Thanksgiving turkey, while fight figures wondered whether his fistic monopoly wasn't killing off competition among the little fellows.

The little hammer was none the worse for wear from the artistic 15-round going over he handed Ceferino Garcia Friday night to hang onto the welterweight title. He still had a sore left eye and a sore left thumb, but it was nothing a few days rest wouldn't cure—and he'll be ready to tangle with Al Manfredo for the 147-pound laurels again in Cleveland December 6.

Garcia, on the other hand, was a sore and weary warrior. First off, he decided as soon as he awoke this morning that he'd never campaign among the welterweights again—that hereafter he was a middleweight for keeps. Then he went to a doctor with the hands he injured trying to do something about Henry's driving charges. The left appeared to be hurt quite badly, and it was said the Filipino flailer, who wound up the bruising battle with both eyes cut and his face generally banged up, would be on the shelf for two months.

But where Henry's competition would come from, now that the Garcia challenge had been filed away as finished business, was a question. Mike Jacobs tried to find the answer by announcing the Little Brown Bomber from Los Angeles would defend the 147-pound crown against Lou Ambers either in February or March. Ambers is a lightweight, and was champion among the 135-pounders until he met up with Armstrong in September. After that, he wasn't No. 1 any more.

So lots of the boys couldn't quite get the reason for a welterweight bout between these two natural lightweights. One of the mystifying individuals was the genial Al (Westkit) Weill, who handles the affairs of Ambers.

"We want the lightweight championship back," he said. "So we'll challenge for it when Armstrong's six months are up. (Under New York rules, a champion must defend his title every six months or meet the challenger designated by the athletic commission.)"

But aside from Ambers, who gave Henry more work than any other fighter Homicide Hank has ever faced, neither of the two divisions has much to offer.

DON LASH SEEKS FIFTH TRIUMPH

Distance Runner To Participate In A. A. U. Cross-Country Run

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Don Lash, who chases criminals for a living now, is going east with the definite intention of becoming again the pursued instead of the pursuer.

He laid aside his gun and trim blue Indiana state policeman's uniform yesterday, packed his bag with the familiar spiked running shoes, shorts and racing shirt, and headed for Newark, N. J., where Sunday he will try for his fifth consecutive National Amateur Athletic union cross-country running title.

The race will be Don's first since he joined the state police force after winning recognition as America's best two-mile and cross-country runner as a student at Indiana university.

He said he was in the finest condition of his career. His old coach, E. C. (Billy) Hayes, who still keeps watch over Don and refers to him as "one of my men," said, "He looks to be in fine shape."

Because Don has to take his turn on state police duty, most of his practice has been early in the morning or after dark in the late afternoon.

"My goal is the 1940 Olympics," Lash said. "I want to beat those Finns in the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs and then, win or lose, I'll hang up my shoes after the games a year from this summer."

Finland's entrants ran away and left him in the 1936 games.

If he makes the team, Lash wants the United States Olympic committee to let him go to Europe early so he can put in a month studying crime detection at Scotland Yard before going into four weeks of training with the Finnish runners.

OKLAHOMA PASSES BEAT AGGIES, 19-0

STILLWATER, Okla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Oklahoma's Sooners, unbeaten champions of the Big Six, traveled the air lanes when their ground attack bogged down and whipped the Oklahoma Aggies, 19 to 0, before 9,000 fans here today.

The Sooners took to the air to set the stage for two touchdowns in the second period and added an end zone pass for the final counter in the last quarter.

The Aggies never got as far as the 30-yard line and spent most of the afternoon scratching their backs on their own goal posts.

ARMY TROUNCES NAVY WITH LONG MARCH TO TALLY

Cadets Bounce Off Ropes With Recovered Fumble To Beat Sailors, 14-7

By Paul Mickelson

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Army bounced off the ropes with a recovered fumble and an 81-yard march in the third period today to sweep Navy's fighting football forces into defeat, 14-7, before 102,000 half-frozen fans at Philadelphia Municipal stadium.

The victory, 22nd for the Cadets in a series of 39 contests, was as sudden as it was sweet. Navy had fought back to gain a tie at 7-all and was driving deep in Army territory when one of its great heroes of the game, Emmett Wood of Wilkensburg, Pa., fumbled. Harry Stella, Cadet guard from Kankakee, Ill., recovered. Ten plays later and the Army backs, reinforced by Sydney Martin of Gilmer, Tex., who made 46 yards on the first two plays, rode over the Middie line for the final, winning touchdown.

Behind a line that stiffened suddenly, the Cadet backs slashed the enemy wall and swept the ends almost at will. Long, Art Frontczak of Dowagiac, Mich., and Woodrow Wilson of El Paso, assisting in the winning drive. It was Wilson who lugged it over from the one-foot line, where the last of three catches by Frontczak, good for nine of the 81 yards, missed going through.

Hero for the Cadets in the chill and gloom was Charley Long. It was he who set them off for the first score on the most brilliant run of the wintry, sub-zero day. It was Long who kicked the two extra points and it was Long who kicked several beautiful punts and several times split up the Middie defense with some of the few passes Army attempted. Statistics were all Navy, but the fumble and one Army drive nullified them. Navy piled up 10 first downs to five for Army, gained 138 yards rushing to Army's 99 and gained 73 yards with 25 passes to but seven for the Cadets.

Long's run was as pretty as it was long. Both teams were maneuvering for a break when Lemuel Cooke of Hernando, Miss., Navy's twin hero of the day with Wood, kicked a high one to Long. The boy from Chevy Chase caught it standing still on his 21 and raced to the right sidelines. For an instant he seemed halted by two Navy tacklers who nudged him toward the sidelines but he squirmed out of their reach, whirled and hit for the center of the frozen field. Two Navy tacklers lunged and missed and from the 50-yard line on it was clear sailing for the Army track star in a football uniform. Long's kick for extra point barely skimmed past the right upright.

From that Army score to the end of the second period it was all Navy. The Gobs drove to Army's four and 14-yard lines without getting it over but finally, midway in the second period, capped a 47-yard drive with a touchdown to tie the count.

Wood started the touchdown rally by returning Army's kickoff 12 yards to midfield. Wood, hitting a wavering line on center bucks, drove to the Cadet 36 on three smashes, was thrown for a six-yard loss by Johnny Samuel and then caught a pass on the Army 25. Passes, all tossed by Cooke, completely baffled the Cadets but on the one-yard marker Cooke took the ball himself and hit his right for the score. Wood kicked the goal.

BULLDOGS HOLD YELLOW JACKETS IN CHECK AGAIN

Atlanta Eleven Gains 242 Yards Rushing But Is Unable To Tally

By Kenneth Gregory

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Georgia's Bulldogs battled Georgia Tech to a tie today for the second straight year with the odds overwhelmingly against them.

The score was 0-0. A year ago it was 6 to 6 when Georgia Tech was expected to breeze along. The situation was the same today.

Georgia had only a defense to thwart what looked like a rout in a game that saw Georgia Tech roll up 242 yards rushing to the Bulldogs 26 and 16 first downs against four.

Georgia Tech, without the presence of Head Coach Bill Alexander, who remained in Atlanta at the bedside of his wife, drove three times inside the Georgia 10 yard line, but gambles on a pass and a dropkick, along with a penalty for clipping, killed the golden opportunities.

Cowboy Shaw, a substitute quarterback whose dropkicking had given Tech victories over Auburn and Kentucky was rushed into the fray with less than a minute to play in the second quarter. Tech had penetrated to the 1 1-2 yard line and every one expected him to kick. Instead he tried a pass and the toss was batted down by Billy Mims.

In the fourth period the Yellow Jackets marched from their own 48 to Georgia's 3. Shaw again trotted on to the field. From the 13 yard stripe he attempted a field goal that just failed to get over.

Georgia's Earl Hise then punted from his 20 and Wheby ran it back to his 48. Again Tech rolled up yardage. A deflected Tech pass that hit Halfback Harry Stevens of Georgia and bounded into Wheby's arms, provided a break. Wheby ran 20 yards to the 24 and Bobby Beers cut around end to Georgia's 8.

On Beers' run, Tech was penalized 15 yards for clipping and set back to its 40, ending the threat.

Tech's 'Scrub Team' Still Trying To Lick Centenary

Efforts To Remove Paint Smeared On Buildings Meet With Little Success

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Louisiana Tech's "scrub team" was still trying to lick Centenary this week-end, and they expect no varsity letters to show for their work.

Difficulties continue to confront this "scrub team" of janitors and other Tech employes, who are trying to remove black paint smeared on numerous buildings and other structures at the college here last Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning by some Centenary boys.

One of the clean-up workmen, applying a brush and a recommended kind of paint-remover on the concrete steps of Leche hall, observed that his rubbing efforts "only make the letters stand out better." Though taking his extra work good-naturedly, the brush man remarked that "whoever did this ought to have to get it off."

The Centenary boys daubed the campus as a preliminary to the Tech-Centenary football game in Shreveport Thursday. The paint-smearing is considered to be the worst in Tech's history.

It is understood here that Centenary officials are investigating the painting episode, with a view to expelling the guilty parties.

Wooden structures damaged by the painting invaders can be repainted, it was pointed out, but so far workmen have met with little success in removing the stains from concrete in which the paint has penetrated.

Waterproof And Newellton Clash Friday For Class B Crown

The Waterproof Tigers and the Newellton Bears, rival Tensas parish elevens, will clash Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock for the northeast Louisiana district Class B crown lost by the dethroned Columbia Crimson Tide, which was upset by Ferriday early in the season.

The Tensas Tigers, district champions for three seasons before giving way to Columbia last fall, moved nearer to the top again Thursday by sidetracking the Clarks Lumberjacks, 27 to 6, in the first game of the district playoff at Waterproof.

The Bruins of Newellton are appearing for the first time in the championship series and a hard-fought game is anticipated.

The winner of the Newellton-Waterproof game will meet the Plain Dealing Lions, champions of the northwest Louisiana Class B district, for the north Louisiana championship and the right to meet the south Louisiana champs for the state crown.

The Plain Dealing Lions became northwest district champions Friday afternoon when they trounced the Dubach Plungers, 14 to 6.

OWNER OF NATS MAY TRADE SOME

Clark Griffith Admits Nothing But Is Expected To Barter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Clark Griffith won't admit it, but the early winter word is that the president of the Washington Senators will haul a cargo of baseball trading material to the American league meeting next month.

The only thing the Old Fox will admit outright about baseball is that Walter Johnson was its best pitcher, but these players might figure in winter trading:

Cecil Travis, one of the game's 300-hitting shortstops.

Al Simmons, outfielder who hit 300 last season.

Zeke Bonura, the fence-busting first baseman.

Sammy West, the aging outfielder who can still go get them.

The entire Washington pitching staff with the possible exception of left-handed Joseph Victor Lawrence Krakauskas, the slow-talking Canadian with the fast ball.

Catcher Rick Ferrell, if Washington can get another receiver.

Who won't Griff trade?

In addition to Krakauskas, the Senators would need a staggering offer to transfer the contracts of Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Outfielders George Washington Case and Taft Wright.

The Old Fox thinks the world of Travis, but he realizes he must offer something to get what he wants, and Cecil is his best bait.

Simmons is almost certain to go—he and Griffith waged a heated word battle at the end of the season and they don't fight with Griff and take his pay.

Bonura is a good hitter, but Griffith—since the days of Joe Judge—demands a fancy fielder at the first sack.

EARL OF DERBY'S NAGS WIN MOST IN ENGLAND

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Earl of Derby emerged tonight as England's winning race horse owner of the year as the 1938 flat-racing season came to a close with the Manchester November Handicap, won by G. F. Hartigan's Pappageno 2nd.

Lord Derby won stakes worth $157,956. James Rank was second with $132,926. The winning trainer was Captain Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, who handles the American-owned horses of William Woodward of New York. He trained 44 winners to take stakes worth $227,177. Gordon Richards again topped the jockeys with 206 victories.

MEMPHIS STATE TEACHERS ACCEPT PRUNE BOWL BID

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Coach Allyn McKeen of the undefeated Memphis State Teachers college football team said tonight his squad would play San Jose (Calif.) college in a Prune Bowl contest December 26 for a $4,200 guarantee.

Gil Bishop, San Jose graduate manager, said earlier today the California school, because of limited stadium capacity, could not offer more than $4,000. Memphis Teachers previously had asked $5,000.

McKeen said that by reducing the squad and making other changes "we could get by on $4,200."

FLORIDA UPSETS AUBURN BY SCORE OF 9 TO 7

SAFETY MARGIN OF VICTORY FOR LOWLY 'GATORS

Often-Defeated Team Strikes With Fury To Turn In Major Upset

By John Wilds

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Florida's football team struck out today with fury stored up through a disappointing season and downed Auburn, 9 to 7, in a major upset.

A blocked punt, converted into a fourth period safety, offset Auburn's superior offensive showing. The Gators held a defensive edge throughout.

The deciding break came late in the game, after Auburn had surged several times into scoring distance. Three times Bo Russell, Auburn's tackle and captain, missed placekicks for field goals.

Bud Walton, the Gators kicking ace, put the Plainsmen deep into their own territory with a lengthy punt. Spec Kelly dropped back to punt with the ball on the 21-yard line. Much Battista knocked down the ball, which bounded into the end zone.

Tom Walker of Auburn knocked it out of the playing field, thereby making a safety and giving Florida the two deciding points.

Auburn jumped to a lead early in the second period when sub Halfback Dick McGowen found a hole at right tackle and sprinted 74 yards for a touchdown.

The Gators came right back with a touchdown that was called back. The officials ruled Walton was less than five yards from the line of scrimmage when he passed to Ted Taylor.

After kicking out of bounds on the Plainsmen four, Walton ran back Kelly's punt 18 yards to the 27. Walton and Tex Hanna carried it to the three. On fourth down with seven to go, Walton dropped back again and flipped to Jack Blalock on the two. Blalock stumbled over and Walton placekicked the tying point.

The Tigers made nine first downs to five for Florida, and led on net yards gained rushing, 197 to 62.

BAYLOR OVERWHELMS RICE ELEVEN, 21 TO 6

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Bullet Bill Patterson and the Baylor Bears passed, kicked and ran the Rice institute Owls ragged, overwhelming them 21 to 6 here today.

It was Patterson's final game for Baylor and his 15th consecutive 60-minute performance.

Patterson and that bearded man who plays end for Baylor, Sam Boyd, had Rice so befuddled in the last quarter that Ernie Lain was passing to Ken Whitlow, Rice center, and twice Rice lost the ball because Whitlow was ineligible to receive passes.

ARMSTRONG OKAY DESPITE TOUGH GARCIA TANGLE

After Few Days' Rest, He'll Be Ready For Manfredo In Cleveland

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Henry Armstrong perched the world welterweight and lightweight crowns cockily on his brow today and sat down to his delayed Thanksgiving turkey, while fight figures wondered whether his fistic monopoly wasn't killing off competition among the little fellows.

The little hammer was none the worse for wear from the artistic 15-round going over he handed Ceferino Garcia Friday night to hang onto the welterweight title. He still had a sore left eye and a sore left thumb, but it was nothing a few day's rest wouldn't cure—and he'll be ready to tangle with Al Manfredo for the 147-pound laurels again in Cleveland December 6.

Garcia, on the other hand, was a sore and weary warrior. First off, he decided as soon as he awoke this morning that he'd never campaign among the welterweights again—that hereafter he was a middleweight for keeps. Then he went to a doctor with the hands he injured trying to do something about Henry's driving charges. The left appeared to be hurt quite badly, and it was said the Filipino flailer, who wound up the bruising battle with both eyes cut and his face generally banged up, would be on the shelf for two months.

But where Henry's competition would come from, now that the Garcia challenge had been filed away as finished business, was a question. Mike Jacobs tried to find the answer by announcing the Little Brown Bomber from Los Angeles would defend the 147-pound crown against Lou Ambers either in February or March. Ambers is a lightweight, and was champion among the 135-pounders until he met up with Armstrong in September. After that, he wasn't No. 1 any more.

So lots of the boys couldn't quite get the reason for a welterweight bout between these two natural lightweights. One of the mystifying individuals was the genial Al (Westkit) Weill, who handles the affairs of Ambers.

"We want the lightweight championship back," he said. "So we'll challenge for it when Armstrong's six months are up. (Under New York rules, a champion must defend his title every six months or then meet the challenger designated by the athletic commission.)"

But aside from Ambers, who gave Henry more work than any other fighter Homicide Hank has ever faced, neither of the two divisions has much to offer.

DON LASH SEEKS FIFTH TRIUMPH

Distance Runner To Participate In A. A. U. Cross-Country Run

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Don Lash, who chases criminals for a living now, is going east with the definite intention of becoming again the pursued instead of the pursuer.

He laid aside his gun and trim blue Indiana state policeman's uniform yesterday, packed his bag with the familiar spiked running shoes, shorts and racing shirt, and headed for Newark, N. J., where Sunday he will try for his fifth consecutive National Amateur Athletic union cross-country running title.

The race will be Don's first since he joined the state police force after winning recognition as America's best two-mile and cross-country runner as a student at Indiana university.

He said he was in the finest condition of his career. His old coach, E. C. (Billy) Hayes, who still keeps watch over Don and refers to him as "one of my men," said, "He looks to be in fine shape."

Because Don has to take his turn on state police duty, most of his practice has been early in the morning or after dark in the late afternoon.

"My goal is the 1940 Olympics," Lash said. "I want to beat those Finns in the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs and then, win or lose, I'll hang up my shoes after the games a year from this summer."

Finland's entrants ran away and left him in the 1936 games.

If he makes the team, Lash wants the United States Olympic committee to let him go to Europe early so he can put in a month studying crime detection at Scotland Yard before going into four weeks of training with the Finnish runners.

OKLAHOMA PASSES BEAT AGGIES, 19-0

STILLWATER, Okla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Oklahoma's Sooners, unbeaten champions of the Big Six, traveled the air lanes when their ground attack bogged down and whipped the Oklahoma Aggies, 19 to 0, before 9,000 fans here today.

The Sooners took to the air to set the stage for two touchdowns in the second period and added an end zone pass for the final counter in the last quarter.

The Aggies never got as far as the 50-yard line and spent most of the afternoon scratching their backs on their own goal posts.

ARMY TROUNCES NAVY WITH LONG MARCH TO TALLY

Cadets Bounce Off Ropes With Recovered Fumble To Beat Sailors, 14-7

By Paul Mickelson

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Army bounced off the ropes with a recovered fumble and an 81-yard march in the third period today to sweep Navy's fighting football forces into defeat, 14-7, before 102,000 half-frozen fans at Philadelphia Municipal stadium.

The victory, 22nd for the Cadets in a series of 39 contests, was as sudden as it was sweet. Navy had fought back to gain a tie at 7-all and was driving deep in Army territory when one of its great heros of the game, Emmett Wood of Wilkensburg, Pa., fumbled. Harry Stella, Cadet guard from Kankakee, Ill., recovered. Ten plays later and the Army backs, reinforced by Sydney Martin of Gilmer, Tex., who made 46 yards on the first two plays, rode over the Middie line for the final, winning touchdown.

Behind a line that stiffened suddenly, the Cadet backs slashed the enemy wall and swept the ends almost at will, Long, Art Frontczak of Dowagiac, Mich., and Woodrow Wilson of El Paso, assisting in the winning drive. It was Wilson who lugged it over from the one-foot line, where the last of three crashes by Frontczak, good for nine of the 81 yards, missed going through.

Hero for the Cadets in the chill and gloom was Charley Long. It was he who set them off for the first score on the most brilliant run of the wintry, sub-zero day. It was Long who kicked the two extra points and it was Long who kicked several beautiful punts and several times split up the Middie defense with some of the few passes Army attempted. Statistics were all Navy, but the fumble and one Army drive nullified them. Navy piled up 10 first downs to five for Army, gained 138 yards rushing to Army's 98 and gained 73 yards with 25 passes to but seven for the Cadets.

Long's run was as pretty as it was long. Both teams were maneuvering for a break when Lemuel Cooke of Hernando, Miss., Navy's twin hero of the day with Wood, kicked a high one to Long. The boy from Chevy Chase caught it standing still on his 21 and raced to the right sidelines. For an instant he seemed halted by two Navy tacklers who nudged him toward the sidelines but he squirmed out of their reach, whirled and hit for the center of the frozen field. Two Navy tacklers lunged and missed and from the 50-yard line on it was clear sailing for the Army track star in a football uniform. Long's kick for extra point barely skimmed past the right upright.

From that Army score to the end of the second period it was all Navy. The Gobs drove to Army's four and 14-yard lines without getting it over but finally, midway in the second period, capped a 47-yard drive with a touchdown to tie the count.

Wood started the touchdown rally by returning Army's kickoff 12 yards to midfield. Wood, hitting a wavering line on center bucks, drove to the Cadet 36 on three smashes, was thrown for a six-yard loss by Johnny Samuel and then caught a pass on the Army 25. Passes, all tossed by Cooke, completely baffled the Cadets but on the one-yard marker Cooke took the ball himself and hit his right for the score. Wood kicked the goal.

TIGERS, BEARS IN TITLE TILT

Waterproof And Newellton Clash Friday For Class B Crown

The Waterproof Tigers and the Newellton Bears, rival Tensas parish elevens, will clash Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock for the northeast Louisiana district Class B crown lost by the dethroned Columbia Crimson Tide, which was upset by Ferriday early in the season.

The Tensas Tigers, district champions for three seasons before giving way to Columbia last fall, moved nearer to the top again Thursday by sidetracking the Clarks Lumberjacks, 27 to 6, in the first game of the district playoff at Waterproof.

The Bruins of Newellton are appearing for the first time in the championship series and a hard-fought game is anticipated.

The winner of the Newellton-Waterproof game will meet the Plain Dealing Lions, champions of the northwest Louisiana Class B district, for the north Louisiana championship and the right to meet the south Louisiana champs for the state crown.

The Plain Dealing Lions became northwest district champions Friday afternoon when they trounced the Dubach Plungers, 14 to 6.

OWNER OF NATS MAY TRADE SOME

Clark Griffith Admits Nothing But Is Expected To Barter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Clark Griffith won't admit it, but the early winter word is that the president of the Washington Senators will haul a cargo of baseball-trading material to the American league meeting next month.

The only thing the Old Fox will admit outright about baseball is that Walter Johnson was its best pitcher, but these players might figure in winter trading:

Cecil Travis, one of the game's .300-hitting shortstops.

Al Simmons, outfielder who hit .300 last season.

Zeke Bonura, the fence-busting first baseman.

Sammy West, the aging outfielder who can still go get them.

The entire Washington pitching staff with the possible exception of left-handed Joseph Victor Lawrence Krakauskas, the slow-talking Canadian with the fast ball.

Catcher Rick Ferrell, if Washington can get another receiver.

Who won't Griff trade?

In addition to Krakauskas, the Senators would need a staggering offer to transfer the contracts of Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Outfielders George Washington Case and Taft Wright.

The Old Fox thinks the world of Travis, but he realizes he must offer something to get what he wants, and Cecil is his best bait.

Simmons is almost certain to go—he and Griffith waged a heated word battle at the end of the season and they don't fight with Griff and take his pay.

Bonura is a good hitter, but Griffith—since the days of Joe Judge—demands a fancy fielder at the first sack.

EARL OF DERBY'S NAGS WIN MOST IN ENGLAND

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Earl of Derby emerged tonight as England's winning race horse owner of the year as the 1938 flat-racing season came to a close with the Manchester November Handicap, won by G. F. Hartigan's Pappageno 2nd.

Lord Derby won stakes worth $157,956. James Rank was second with $132,926. The winning trainer was Captain Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, who handles the American-owned horses of William Woodward of New York. He trained 44 winners to take stakes worth $237,171. Gordon Richards again topped the jockeys with 206 victories.

MEMPHIS STATE TEACHERS ACCEPT PRUNE BOWL BID

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Coach Allyn McKeen of the undefeated Memphis State Teachers college football team said tonight his squad would play San Jose (Calif.) college in a Prune Bowl contest December 26 for a $4,200 guarantee.

Gil Bishop, San Jose graduate manager, said earlier today the California school, because of limited stadium capacity, could not offer more than $4,000. Memphis Teachers previously had asked $5,000.

McKeen said that by reducing the squad and making other changes "we could get by on $4,200."

TEXAS CHRISTIAN WALLOPS S. M. U.

Frogs Take Southwestern Crown And Get Bid To Cotton Bowl

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Unbridled Texas Christian felled Southern Methodist 20-7 today, won the Southwest conference title thereby and lifted the hook for a 'phone call from Pasadena.

Little David O'Brien brought out his passing wizardry only occasionally, but he personally led a ground game that netted two touchdowns and 231 yards.

Immediately after the game, the Cotton Bowl Athletic association, sponsors of the annual New Year's day post-season classic at Dallas, issued an invitation to the Christians but a reply was not expected for several days.

Southern Methodist was undefeated in Southwest conference play until today.

TEXAS TECH WHIPS MARQUETTE, 21 TO 2

LUBBOCK, Tex., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Texas Tech's Red Raiders struck with unconquerable ground and aerial power in the first and third periods here today to smash Marquette university, 21 to 2.

The victory gave the untied and undefeated Raiders their tenth consecutive victory.

Marquette made sixteen against Tech's six first downs, but the Red Raiders plowed the turf for 385 yards against 164 for Marquette.

Holy Cross Hands Boston College First Defeat Of Gridiron Season

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The powerful Holy Cross Crusaders rose in their might today to hand their ancient Jesuit rival, Boston college, its first gridiron defeat of the season before 35,000 chilled fans, 29 to 7.

Captain Bullet Bill Osmanski paced the Crusaders' fleet ball carriers. Ronnie Cahill obliged by tossing 19 passes, eight of which were completed for 85 yards.

The Boston college Eagles were outplayed and out-fought during the greater part of the action but they got—with the aid of two 15-yard penalties on the Crusaders—a touchdown in the third.

Alex Lukachik, Captain Bill Flynn's left end understudy, caught a pass from the 15-yard scoring play.

Goldberg's wobbly pass to Bill Daddio was incomplete and then a horde of blue jerseys buried Curly Stebbins on the 12-yard line and Duke had the ball.

DUKE AND T. C. U. FINISH UNBEATEN

and Davey O'Brien tossed troublesome passes behind the big Horned Frog line and it was all over before the Methodists could score on a blocked kick in the last quarter.

Texas Tech rang up the tenth victory of an undefeated, untied season by whipping Marquette 21 to 2. Oklahoma's Sooners, who have one more game to play, rang up their ninth victory this season by beating Oklahoma A. and M., 19-0. Boston College, twice tied, met its first defeat when Holy Cross, paced by Bullet Bill Osmanski and Ronnie Cahill, smashed to a 29-7 victory.

Fordham's Rams picked up a little glory by whipping their Bronx rival, New York university, 25-0.

Mississippi earned a chance to claim runner-up honors in the Southeastern conference by trimming Mississippi State 19-6. Ole Miss plays Tennessee next week and could earn second place by upsetting the unbeaten Vols. Tulane's Greenies moved up just ahead of Mississippi and even with Alabama in the conference standing by trimming Louisiana State 14-0. Alabama and Tulane have ties in their records, which would give Mississippi an edge in the standings if the Rebels should beat the Vols.

Florida's Gators brought about one of the big upsets of the conference campaign when they stood off Auburn's attack and finally beat the Plainsmen, 9-7, on a blocked punt in the last quarter. Georgia and Georgia Tech played a scoreless tie in the other Southeastern game.

Stanford's Indians, who had a miserable season in the Pacific Coast conference, pulled off the day's outstanding "upset" when they beat Dartmouth, a power in the east, 23 to 13. The Indians finally got their scoring plays to work and after maintaining a one-point margin through three periods, drove 70 yards for a final tally and added a safety when a Dartmouth pass was incomplete behind the goal line. The scoring in the first three quarters was done mostly through the air.

Oregon State crashed through in the last period to beat Oregon 14-0 while Washington trounced Washington State 26-0 in Pacific Coast conference tussles.

JOHNNY REVOLTA 5 STROKES AHEAD

Adds A 69 To First Round 67 To Lead Field In Open Golf Tourney

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Johnny Revolta, lanky Evanston, Ill., pro, added a 69 today to his first-round 67 to take a five-stroke lead over the field in the $5,000 Columbia-Ridgewood Open Golf tournament.

Playing a deadly accurate game, Revolta, a member of the United States Ryder Cup team, established himself, apparently, as the man to beat for the first-place money of $1,200.

With his six-under-par total of 136 for the 36 holes, Revolta led 62 professionals and less than 10 amateurs into tomorrow's 36-hole final round.

His three nearest rivals were Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y., the veteran Jimmy Hines and John Metulic of Girard, O., who were deadlocked at 141.

Scores soared during the day's play as snow and sleet flurries fell throughout the morning.

Hogan, who tied Revolta for the first-round lead with a 67, felt the effect of the weather on his game and dropped to a 74. Hines carded a 72 against his previous 69, but Metulic was more consistent, getting a par 71 to add to his first-round score of 70.

CHOUDRANT BASKETEERS DEFEAT FLYERS, 35 TO 31

CHOUDRANT, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Coming from behind in the last half, the Pan-Am Oilers of Choudrant defeated the Barksdale Flyers, 35 to 31, here last night. The Flyers were leading, 16 to 15, at the half.

R. Holtzclaw led the Oilers' offensive with 15 points and was closely followed by D. Leachman with ten points. Calhoun, a former Choudrant boy, led the Barksdale cagers with 11 points.

The locals will meet Ansley here tomorrow night in a benefit game for Cheatwood, the Choudrant football player, who suffered a broken leg a week ago.

FILM DIRECTOR PULLS FOR VOLS

Clarence Brown, Tennessee, Class Of '10, Wants Team To Get Bowl Bid

By Robert Myers

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Clarence Brown, Tennessee, class of '10, means nothing to the football fan, but Clarence Brown, film director, means a lot in football crazy Hollywood.

A sturdy, ruddy faced man of 45 or so, Brown can tell Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo and the rest of the glamor trade where to sit, how to walk, what to say, how to say it and, "Please, Mr. Barrymore, learn your lines after this."

Right now Mr. Brown is doing his directing with his left hand and using the right to insist that Tennessee should be invited to the Rose Bowl.

His spirit is justified. He played football for Tennessee and spent most of his life in Knoxville within a rock-throw of the university campus.

Almost every day his luncheon is spent extolling the merits of the Vols, and subscription to many large southern newspapers has served to keep him well informed on the team, its members, their performances.

"Tennessee has swept through a representative schedule in a conference well balanced in strength," he said. "They defeated Alabama, and Alabama defeated U. S. C. and if you think S. C.'s 42-7 win over U. C. L. A. was something, look what Tennessee did to Kentucky—46 to 0."

The luncheon hour was forgotten, and so were Gable, Miss Shearer and the rest of the cast of Brown's latest picture.

"That's all right. They're all with me. Every time I walk on the set they give me a cheer. One of the old Tennessee yells. Don't know where they learned it. They'll be in the Tennessee section if we can get the boys out in the Rose Bowl.

"One thing more, too. You know that southern teams always have a lot of color. Well, wait until you see Tennessee. What's more, they've got a football team. A real one. A great one. Tennessee ——."

Mr. Brown is very enthusiastic about the Tennessee team.

SHORTS COVERING RALLIES COTTON

Market At New Orleans Closes Steady Net One Up To Two Lower

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Active covering by shorts in final trading rallied cotton prices here today and the market closed very steady net one point up to 2 lower.

Advances on near months in early dealings were attributed in trade circles to steady foreign markets and trade demand. After fluctuating irregularly the market rallied in later dealings under week-end covering and lack of offerings.

Closing prices were at or near the best with December at 8.79, January 8.61B, March at 8.56, May 8.36, July 8.14, October 7.80, December (new) at 7.83 bid, and March (1940) at 7.86 bid.

The tight spot situation in the interior and expectations of an increase in textile trading helped sentiment towards the end of the short session.

The turnover here yesterday was 14,650 bales and open commitments 430,700 bales, a decrease of 6,400 bales from the previous day.

Exports today were 6,565 bales.

Livestock

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Trading in livestock remained at a standstill today at the Chicago stockyards because of the strike of C. I. O. union yard workers. No quotations were available.

As a consequence of the strike, which was called Monday, there has been no actual market here, except on Tuesday, when commission men, by agreement with the union were allowed to clean up two days accumulation of 60,000 animals.

First formal attempt to settle the strike between the union and the Union Stockyards and Transit company by intervention of federal and state conciliators was made at a meeting today at the stock yards. The strikers were demanding a 40-hour week, overtime pay, written contract, closed shop and the checkoff. The company, spokesmen said, opposes particularly the closed shop and checkoff.

Yesterday's and today's receipts were nearly all consigned direct to packers or were intended for the International Livestock exposition which opened today. Saturday's livestock market is normally a nominal affair. Estimated receipts of 9,000 hogs today were all directs. Cattle receipts were estimated at 1,000 and sheep at 1,000.

LEADING ISSUES IN SLIGHT DROP

Generally Tired Market Hit By Late Sales; Declines Exceed Two Points

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A generally tired stock market was hit by a late selling wave in today's brief session and leading issues dropped fractions to more than 2 points.

The list shifted aimlessly over a narrow route until the final half-hour when offerings expanded sufficiently to put the ticker tape behind. There was a mild come-back just before the close, but many issues ended near the bottom. Transfers were around 700,000 shares.

Steels, motors, coppers and rubbers bore the brunt of the assault and even the climbing aircrafts of yesterday gave way.

Satisfactory domestic business news apparently still was competing with offsetting influences of year-end adjustments and a somewhat cloudier outlook abroad.

Gold mining stocks were resistant on word Homestake would disburse its annual Christmas bonus of $100 to each of its 2,000 regular employes. A $50 bonus was paid last July.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler and General Motors were especially soft although steel mill operations next week were expected to hold rather well and the current high rate of automotive output was looked for throughout January at least.

Rails such as N. Y. Central, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson and Southern Pacific inclined to loaf behind small minus signs although last week's freight loadings, delayed until today, topped the 1937 week for the first time this year.

Transamerica was thrown for a loss of nearly 3 at the worst after the SEC announcement of a public hearing to determine whether this company's stock should be delisted on charges of "false and misleading" registration statements. Company officials declared they would be "completely vindicated."

Gold at London was lifted to another record peak and sterling and the French franc again dipped. Fears of a general strike in France helped chill market sentiment.

Bonds and commodities were irregular.

TECH TO MEET SOUTHEASTERN IN FINAL GAME

Bulldogs To Begin Preparing Tomorrow For Invasion Of Hammond Team

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Satisfied with their holding of Centenary to a 14-7 score at Shreveport Thursday, the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs Monday will begin rehearsals for their season's finale, to be played with Southeastern Louisiana college of Hammond here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The game, which will mark the first contest between Tech and the Hammond eleven, will be the attraction of homecoming day here. The alumni office has mailed about 2,000 invitations to former Tech students, calling attention to the engagement.

Members of the "T" club, letter men's organization, have elected Alice Crow of Ruston to preside as queen of the homecoming festivities. Her attendants will be Dorothy Lee Stodghill, Ruston; Jacqueline Talbert, Keatchie; Nancy Abney Barnes, Ruston, and Nell Hester, Downsville.

High spots of the day, in addition to the featured football game, will include an informal coffee for alumni in the parlors of the girls' dormitory at 10 a.m.; a pep meeting at 11 a.m.; luncheon in the college cafeteria; a parade starting from the women's dormitory at 1 p.m., and the alumni dance sponsored by the "T" club at 8 p.m., in the women's gymnasium.

All former Tech football players have been invited to be guests of the athletic association, it has been announced.

The Tech team, for the most part, came out of the Centenary game without serious mishap, although John Sidney Hewitt, center, received a broken right hand and will not be available for the last game of the season Saturday afternoon. T. R. Willett and W. A. Jones will be on hand to take the center job.

WILLARD PERDUE HERO OF VICTORY

Goldberg's wobbly pass to Bill Daddio was incomplete and then a horde of blue jerseys buried Curly Stebbins on the 12-yard line and Duke had the ball.

Goldberg had carried the ball five times in the second drive that went to the Duke 23 when he hurt his knee. He was taken out and on the first play Peace crashed through, fumbled and the ball game was lost.

The lineups:

Pittsburgh	Pos.	Duke
Daddio	LE	Perdue
Merkovsky	LT	Ribar
Klein	LG	Johnson
Dannies	C	Hill
Petro	RG	Yorke
Konetsky	RT	Haas
Hoffman	RE	Bailey
Chickerneo	QB	Spangler
Cassiano	LH	Eaves
Stebbins	RH	Tipton
Goldberg	FB	O'Mara

Duke	0	0	0	7—7

Scoring summary: Duke touchdown, Perdue; point after touchdown, Ruffa (sub for Davis), placement.

Officials: Referee Paul Magoffin (Michigan); umpire, Walter E. Dunn (unattached); field judge, E. T. Sanders (Washington and Lee); head linesman, G. W. Hoban (Dartmouth).

DUKE AND T. C. U. FINISH UNBEATEN

and Davey O'Brien tossed troublesome passes behind the big Horned Frog line and it was all over before the Methodists could score on a blocked kick in the last quarter.

Texas Tech rang up the tenth victory of an undefeated, untied season by whipping Marquette 21 to 2. Oklahoma's Sooners, who have one more game to play, rang up their ninth victory this season by beating Oklahoma A and M., 19-0. Boston College, twice tied, met its first defeat when Holy Cross, paced by Bullet Bill Osmanski and Ronnie Cahill, smashed to a 29-7 victory.

Fordham's Rams picked up a little glory by whipping their Bronx rival, New York university, 25-0.

Mississippi earned a chance to claim runner-up honors in the Southeastern conference by trimming Mississippi State 19-6. Ole Miss plays Tennessee next week and could earn second place by upsetting the unbeaten Vols. Tulane's Greenies moved up just ahead of Mississippi and even with Alabama in the conference standing by trimming Louisiana State 14-0. Alabama and Tulane have ties in their records, which would give Mississippi an edge in the standings if the Rebels should beat the Vols.

Florida's 'Gators brought about one of the big upsets of the conference campaign when they stood off Auburn's attack and finally beat the Plainsmen, 9-7, on a blocked punt in the last quarter. Georgia and Georgia Tech played a scoreless tie in the other Southeastern game.

Stanford's Indians, who had a miserable season in the Pacific Coast conference, pulled off the day's outstanding "upset" when they beat Dartmouth, a power in the east, 23 to 13. The Indians finally got their scoring plays to work and after maintaining a one-point margin through three periods, drove 70 yards for a final tally and added a safety when a Dartmouth pass was incomplete behind the goal line. The scoring in the first three quarters was done mostly through the air.

Oregon State crashed through in the last period to beat Oregon 14-0 while Washington trounced Washington State 26-0 in Pacific Coast conference tussles.

JOHNNY REVOLTA 5 STROKES AHEAD

Adds A 69 To First Round 67 To Lead Field In Open Golf Tourney

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Johnny Revolta, lanky Evanston, Ill., pro, added a 69 today to his first-round 67 to take a five-stroke lead over the field in the $5,000 Columbia-Ridgewood Open Golf tournament.

Playing a deadly accurate game, Revolta, a member of the United States Ryder Cup team, established himself, apparently, as the man to beat for the first-place money of $1,200.

With his six-under-par total of 136 for the 36 holes, Revolta led 62 professionals and less than 10 amateurs into tomorrow's 36-hole final round.

His three nearest rivals were Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y., the veteran Jimmy Hines and John Metulic of Girard, O., who were deadlocked at 141.

Scores soared during the day's play as snow and sleet flurries fell throughout the morning.

Hogan, who tied Revolta for the first-round lead with a 67, felt the effect of the weather on his game and dropped to a 74. Hines carded a 72 against his previous 69, but Metulic was more consistent, getting a par 71 to add to his first-round score of 70.

CHOUDRANT BASKETEERS DEFEAT FLYERS, 35 TO 31

CHOUDRANT, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Coming from behind in the last half, the Pan-Am Oilers of Choudrant defeated the Barksdale Flyers, 35 to 31, here last night. The Flyers were leading, 16 to 15, at the half.

R. Holtzclaw led the Oilers' offensive with 15 points and was closely followed by D. Leachman with ten points. Calhoun, a former Choudrant boy, led the Barksdale cagers with 11 points.

The locals will meet Ansley here tomorrow night in a benefit game for Cheatwood, the Choudrant football player, who suffered a broken leg a week ago.

FILM DIRECTOR PULLS FOR VOLS

Clarence Brown, Tennessee, Class Of '10, Wants Team To Get Bowl Bid

By Robert Myers

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Clarence Brown, Tennessee, class of '10, means nothing to the football fan, but Clarence Brown, film director, means a lot in football crazy Hollywood.

A sturdy, ruddy faced man of 45 or so, Brown can tell Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo and the rest of the glamor trade where to sit, how to walk, what to say, how to say it and, "Please, Mr. Barrymore, learn your lines after this."

Right now Mr. Brown is doing his directing with his left hand and using the right to insist that Tennessee should be invited to the Rose Bowl.

His spirit is justified. He played football for Tennessee and spent most of his life in Knoxville within a rock-throw of the university campus.

Almost every day his luncheon is spent extolling the merits of the Vols, and subscription to many large southern newspapers has served to keep him well informed on the team, its members, their performances.

"Tennessee has swept through a representative schedule in a conference well balanced in strength," he said. "They defeated Alabama, and Alabama defeated U. S. C. and if you think S. C.'s 42-7 win over U. C. L. A. was something, look what Tennessee did to Kentucky—46 to 0."

The luncheon hour was forgotten, and so were Gable, Miss Shearer and the rest of the cast of Brown's latest picture.

"That's all right. They're all with me. Every time I walk on the set they give me a cheer. One of the old Tennessee yells. Don't know where they learned it. They'll be in the Tenenssee section if we can get the boys out in the Rose Bowl.

"One thing more, too. You know that southern teams always have a lot of color. Well, wait until you see Tennessee. What's more, they've got a football team. A real one. A great one. Tennessee ——."

Mr. Brown is very enthusiastic about the Tennessee team.

SHORTS COVERING RALLIES COTTON

Market At New Orleans Closes Steady Net One Up To Two Lower

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Active covering by shorts in final trading rallied cotton prices here today and the market closed very steady net one point up to 2 lower.

Advances on near months in early dealings were attributed in trade circles to steady foreign markets and trade demand. After fluctuating irregularly the market rallied in later dealings under week-end covering and lack of offerings.

Closing prices were at or near the best with December at 8.79, January 8.61B; March at 8.56, May 8.36, July 8.14, October 7.80, December (new) at 7.83 bid, and March (1940) at 7.86 bid.

The tight spot situation in the interior and expectations of an increase in textile trading helped sentiment towards the end of the short session.

The turnover here yesterday was 14,650 bales and open commitments 430,700 bales, a decrease of 6,400 bales from the previous day.

Exports today were 6,565 bales.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Although selling of December wheat today forced the price of that contract down fractionally to the lowest point in six years, other deliveries were steadied by purchasing of traders who switched accounts into options which run into the middle of 1939. The result was a fairly steady market.

Wheat closed 1-8 off to 1-4 higher compared with yesterday's finish, December 61 3-8 - 1-2, May 64 7-8 - 65, and corn was unchanged to 3-8 higher, December 47 3-4 - 5-8, May 51 5-8 - 1-2. Oats gained 1-8 - 1-4.

Livestock

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Trading in livestock remained at a standstill today at the Chicago stockyards because of the strike of C. I. O. union yard workers. No quotations were available.

As a consequence of the strike, which was called Monday, there has been no actual market here, except on Tuesday, when commission men, by agreement with the union were allowed to clean up two days accumulation of 60,000 animals.

First formal attempt to settle the strike between the union and the Union Stockyards and Transit company by intervention of federal and state conciliators was made at a meeting today at the stock yards. The strikers were demanding a 40-hour week, overtime pay, written contract, closed shop and the checkoff. The company, spokesmen said, opposes particularly the closed shop and checkoff.

Yesterday's and today's receipts were nearly all consigned direct to packers or were intended for the International Livestock exposition which opened today. Saturday's livestock market is normally a nominal affair. Estimated receipts of 9,000 hogs today were all directs. Cattle receipts were estimated at 1,000 and sheep at 1,000.

LEADING ISSUES IN SLIGHT DROP

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A generally tired stock market was hit by a late selling wave in today's brief session and leading issues dropped fractions to more than 2 points.

The list shifted aimlessly over a narrow route until the final half-hour when offerings expanded sufficiently to put the ticker tape behind. There was a mild come-back just before the close, but many issues ended near the bottom. Transfers were around 700,000 shares.

Steels, motors, coppers and rubbers bore the brunt of the assault and even the climbing aircrafts of yesterday gave way.

Satisfactory domestic business news apparently still was competing with offsetting influences of year-end adjustments and a somewhat cloudier outlook abroad.

Gold mining stocks were resistant on word Homestake would disburse its annual Christmas bonus of $100 to each of its 2,000 regular employes. A $50 bonus was paid last July.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler and General Motors were especially soft although steel mill operations next week were expected to hold rather well and the current high rate of automotive output was looked for throughout January at least.

Rails such as N. Y. Central, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson and Southern Pacific inclined to loaf behind small minus signs although last week's freight loadings, delayed until today, topped the 1937 week for the first time this year.

Transamerica was thrown for a loss of nearly 3 at the worst after the SEC announcement of a public hearing to determine whether this company's stock should be delisted on charges of "false and misleading" registration statements. Company officials declared they would be "completely vindicated."

Gold at London was lifted to another record peak and sterling and the French franc again dipped. Fears of a general strike in France helped chill market sentiment.

Bonds and commodities were irregular.

WELFARE MEET PROBE DEMANDED

Birmingham Group Wants To Know If Government Financed Conference

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A committee of Birmingham Civic club members today asked a congressional investigation to determine "whether the Works Progress administration or other agency of the government" contributed financially to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, held here earlier this week.

"A Greater Birmingham committee" adopted a lengthy resolution saying the conference "is not representative of the south" and deploring the "ill-mannered attack" of the conference "upon our city officials and law enforcement officers."

John G. Dearborn, committee chairman, said copies of the resolution would be sent to all Alabama members of congress and to Chairman Dies, Democrat, Texas, of the committee investigating un-American activities.

Dies already had announced his group would investigate charges that communists instigated the conference here.

The committee resolution referred to action of the conference Wednesday in adopting a resolution protesting "Jim Crow" laws in Birmingham which forced segregation of white and negro delegates. Numerous city police were on duty to see that segregation ordinances were obeyed.

Regarding the congressional investigation, the committee resolution said:

"The chairman is instructed to request a congressional committee to make inquiry as to whether the Works Progress administration or other agency of government, through Aubery Williams or otherwise, made available public funds with which to defray expenses of the conference or of its delegates, and precisely what action was taken by federal authorities to have relief officers and employes attend the conference."

The "A Greater Birmingham committee" has been functioning here since 1936. Dearborn said it had 200 active members, with a total membership of approximately four times that number.

Charges that communists instigated the conference were denied by two of its officials today.

Judge Louise O. Charlton of Birmingham, chairman of the conference here and honorary chairman of the permanent organization elected Wednesday, and Dr. Arthur Raper, member of the conference committee on continuation and Agnes Scott college faculty member, gave statements denying Communists were responsible for the meeting.

Dies told newspapermen at Washington:

"We are investigating the whole thing. I have ordered our investigator in the south to go to Birmingham and look into the matter."

Rumors have been current here since the conference convened Sunday that the Dies committee had one or more investigators in Birmingham and would come here to launch an inquiry into the conference setup.

Judge Charlton's statement was in answer to criticism leveled at the conference and its leaders by resolutions adopted yesterday at a mass meeting called by the Democratic Women's club of Alabama.

She said the conference was sponsored by 200 southern "leaders" and was financed from the pockets of those attending it.

"The purpose of the conference," she said, "is to bind the southern people together in a concerted program to improve public health, the standard of education, the level of income for laborers and farmers, and to work toward a progressive solution of the economic and human ills which have made the south the nation's No. 1 economic problem."

She referred to the mass meeting here yesterday as the gathering "of the little Hitler," and said:

"All intelligent people will read between the lines and discern their motives. The hands were the hands of Esau, but the voice was that of Jacob."

Dr. Raper said the reply to charges of communism "should be found in the leadership of the conference."

He cited Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and new chairman of the conference; Judge Charlton; Mark Ethridge of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and H. C. Nixon, southern economist, as examples of the conference leadership.

Raper said only six delegates registered as Communists, of more than 1,300 accredited.

CARDOZO EULOGIZED BY BAR MEMBERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Leaders of the American bar eulogized today the life and career of the late Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, the second Jew to sit on the supreme court.

They expressed their esteem at a memorial service for the justice in the supreme court chamber. He died last July after serving as associate justice since 1932.

The present repression of Jews in Germany was not mentioned specifically, but one speaker said "multitudes of men are suffering from new and unheard of horrors" and another referred to anti-Jewish activity of the past few years.

John Lord O'Brian, of New York, former assistant attorney general, presided at the service.

WOMAN, SHOPPING, LOSES LARGE SUM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Weary with early Christmas shopping, Mrs. L. M. Downing of Eden, Ala., sat down at a soft-drink counter for refreshment.

When she turned to pay the check, Mrs. Downing found her purse, containing $980 in cash and $2,300 in postal savings stamps, had been stolen from her lap.

Mrs. Downing said she brought the money to Birmingham rather than leave it at her home "unprotected."

THREE CONVICTS SCALE PRISON WALL

FLORENCE, Ariz., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Three convicts using a cleverly built wheeled ladder, scaled state prison wall today under gunfire of guards which wounded two prisoners. Two of the fugitives were recaptured in the Gila river bottoms a few hours later.

The ladder, as high as the wall top and covered with canvas, was rolled up to the wall by prisoners. Guards, suspecting men were concealed under the canvas, opened fire after their commands to halt were ignored.

G. W. Sievert, a manslaughter convict, was wounded and taken to the prison hospital. Alex Geneck, who escaped but was recaptured, was shot in the shoulder. Earl Nelson, a bank robbery convict, was re-arrested with Geneck. Dewey Thorn, convicted robber, remained at liberty.

The ladder was mounted and braced on a wagon made by adding two wheels to a commissary cart.

CHEMIST SLAYS WOMAN AND SELF

Pursues And Shoots Her Down In New York Central Terminal

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A middle-aged chemist brought his unhappy pursuit of a pretty red-haired young woman to a tragic end today by killing her and himself with a pistol on the seventh floor of the Grand Central terminal building in the heart of the midtown section.

High above the swarm of Saturday morning commuters hurrying through Grand Central terminal, John McNeill, 52, pleaded with Marion Wheeler, 32, of Yonkers, N. Y. She shook her head.

He had met her outside in Lexington avenue, had come up in the elevator with her, police later learned, and had quarreled with her. Something in his manner or words apparently frightened her as they stepped out on the seventh floor.

She began to run, screaming. She dodged down a long corridor toward the office of L. V. Porter, comptroller of the New York Central railroad, where she was employed as a clerk.

William DeSears, a fellow clerk, told Police Captain Patrick Kenny and detectives he stepped out when Miss Wheeler was only a few yards away.

"He had a gun in his hand," DeSears said. "He was panting. She was running as hard as she could. She was screaming. When he got directly in back of her he fired three times at her back. She stumbled and fell. Then almost without looking at her he stopped dead in his tracks and shot himself through the head. I can still hear the tinkle of glass caused by the bullet. It passed through his head and made a hole in a window."

Hugh Carson, another clerk, carried Miss Wheeler into the office. She murmured, "I'm dying," and quickly lost consciousness and was dead before a priest arrived.

Last week, fellow employes said, McNeill called for Miss Wheeler at the office and shouted:

"If I can't have you, nobody else will," they said he hit her with his fist. He was ejected from the place.

One of McNeill's daughters, Mrs. Patsy Vanderlinden, said the McNeill and Wheeler families were neighbors years ago in Yonkers.

ADVANCE COUGHLIN SPEECH DEMANDED

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Radio station WMCA advised the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight that his scheduled speech tomorrow would be broadcast through its facilities only if a copy were received four hours in advance and its text did not tend to "create racial or religious hatred or dissension in America."

The station, which objected to parts of the Detroit priest's speech last Sunday, modified a previous order for Father Coughlin to submit his script 48 hours in advance of the broadcast.

WMCA's telegram to the priest said:

"We are extending the time for receipt of advance copy of the speech you propose to deliver over our station until noon, eastern standard time, tomorrow. * * * We will examine it and will broadcast it if it is not designed to create racial or religious hatred or dissension in America."

GAS FUMES KILL DISNEY'S MOTHER

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Escaping gas fumes killed Mrs. Flora Disney, 71-year-old mother of Walt Disney, noted film cartoonist, in her north Hollywood home today.

The husband and father, Elias Disney, 80, was taken to a hospital in a serious condition but physicians said he probably would recover.

Alma Smith, cook and maid for the Disneys, found them unconscious upstairs after being almost overcome herself when she arose and went to the kitchen to cook breakfast. She threw open windows and staggered outside to summon aid.

Policemen and gas company experts were unable to determine from a preliminary investigation just what caused the gas to escape.

WELFARE MEET PROBE DEMANDED

Birmingham Group Wants To Know If Government Financed Conference

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A committee of Birmingham Civic club members today asked a congressional investigation to determine "whether the Works Progress administration or other agency of the government" contributed financially to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, held here earlier this week.

"A Greater Birmingham committee," adopted a lengthy resolution saying the conference "is not representative of the south" and deploring the "ill-mannered attack" of the conference "upon our city officials and law enforcement officers."

John G. Dearborn, committee chairman, said copies of the resolution would be sent to all Alabama members of congress and to Chairman Dies, Democrat, Texas, of the committee investigating un-American activities.

Dies already had announced his group would investigate charges that communists instigated the conference here.

The committee resolution referred to action of the conference Wednesday in adopting a resolution protesting "Jim Crow" laws in Birmingham which forced segregation of white and negro delegates. Numerous city police were on duty to see that segregation ordinances were obeyed.

Regarding the congressional investigation, the committee resolution said: "The chairman is instructed to request a congressional committee to make inquiry as to whether the Works Progress administration or other agency of government, through Aubery Williams or otherwise, made available public funds with which to defray expenses of the conference or of its delegates, and precisely what action was taken by federal authorities to have relief officers and employes attend the conference."

The "A Greater Birmingham committee" has been functioning here since 1936. Dearborn said it had 200 active members, with a total membership of approximately four times that number.

Charges that communists instigated the conference were denied by two of its officials today.

Judge Louise O. Charlton of Birmingham, chairman of the conference here and honorary chairman of the permanent organization elected Wednesday, and Dr. Arthur Raper, member of the conference committee on continuation and Agnes Scott college faculty member, gave statements denying Communists were responsible for the meeting.

Dies told newspapermen at Washington:

"We are investigating the whole thing. I have ordered our investigator in the south to go to Birmingham and look into the matter."

Rumors have been current here since the conference convened Sunday that the Dies committee had one or more investigators in Birmingham and would come here to launch an inquiry into the conference setup.

Judge Charlton's statement was in answer to criticism leveled at the conference and its leaders by resolutions adopted yesterday at a mass meeting called by the Democratic Women's club of Alabama.

She said the conference was sponsored by 200 southern "leaders" and was financed from the pockets of those attending it.

"The purpose of the conference," she said, "is to bind the southern people together in a concerted program to improve public health, the standard of education, the level of income for laborers and farmers, and to work toward a progressive solution of the economic and human ills which have made the south the nation's No. 1 economic problem."

She referred to the mass meeting here yesterday as the gathering "of the little Hitler," and said:

"All intelligent people will read between the lines and discern their motives. The hands were the hands of Esau, but the voice was that of Jacob."

Dr. Raper said the reply to charges of communism "should be found in the leadership of the conference."

He cited Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and new chairman of the conference; Judge Charlton; Mark Ethridge of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and H. C. Nixon, southern economist, as examples of the conference leadership.

Raper said only six delegates registered as Communists, of more than 1,300 accredited.

CARDOZO EULOGIZED BY BAR MEMBERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Leaders of the American bar eulogized today the life and career of the late Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, the second Jew to sit on the supreme court.

They expressed their esteem at a memorial service for the justice in the supreme court chamber. He died last July after serving as associate justice since 1932.

The present repression of Jews in Germany was not mentioned specifically, but one speaker said "multitudes of men are suffering from new and unheard of horrors" and another referred to anti-Jewish activity of the past few years.

John Lord O'Brian, of New York, former assistant attorney general, presided at the service.

WOMAN, SHOPPING, LOSES LARGE SUM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Weary with early Christmas shopping, Mrs. L. M. Downing of Eden, Ala., sat down at a soft-drink counter for refreshment.

When she turned to pay the check, Mrs. Downing found her purse, containing $980 in cash and $2,300 in postal savings stamps, had been stolen from her lap.

Mrs. Downing said she brought the money to Birmingham rather than leave it at her home "unprotected."

THREE CONVICTS SCALE PRISON WALL

FLORENCE, Ariz., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Three convicts, using a cleverly built wheeled ladder, scaled state prison wall today under gunfire of guards which wounded two prisoners. Two of the fugitives were recaptured in the Gila river bottoms a few hours later.

The ladder, as high as the wall top and covered with canvas, was rolled up to the wall by prisoners. Guards, suspecting men were concealed under the canvas, opened fire after their commands to halt were ignored.

G. W. Siewert, a manslaughter convict, was wounded and taken to the prison hospital. Alex Geneck, who escaped but was recaptured, was shot in the shoulder. Earl Nelson, a bank robbery convict, was re-arrested with Geneck. Dewey Thurlo, convicted robber, remained at liberty.

The ladder was mounted and braced on a wagon made by adding two wheels to a commissary cart.

CHEMIST SLAYS WOMAN AND SELF

Pursues And Shoots Her Down In New York Central Terminal

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A middle-aged chemist brought his unhappy pursuit of a pretty red-haired young woman to a tragic end today by killing her and himself with a pistol on the seventh floor of the Grand Central terminal building in the heart of the midtown section.

High above the swarm of Saturday morning commuters hurrying through Grand Central terminal, John McNeill, 52, pleaded with Marion Wheeler, 32, of Yonkers, N. Y. She shook her head.

He had met her outside in Lexington avenue, had come up in the elevator with her, police later learned, and had quarreled with her. Something in his manner or words apparently frightened her as they stepped out on the seventh floor.

She began to run, screaming. She dodged down a long corridor toward the office of L. V. Porter, comptroller of the New York Central railroad, where she was employed as a clerk.

William DeSears, a fellow clerk, told Police Captain Patrick Kenny and detectives he stepped out when Miss Wheeler was only a few yards away.

"He had a gun in his hand," DeSears said. "He was panting. She was running as hard as she could. She was screaming. When he got directly in back of her he fired three times at her back. She stumbled and fell. Then almost without looking at her he stopped dead in his tracks and shot himself through the head. I can still hear the tinkle of glass caused by the bullet. It passed through his head and made a hole in a window."

Hugh Carson, another clerk, carried Miss Wheeler into the office. She murmured, "I'm dying," and quickly lost consciousness and was dead before a priest arrived.

Last week, fellow employes said, McNeill called for Miss Wheeler at the office and shouted:

"If I can't have you, nobody else will," they said he hit her with his fist. He was ejected from the place.

One of McNeill's daughters, Mrs. Patsy Vanderlinden, said the McNeill and Wheeler families were neighbors years ago in Yonkers.

ADVANCE COUGHLIN SPEECH DEMANDED

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Radio station WMCA advised the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight that his scheduled speech tomorrow would be broadcast through its facilities only if a copy were received four hours in advance and its text did not tend to "create racial or religious hatred or dissension in America."

The station, which objected to parts of the Detroit priest's speech last Sunday, modified a previous order for Father Coughlin to submit his script 48 hours in advance of the broadcast.

WMCA's telegram to the priest said:

"We are extending the time for receipt of advance copy of the speech you propose to deliver over our station until noon, eastern standard time, tomorrow. * * * We will examine it and will broadcast it if it is not designed to create racial or religious hatred or dissension in America."

GAS FUMES KILL DISNEY'S MOTHER

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Escaping gas fumes killed Mrs. Flora Disney, 71-year-old mother of Walt Disney, noted film cartoonist, in her north Hollywood home today.

The husband and father, Elias Disney, 80, was taken to a hospital in a serious condition but physicians said he probably would recover.

Alma Smith, cook and maid for the Disneys, found them unconscious upstairs after being almost overcome herself when she arose and went to the kitchen to cook breakfast. She threw open windows and staggered outside to summon aid.

Policemen and gas company experts were unable to determine from a preliminary investigation just what caused the gas to escape.

There were other restrictive measures.

TRADE REVEALS INCREASED PACE

Prosperous Christmas Expected Following Good News Of Early Fall

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Business, striding toward what it expects to be a prosperous Christmas trade, paused long enough this week to eat turkey and reflect over good news.

A commerce department survey of retail and wholesale trade indicated an increased pace of merchandise distribution. This is important to maintenance of the well publicized advances in factory activity because failure of consumption to keep up with production might mean a temporary industrial setback in the next half year.

The department said nearly all of the surveyed cities had larger sales this week than in the preceding week and some of them reported passing the relatively good sales level of a year ago.

One factor in the trade improvement was the cold weather which spurred sales of winter clothing and accessories.

The wholesale market for textiles was described as "a little reactionary." Cotton and woolens quieted down, rayon improved and silk demand was weak.

Automobile sales were a particularly bright factor. At shows of new models, better sales than last year were reported, particularly in the higher price classes.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity hit a new high for more than a year, going to 92.5 per cent of the 1929-30 average, compared with 89.3 in the preceding week and 80.4 a year ago.

ARAB REVOLT IS SLOWING DOWN

Weakening Under Stern British Military Campaigns But Trouble Persists

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Arab revolt in Palestine is showing signs of weakening under stern British military campaigns, but a long era of trouble is in prospect for Great Britain in her efforts to establish peaceful rule.

How long it will be necessary to keep a large army in the Holy Land to maintain order will depend to some extent on the outcome of an Arab-Jewish conference planned for early in the new year in London.

This will be a fresh British attempt to find a permanent solution for the mandated land to which both Jews and Arabs would adhere, but in government as in Jewish and Arab quarters optimism for its success is lacking.

And, whatever the outcome of the conference, a long army rule in Palestine is foreseen.

The revolt against British policy in the Holy Land found its origin in conflicting Arab and Jewish claims to Palestine as a homeland. During the World war, Britain pledged establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine in the Balfour declaration of November 2, 1917.

The weakening of the revolt, which has caused some 2,500 casualties including more than 1,300 deaths in the past four months alone, is attributed here to several factors.

They include:

An increased force in Palestine of the British army, which now numbers about 20,000 men; successive victories in retaking towns and cities seized by the Arabs; weakening of the morale of the Arab rebels, the result of heavy casualties, diminishing money and munitions of the rebels and loss of spirit for rebellion among the Arab population.

Besides, dissension swept the ranks of Arab leaders, leading to battles between followers of the two leading factions. British army officials believe their recent offensive against the insurgents effectively has broken the back of the revolution.

Observers in Palestine, however, believe the revolt would quickly break out again if the army were reduced or withdrawn.

GOLD IN BRITAIN REACHES NEW HIGH

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Gold reached its highest price in history and the British currency depreciated further in terms of the American dollar today, as Britain fought a secret and intricate battle of world currencies as part of the contest for international power.

The price of monetary metal reached 150 shillings an ounce, up 1 1-2 pence, and it took only 4.63 1-4 dollars to buy one pound sterling compared with more than 5 in the early months of the year.

(In New York, after trading had closed in London, the pound sterling was quoted at $4.62 7-8, off 1-2 cent from yesterday, and the lowest in five years, with the exception of a short time during the demoralized trading caused by the Czechoslovak crisis last September 28.

(Wall Street has been watching closely the sag in sterling, because, as a chief medium for world trade, it tends to depress dollar prices of international commodities, and to cheapen British manufactured goods in competition with American.

(The American dollar, since 1934 has been pegged to gold by the United States treasury's fixed gold price of $35 an ounce. The gold price in the London free market today, equivalent to $34.78 at the rate of exchange, is close to the level at which it is profitable for Wall Street bankers to buy gold in London and sell it to the treasury.)

CAMP OPERATOR HELD FOR ARSON

Robert H. Tyson Accused Of Burning Twin City Service Station

Robert H. Tyson, local tourist camp operator, of 4600 Jackson street, was in the Ouachita parish jail here last night charged with arson in connection with the burning on November 18 of the Twin City Service station, which was also located at the Jackson street address, it was reported yesterday by Sheriff Milton Coverdale.

The buildings that burned during the early hours of November 18 were the filling station and a small restaurant, both owned by Tyson, but operated under a lease by Lloyd M. LeJeune.

Sheriff Coverdale stated that two days after the fire he received information to the effect that the fire might have been of incendiary nature. An investigation followed, with members of the sheriff's department, D. M. Slaughter of the state fire marshal's office and Fire Chief Frank J. Roddy working to gather evidence in the case, it was said.

Tyson was arrested almost exactly one week after the fire and was being held in jail as he was unable to make bond of $500.

Real Estate Transfers

Real estate transfers recorded yesterday at the office of the clerk of court of Ouachita parish were:

J. A. Garland, Jr., sold to Earl Garland the east half of the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter and three acres in the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter, all in section 10, township 18 north, range 1 east, for $300.

Meyer Greenwald sold to Tom Hicks Transfer Company, Inc., lot 22 of the Town of Trenton for $100 cash.

The Peoples Homestead and Savings association sold to Thomas Lee Milford a lot fronting 75 feet on the east line of Island road, haing depths of 138.52 feet on the north along Webster street and 128 7-12 feet on the south, and fronting 75 3-4 feet on the A. and L. M. railroad for $2,228.34.

JEWS GIVEN LOW PRICE FOR GOODS

Nazi Officials Establish Special 'Pawn-Brokerage' Office

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Nazi financial officials established a special "pawn-brokerage" office today to buy, at their own final evaluation, jewels and other art objects from Jews.

Some Jews short of ready cash need money for emigration. Others need it to pay their share of the $400,000,000 fine the Nazis levied against Jews for the slaying of the German diplomat, Ernst Vom Rath, by a young Polish Jew in Paris.

Objects that will be offered for sale to the government doubtlessly will include priceless heirlooms that have been in Jewish families for generations—comparable to the precious articles Russian aristocrats sold after the Bolshevist revolution.

The office probably will begin operations next week, it was learned, under the chamber of industry and commerce acting on orders from the economics ministry. Government experts are to be appointed as appraisers.

Jewish circles feared there would be practically nothing left for most emigrants after selling their belongings for whatever they can get to obtain cash to pay regular taxes, the "flight" tax on emigrants and their shares of the $400,000,000 fine.

Jewish leaders pointed out that figures regarding Jewish fortunes were based on many factors which have changed since—such as the evaluation on business enterprises when they were going concerns before the anti-Jewish violence after November 10, the investment in goods and wares and the value of real estate.

One Munich Jew, for instance, received 18,000 marks ($7,200) for real estate valued at 100,000 marks ($40,000). Hence he failed to realize enough from its sale to pay his share of the fine. According to earlier figures given the government regarding his property, he has to pay 20 per cent of the 100,000 marks, or $8,000.

But should he now claim his property to be worth only 18,000 marks, he would be in conflict with another regulation providing that any Jew who gave the incorrect evaluation of his fortune is liable to criminal action.

He must therefore abide by the 100,000-mark evaluation and pay the government 20,000 marks as his part of the penalty.

YOUTH CONFESSES BURGLARY OF HOME

Harold Mayatt, 20-year-old youth of Monroe and Greenville, Miss., arrested late Friday with his uncle, G. B. Mayatt, 43, confessed yesterday to charges of breaking and entering the home of Sam Gunn in Ward Two late Friday afternoon, Sheriff Milton Coverdale said last night.

Young Mayatt, who is said to spend his time between estranged parents in Monroe and Greenville, went with Sheriff Coverdale and deputies to the Gunn home on the Rayville road yesterday morning, showed them how they had entered the country home and later took them to the hiding place of a .32-caliber Winchester rifle, which they had stolen from the house and hid in a ditch along the road.

A $35 suit of clothes, a safety razor and a flashlight, also stolen by the men, Sheriff Coverdale said, were recovered with their arrest near Rayville about 9:30 p.m. Friday.

The youth's uncle, who has refused to make a statement, is a former inmate of the Louisiana state penitentiary, Sheriff Coverdale said.

ATTACK MADE ON FRIENDS OF JEWS

Newspapers Assert They Deserve No Better Treatment Than Semitics

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Nazi anti-Semitism was extended today by sharp attacks on those who sympathize with Jews.

"These creatures, these friends of Jews, these servants of Jews, deserve no other treatment than that accorded Jews themselves," the Nuernberg newspaper Fraenkische Tageszeitung declared.

The Westdeutscher Beobachter of Cologne maintained that "our fellow citizens must not commiserate where commiseration is out of place; the elimination of the Jew from our life must be carried to the bitter end."

Some observers believed these attacks were the beginning of a wider campaign against Germans who think Nazi treatment of Jews unworthy of German traditions.

Letters kept piling up in foreign consulates, meanwhile, indicating hundreds of landlords were ousting Jews from their homes.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff reported approvingly how a Jewess was evicted and her four-room apartment made available to an Aryan family of seven.

There were other restrictive measures:

Indigent Jews were forbidden under an interior ministry decree to seek aid from public welfare bureaus but must turn to Jewish agencies.

All Jewish student loans were cancelled and repayment ordered within two weeks.

Nachtausgabe reported from New York that United States Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, recalled from Berlin for "reports and consultation," conferred only 14 minutes yesterday with Secretary of State Hull before the latter departed for Lima, Peru, to attend the Pan-American conference.

The newspaper inferred Wilson could hardly have said anything very bitter about the anti-Jewish violence here November 10 in the brief time between his arrival in New York and Secretary Hull's departure.

Jews faced the prospect that a billion mark ($400,000,000) punitive levy for the slaying of the German diplomat, Ernst Vom Rath, in Paris by a Polish Jew might, for many of them, exceed the 20 per cent share decreed on each fortune above $2,000.

It was officially reported that if any Jews failed to pay their share of the assessment for any reason, then other Jews would be held responsible for this deficit.

To help Jews turn valuables into cash to enable them to pay their part of the fine or to emigrate, a special "pawn shop" office was being established by the chamber of commerce and industry on orders of the economics ministry.

TRADE REVEALS INCREASED PACE

Prosperous Christmas Expected Following Good News Of Early Fall

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Business, striding toward what it expects to be a prosperous Christmas trade, paused long enough this week to eat turkey and reflect over good news.

A commerce department survey of retail and wholesale trade indicated an increased pace of merchandise distribution. This is important to maintenance of the well publicized advances in factory activity because failure of consumption to keep up with production might mean a temporary industrial setback in the next half year.

The department said nearly all of the surveyed cities had larger sales this week than in the preceding week and some of them reported passing the relatively good sales level of a year ago.

One factor in the trade improvement was the cold weather which spurred sales of winter clothing and accessories.

The wholesale market for textiles was described as "a little reactionary." Cotton and woolens quieted down, rayon improved and silk demand was weak.

Automobile sales were a particularly bright factor. At shows of new models, better sales than last year were reported, particularly in the higher price classes.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity hit a new high for more than a year, going to 92.5 per cent of the 1929-30 average, compared with 89.3 in the preceding week and 80.4 a year ago.

Mr. And Mrs. Reynolds Hosts On Thanksgiving

Reminiscent of the days when plantation life in the southland was at it's fullest and best, was the Thanksgiving day feast arranged by Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Reynolds at their plantation, "Synepoe."

This wonderful old place is numbered among the most beautiful and fertile of the southland. The long tables were placed in the rear of the big house occupied by one of the tenants. Logs were heaped high and their glowing coals furnished warmth and cheer as did the covered barbecue pit. Overhead were the towering trees planted more than a hundred years ago when the original owner prided himself on having one or more of every variety native to this particular locality.

Invited to share in the festivities were all members of the Reynolds family and a number of friends. Rev. L. T. Hastings offered the Thanksgiving grace. During the serving of the dinner, darkies from the plantation church choir sang spirituals.

Pumpkins encircled with fruits and vegetables were arranged down the center of the table. Huge trays of barbecued pork, chicken, lamb, beef and squirrel, bowls of salad, individual mince, apple and apricot pies and cakes of every description were included in the Thanksgiving feast. The guest list included 80 members of the plantation families and 50 additional guests. From out of town were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Martin and Miss Frances Martin of Ruston, Mr. and Mrs. John King, Miss Betty Ruth King and Master Ralph King, Jr., of Columbia, Mr. John W. King of Baton Rouge and Dr. Ralph King of Winnsboro.

Hales-Antley

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Antley, of Point, announce the marriage of their daughter, Fay, to Mr. Harvey Lee Hales, of Monroe, on April 18, 1938. They are now located in their new home at 204 McGuire street, in Cole addition.

Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Wooten of Mangham had as their guests for a four-course Thanksgiving dinner, Mrs. J. M. Sims and son, Rankin Windsor Sims, of Ruston; Mrs. Bishop, Mr. Willie Phillips and two sons, Don and Jim of Chicago; Mrs. Mattie Sims Phillips of Simsboro; and their daughter, Marjorie Wooten, who has come home from college to spend the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Sundial

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of.—Benj. Franklin.

By Eve C. Bradford

THE MOON, a silver crescent, rides high in the heavens these frosty nights and the stars look down upon a world tearing along at a hectic pace, striving to recapture the fine old art of living. And it's going to be an old-fashioned Christmas—with all the homespun warmth and good feeling and all the gay wrappings and bright trappings of yore. The frost is turning the holly trees into crimson flames and the mistletoe is hanging invitingly from the bare branches of the oaks. Soon the city streets will be a maze of colored lights and the shops windows will be filled with the things we would like to give our family and friends for Christmas gifts.

Fairy-tale romances weave patches of fantasy into our lives when we are young, so that baby dolls, trains and stuffed animals continue to intrigue the adult world as much as the youthful population of the "Doll and Toy World." If in doubt just visit toyland in any department store and see for yourself grownups playing with the toys that whisk them back to childhood and stirs the soul with the nostalgia of forgotten dreams.

Anniversaries stepped into prominence last week. At the Toby Bancroft home glasses were lifted high to Toby and Bessie Biedenharn, whose birthday anniversaries fall on the same day, and prompted Vada to gather the clan together for a dinner party. Vada trotted out the best napery and her silver service plates, goblets and what not and arranged a feast the guests are still talking about. Venison steaks and broiled wild duck brought down by Toby's trusty old shotgun on a recent hunting trip in the wilds of Madison parish, where he is the guest annually of friends who maintain a hunting lodge, formed the piece de resistance. Corks popped and sherry, dating back to Vada's and Toby's wedding day, was poured during the dinner hour. Bessie, radiant in a Chanel gown of blue, vowed that [illegible] before was her birthday so beautifully and lavishly remembered.

Speaking of the Bancrofts reminds one that they have a young lady daughter in the family. They suddenly realized that Arabella is growing up when she asked for a boudoir of her own. For nine years she has been happy and content in the nursery shared by her two young brothers, Ochiltree and Frederick Speed, but now things are changed—she is nine years old and feels she is of sufficient importance to have a room of her own. Arabella's needs furnished her parents food for thought, with the result that a partition between two closets was torn out and an interior decorator put to work to transform the room into a proper setting for one as lovely as Arabella. It will be in blue and gold to match Arabella's coloring.

Louise Cook and Lois Bernstein are two devoted sisters. They have never been separated on their wedding anniversaries, as they both fall on the same date. This year, as customary, they were together and with Milling and Duncan formed a happy foursome for dinner at the Cook home. They have agreed never to be apart on this day, conditions permitting.

India Stubbs says that Monroe visitors to Mexico City were, in the parlance of the street, "gypped" if they paid more than 15 cents for a corsage. Her daughter, India Chumney, goes marketing every morning and always takes home a cluster of orchids for her table. They cost 15 cents, our money, for a dozen or more. India writes of the joy of living in Mexico City and the fun she and Earl, her husband, are having learning to speak French and Spanish. The music, the flowers, the bright colors and the gayety all around them make life quite wonderful. Until they become satiated with the brightness all around them they will continue to enjoy this paradise. We are told that Americans do become tired of the eternal sunshine—they like a good old storm—dark skies and rolling clouds to vary their days.

Home for Christmas! The most beautiful words in all the world. Already plans are afoot in the Charles Reid and Roy Beaman homes to spend Christmas with their mother in the big, old family home in Houston. Winnie Helen and Fay Hilliard and their precious daughter, Helen, will be there and, of course, Doris and her doctor husband, Luther Vaughan, who went to Houston to live when they married two years ago.

Jennie Martin Reynolds has never bobbed her hair. She has always worn it simply parted and in a knot at the back of her head. Her hair dresser, experimenting with her long hair the other day, discovered the most enchanting style for her particular type. The hair is parted in the back and braided and then crossed on top, ending in a cluster of curls. It looks lovely and is the perfect coiffure for long hair.

When Louisette Trousdale was a care-free, fun-loving girl attending Sophie Newcomb, she never missed a Tulane-L. S. U. football game. After she married, however, things were different. She took home duties and motherhood seriously and the years slipped by, one after the other. Somehow she and George never found time to attend a Thanksgiving game. This year they simply walked out and for the first time in nine years Louisette sat on the side lines and cheered lustily as in the old days. French blood flows in Louisette's veins and that is one of the reasons why she is always vivacious, always charming and one of the most delightful companions imaginable. She speaks French fluently and whenever she gets excited she invariably chatters away in French—a custom her friends find most enchanting.

No two weddings are alike. Perhaps it is just the feel of them. The ritual is the same, the songs never differ and the wedding party invariably keeps step to Lohengrin. Nevertheless every wedding is different.

Four weddings last week, but not one alike. There was a try for simplicity in all them, yet nothing is really simple any more. Stella Vinson walked to the altar in a Hunter's green tailleur—a delightful selection for one who has titian hair. She also wore green orchids—something quite novel. Harriet Calloway, who married Herbert Fink, wore a flock of orchids on her teal blue tailleur. Louise Wood wore beige with brown fox furs and carried bronze chrysanthemums. Margaret Smith wore teal blue velvet with a cluster of pale pink camellias at her throat.

Bancroft, Biedenharn Birthdays Celebrated

Birthdays, milestones along the road of life, are wonderful events when they are celebrated in the midst of cherished friends and in a setting as beautiful as the T. O. Bancroft home on St. John drive.

Mr. Bancroft and Mrs. Henry Biedenharn observe their birthdays on the same date, so Mrs. Bancroft arranged a dinner party in their honor and banked the entire lower floor of her home in gorgeous white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Bancroft was wearing a Chantilly lace evening model encrusted with sapphire sequins. Mrs. Biedenharn, the central figure in the group of intimates, wore a distinctive Chanel gown of horizon blue, off-the-shoulder model, with corsage of orchids.

Aperitifs were passed among the guests before dinner, and during the dinner hour the wine glasses were filled with sherry of a vintage dating back to Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft's wedding day. It was saved for just such a joyous occasion.

The dinner table in the dining room, overlaid with Renaissance lace over pink satin, was florally adorned with a pyramid of pink asters, with pink tapers of graduated lengths burning in their midst. Two birthday cakes, gorgeous confections embossed in pink roses, graced either end of the silver appointed table.

Following the serving of dinner, two silver trays laden with packages, wrapped in the holiday colors, were placed before the celebrants. The contents created considerable merriment as they were of a laugh-provoking nature and suggestive of Mr. Bancroft's and Mrs. Biedenharn's hobbies.

Enjoying this gracious hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Biedenharn, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Lamkin, Mr. and Mrs. John Fox, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Slagle, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wright, Mr. and Mrs. George Trousdale, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Boardman.

An important item in Alma Norton Duffill's travel wardrobe for a flying tour through Central and South America is this sheath gown, shown under a smoky blue suede swagger jacket with beaded embroidery on the sleeves. Mrs. Duffill, important California designer, chose lace—because it's uncrushable as well as beautiful—for every outfit in her travel wardrobe. Among the items included are a suit of fabric-like lace, a wool lace for luncheons and cocktails and a cotton lace ensemble for sports.

Miss Johnnie Pickett Weds Frank Messinger

The wedding of Miss Johnnie Loraine Pickett, daughter of Mrs. John Pickett, and Mr. Frank Lee Messinger, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Messinger, was solemnized Thanksgiving day at the New Friendship Baptist church with Rev. J. L. Johnson performing the impressive ceremony. The church was decorated for the occasion in huge yellow chrysanthemums and fern.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. J. L. Johnson played an organ solo and Miss Bertha Pickett, accompanied at the piano by Miss Sue Parker, sang "O Promise Me." For the processional Mrs. Johnson played Mendelssohn's wedding march and, as the recessional, Lohengrin's march.

The bride had as her only attendant, Miss Doris Meeks of Ruston, who wore a dubonnet wool model with black accessories. Her flowers were orchid chrysanthemums.

Mr. Messinger had as his best man Mr. Arden Halterman. The Ushers were Mr. Earl Pickett and Mr. Dennis Pickett.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Z. D. Pickett, wore a teal blue crepe ensemble with dubonnet accessories. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden hair fern.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Pickett home.

Mr. and Mrs. Messinger are spending their honeymoon on the Gulf coast. Upon their return they will make their home with the groom's parents.

Mrs. Messinger is a graduate of the Bastrop High school and also attended Louisiana Tech at Ruston.

Mr. Messinger, a graduate of the Bastrop High school, is a valued employe in the parish surveyors' office.

Frances Louise Wood Weds Marion Chapman

Prominent Nuptial Ceremony Performed Friday Night At Flower-Banked First Methodist Church

Claiming prominence among the nuptials of the season was that of Miss Frances Louise Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood and Mr. Marion D. Chapman, at the First Methodist church Friday night, November 25, with the pastor, Rev. W. C. Scott, officiating.

Clouds of yellow chrysanthemums, banked extravagantly and artistically along the chancel rail, the altar and choir loft, were in beautiful harmony with the gowns worn by the bride and her attendant. The gold and bronze theme was observed in every detail.

While the ushers, Mr. Risdon W. Wood and Mr. Eugene J. Chapman, were seating the guests, the organist, Mrs. John Sholars, rendered a brilliant pre-nuptial concert, including "Melody in F," by Rubenstein, "To a Wild Rose," by MacDowell, and "Serenade," by Shubert. Mrs. Sholars also accompanied the soloists, Mrs. Clyde V. Sanders, who sang "Until," by Sanderson, and Mr. Charles Chapman, who sang the old favorite, "I Love You Truly."

Mrs. Joseph Mundo, Jr., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a smart costume suit of Boy Blue with dubonnet as accessories and carried a muff of chrysanthemums in shades varying from gold to bronze.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful three-piece tailleur of beige with brown accessories and carried a sheaf of golden chrysanthemums. For something old she wore a handsome heirloom bracelet worn by brides in the family for four generations.

Mr. Taylor J. Jones of Alexandria served as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Chapman left on a honeymoon trip and upon their return will be at home in this city, where Mr. Chapman is associated with the Natural Gas company.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. Mattie Crutsinger and daughters, of Dubberly, La.; Miss Susie Ardis of Shreveport; Mrs. D. L. Staples and daughter of Galion, Ark.; Dr. and Mrs. M. C. John of Stuttgart, Ark.

An informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents the night before the wedding to permit friends to view the beautiful wedding gifts and to cut the wedding cake, a delicious confection, beautifully embossed in white roses and valley lilies.

Miss Noe Entertains Before Fraternity Ball

Resembling a Godet print were the young ladies in their old-fashioned gowns with hoop skirts and tight-fitting basques, who thronged the flower banked drawing rooms of the James A. Noe home when their daughter, Miss May Noe, entertained the younger set with an open house, before the Delta Sigma ball on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel Wednesday night.

Miss Noe might have stepped from between the pages of an ante-bellum novel, so romantic and picturesque was the gown she wore. It was fashioned of white satin with tight-fitting basque and hoop skirt looped up with bows of cerise velvet showing a lace petticoat. On her head she wore a huge bow of cerise velvet with streamers falling to the hem line in the back.

Equally as lovely was the guest of honor, Miss Marion Thibout, of Atlanta, Ga., who accompanied her roommate at Sophie Newcomb college, Miss Jean Terzia, to Monroe for the Thanksgiving holidays. Miss Thibout wore a horizon blue taffeta model with hoop skirt and tight-fitting basque.

Miss Terzia, a beautiful, dark-eyed girl, was wearing a black satin and tulle gown with black velvet bows down the full length of the gown in the back.

With few exceptions the young ladies were wearing hoop skirts and tight-fitting bodices, now so much in vogue.

The refreshment table in the dining room, where trays laden with pastries, sandwiches and other confections were passed among the guests by white clad attendants, was covered with a handsome banquet cloth of point Venise. For central ornamentation fruits suggestive of the harvest season—rosy-cheeked apples, crimson pomegranates, avocados and clusters of purple grapes—were piled high in a flaring silver urn.

The guests, numbering members of the Delta Beta Sigma sorority, members of the Delta Beta Delta Sigma and Phi Kappa fraternities, motored at 10 o'clock to the terrace, where Delta Sigma members were hosts at one of the most brilliant events of the holiday season.

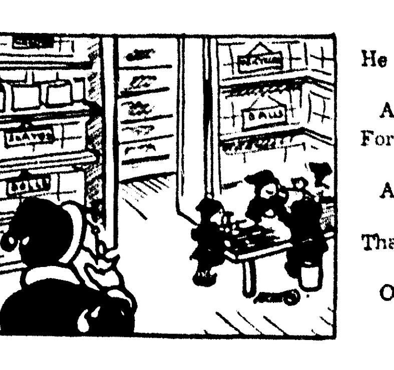
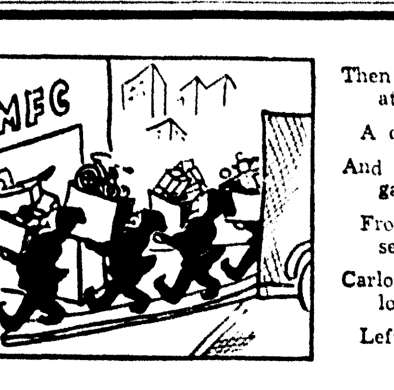
A Saga of Santa

It was only a day or two ago
In the frozen land of the daws
That a worried old man whom you may know—
White bearded Santa Claus—
Scratched his head and blinked his eyes
And gently rubbed his jaws.



He was worried, perplexed, and frightened to death
And really he had good cause,
For his storehouse was filled with newborn gifts
And the blasted old senate had passed new laws
That prevented his reindeer from flitting at night
Over cities and treetops. Poor Claus!



Then he jostled his brain to a creative mood,
A clever old duffer was he!
And he took all his doodads and gadgets and things
From here and from over the sea—
Carloads and truckloads and boatloads of gifts—

This wonderful old place is numbered among the most beautiful and fertile of the southland. The long tables were placed in the rear of the big house occupied by one of the tenants. Logs were heaped high and their glowing coals furnished warmth and cheer as did the covered barbecue pit. Overhead were the towering trees planted more than a hundred years ago when the original owner prided himself on having one or more of every variety native to this particular locality.

Invited to share in the festivities were all members of the Reynolds family and a number of friends. Rev. L. T. Hastings offered the Thanksgiving grace. During the serving of the dinner, darkies from the plantation church choir sang spirituals.

Pumpkins encircled with fruits and vegetables were arranged down the center of the table. Huge trays of barbecued pork, chicken, lamb, beef and squirrel, bowls of salad, individual mince, apple and apricot pies and cakes of every description were included in the Thanksgiving feast. The guest list included 80 members of the plantation families and 50 additional guests. From out of town were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Martin and Miss Frances Martin of Ruston, Mr. and Mrs. John King, Miss Betty Ruth King and Master Ralph King, Jr., of Columbia, Mr. John W. King of Baton Rouge and Dr. Ralph King of Winnsboro.

Hales-Antley

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Antley, of Point, announce the marriage of their daughter, Fay, to Mr. Harvey Lee Hales, of Monroe, on April 18, 1938. They are now located in their new home at 204 McGuire street, in Cole addition.

Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Wooten of Mangham had as their guests for a four-course Thanksgiving dinner, Mrs. J. M. Sims and son, Rankin Windsor Sims, of Ruston; Mrs. Bishop, Mr. Willie Phillips and two sons, Don and Jim of Chicago; Mrs. Mattie Sims Phillips of Simsboro; and their daughter, Marjorie Wooten, who has come home from college to spend the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Sundial

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of.—Benj. Franklin.

By Eve C. Bradford

THE MOON, a silver crescent, rides high in the heavens these frosty nights and the stars look down upon a world tearing along at a hectic pace, striving to recapture the fine old art of living. And it's going to be an old-fashioned Christmas—with all the homespun warmth and good feeling and all the gay wrappings and bright trappings of yore. The frost is turning the holly trees into crimson flames and the mistletoe is hanging invitingly from the bare branches of the oaks. Soon the city streets will be a maze of colored lights and the shops windows will be filled with the things we would like to give our family and friends for Christmas gifts.

Fairy-tale romances weave patches of fantasy into our lives when we are young, so that baby dolls, trains and stuffed animals continue to intrigue the adult world as much as the youthful population of the "Doll and Toy World." If in doubt just visit toyland in any department store and see for yourself grownups playing with the toys that whisk them back to childhood and stirs the soul with the nostalgia of forgotten dreams.

Anniversaries stepped into prominence last week. At the Toby Bancroft home glasses were lifted high to Toby and Bessie Biedenharn, whose birthday anniversaries fall on the same day, and prompted Vada to gather the clan together for a dinner party. Vada trotted out the best napery and her silver service plates, goblets and what not and arranged a feast the guests are still talking about. Venison steaks and broiled wild duck brought down by Toby's trusty old shotgun on a recent hunting trip in the wilds of Madison parish, where he is the guest annually of friends who maintain a hunting lodge, formed the piece de resistance. Corks popped and sherry, dating back to Vada's and Toby's wedding day, was poured during the dinner hour. Bessie, radiant in a Chanel gown of blue, vowed that never before was her birthday so beautifully and lavishly remembered.

Speaking of the Bancrofts reminds one that they have a young lady daughter in the family. They suddenly realized that Arabella is growing up when she asked for a boudoir of her own. For nine years she has been happy and content in the nursery shared by her two young brothers, Ochiltree and Frederick Speed, but now things are changed—she is nine years old and feels she is of sufficient importance to have a room of her own. Arabella's needs furnished her parents food for thought, with the result that a partition between two closets was torn out and an interior decorator put to work to transform the room into a proper setting for one as lovely as Arabella. It will be in blue and gold to match Arabella's coloring.

Louise Cook and Lois Bernstein are two devoted sisters. They have never been separated on their wedding anniversaries, as they both fall on the same date. This year, as customary, they were together and with Milling and Duncan formed a happy foursome for dinner at the Cook home. They have agreed never to be apart on this day, conditions permitting.

India Stubbs says that Monroe visitors to Mexico City were, in the parlance of the street, "gypped" if they paid more than 15 cents for a corsage. Her daughter, India Chumney, goes marketing every morning and always takes home a cluster of orchids for her table. They cost 15 cents, our money, for a dozen or more. India writes of the joy of living in Mexico City and the fun she and Earl, her husband, are having learning to speak French and Spanish. The music, the flowers, the bright colors and the gayety all around them make life quite wonderful. Until they become satiated with the brightness all around them they will continue to enjoy this paradise. We are told that Americans do become tired of the eternal sunshine—they like a good old storm—dark skies and rolling clouds to vary their days.

Home for Christmas! The most beautiful words in all the world. Already plans are afoot in the Charles Reid and Roy Beaman homes to spend Christmas with their mother in the big, old family home in Houston. Winnie Helen and Fay Hilliard and their precious daughter, Helen, will be there and, of course, Doris and her doctor husband, Luther Vaughan, who went to Houston to live when they married two years ago.

Jennie Martin Reynolds has never bobbed her hair. She has always worn it simply parted and in a knot at the back of her head. Her hair dresser, experimenting with her long hair the other day, discovered the most enchanting style for her particular type. The hair is parted in the back and braided and then crossed on top, ending in a cluster of curls. It looks lovely and is the perfect coiffure for long hair.

When Louisette Trousdale was a care-free, fun-loving girl attending Sophie Newcomb, she never missed a Tulane-L. S. U. football game. After she married, however, things were different. She took home duties and motherhood seriously and the years slipped by, one after the other. Somehow she and George never found time to attend a Thanksgiving game. This year they simply walked out and for the first time in nine years Louisette sat on the side lines and cheered lustily as in the old days. French blood flows in Louisette's veins and that is one of the reasons why she is always vivacious, always charming and one of the most delightful companions imaginable. She speaks French fluently and whenever she gets excited she invariably chatters away in French—a custom her friends find most enchanting.

No two weddings are alike. Perhaps it is just the feel of them. The ritual is the same, the songs never differ and the wedding party invariably keeps step to Lohengrin. Nevertheless every wedding is different.

Four weddings last week, but not one alike. There was a try for simplicity in all them, yet nothing is really simple any more. Stella Vinson walked to the altar in a Hunter's green tailleur—a delightful selection for one who has titian hair. She also wore green orchids—something quite novel. Harriet Calloway, who married Herbert Fink, wore a flock of orchids on her teal blue tailleur. Louise Wood wore beige with brown fox furs and carried bronze chrysanthemums. Margaret Smith wore teal blue velvet with a cluster of pale pink camellias at her throat.

Bancroft, Biedenharn Birthdays Celebrated

Birthdays, milestones along the road of life, are wonderful events when they are celebrated in the midst of cherished friends and in a setting as beautiful as the T. O. Bancroft home on St. John drive.

Mr. Bancroft and Mrs. Henry Biedenharn observe their birthdays on the same date, so Mrs. Bancroft arranged a dinner party in their honor and banked the entire lower floor of her home in gorgeous white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Bancroft was wearing a Chantilly lace evening model encrusted with sapphire sequins. Mrs. Biedenharn, the central figure in the group of intimates, wore a distinctive Chanel gown of horizon blue, off-the-shoulder model, with corsage of orchids.

Aperitifs were passed among the guests before dinner, and during the dinner hour the wine glasses were filled with sherry of a vintage dating back to Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft's wedding day. It was saved for just such a joyous occasion.

The dinner table in the dining room, overlaid with Renaissance lace over pink satin, was florally adorned with a pyramid of pink asters, with pink tapers of graduated lengths burning in their midst. Two birthday cakes, gorgeous confections embossed in pink roses, graced either end of the silver appointed table.

Following the serving of dinner, two silver trays laden with packages, wrapped in the holiday colors, were placed before the celebrants. The contents created considerable merriment as they were of a laugh-provoking nature and suggestive of Mr. Bancroft's and Mrs. Biedenharn's hobbies.

Enjoying this gracious hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Biedenharn, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Lamkin, Mr. and Mrs. John Fox, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Slagle, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wright, Mr. and Mrs. George Trousdale, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Boardman.

SHEATH GOWN

Miss Johnnie Pickett Weds Frank Messinger

The wedding of Miss Johnnie Loraine Pickett, daughter of Mrs. John Pickett, and Mr. Frank Lee Messinger, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Messinger, was solemnized Thanksgiving day at the New Friendship Baptist church with Rev. J. L. Johnson performing the impressive ceremony. The church was decorated for the occasion in huge yellow chrysanthemums and fern.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. J. L. Johnson played an organ solo and Miss Bertha Pickett, accompanied at the piano by Miss Sue Parker, sang "O Promise Me." For the processional Mrs. Johnson played Mendelssohn's wedding march and, as the recessional, Lohengrin's march.

The bride had as her only attendant, Miss Doris Meeks of Ruston, who wore a dubonnet wool model with black accessories. Her flowers were orchid chrysanthemums.

Mr. Messinger had as his best man Mr. Arden Halterman. The Ushers were Mr. Earl Pickett and Mr. Dennis Pickett.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Z. D. Pickett, wore a teal blue crepe ensemble with dubonnet accessories. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden hair fern.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Pickett home.

Mr. and Mrs. Messinger are spending their honeymoon on the Gulf coast. Upon their return they will make their home with the groom's parents.

Mrs. Messinger is a graduate of the Bastrop High school and also attended Louisiana Tech at Ruston.

Mr. Messinger, a graduate of the Bastrop High school, is a valued employe in the parish surveyors' office.

Form Sub-Deb Club; Plan Entertainments

The Sub-Deb club was organized in Monroe recently with a membership comprising Mary Lena Ballard, president; Joyce McKoin, secretary; Juanita Lippman, treasurer, and Mildred Keller, Doris Mae Beasley, Louise Sanderson, Marillyn Marshall and Ann Hayward. The sponsor is Miss Dean McKoin.

The charter members recently held a conversational hour in honor of the new members and the sponsor. The members are planning a dance and a series of progressive parties to be held soon. Friday, the members attended the theater in a body, and afterwards met at the home of Ann Hayward for an informal social hour.

Frances Louise Woo[d] Weds Marion Chapma[n]

Prominent Nuptial Ceremony Performed Friday Ni[ght] At Flower-Banked First Methodist Church

Claiming prominence among the nuptials of the season was that of Miss Frances Louise Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood and Mr. Marion D. Chapman, at the First Methodist church Friday night, November 25, with the pastor, Rev. W. C. Scott, officiating.

Clouds of yellow chrysanthemums, banked extravagantly and artistically along the chancel rail, the altar and choir loft, were in beautiful harmony with the gowns worn by the bride and her attendant. The gold and bronze theme was observed in every detail.

While the ushers, Mr. Risdon W. Wood and Mr. Eugene J. Chapman, were seating the guests, the organist, Mrs. John Sholars, rendered a brilliant pre-nuptial concert, including "Melody in F," by Rubenstein, "To a Wild Rose," by MacDowell, and "Serenade," by Shubert. Mrs. Sholars also accompanied the soloists, Mrs. Clyde V. Sanders, who sang "Until," by Sanderson, and Mr. Charles Chapman, who sang the old favorite, "I Love You Truly."

Mrs. Joseph Mundo, Jr., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a smart costume suit of Boy Blue with dubonnet as accessories and carried a muff of chrysanthemums in shades varying from gold to bronze.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful three-piece tailleur of beige with brown a[cces]sories and carried a sheaf of go[ld] chrysanthemums. For something [old] she wore a handsome heirloom b[race]let worn by brides in the family [for] four generations.

Mr. Taylor J. Jones of Alexa[ndria] served as best man.

Immediately following the cere[mony] Mr. and Mrs. Chapman left on a [hon]eymoon trip and upon their re[turn] will be at home in this city, w[here] Mr. Chapman is associated with [the] Natural Gas company.

Out-of-town guests attending [the] wedding were Mrs. Mattie Cruts[inger] and daughters, of Dubberly, La.; [Miss] Susie Ardis of Shreveport; Mrs. [illegible] Staples and daughter of Galion, [illegible] Dr. and Mrs. M. C. John of S[tutt]gart, Ark.

An informal reception was hel[d at] the home of the bride's parents [the] night before the wedding to pe[rmit] friends to view the beautiful wed[ding] gifts and to cut the wedding ca[ke, a] delicious confection, beautifully [em]bossed in white roses and valley l[ilies].

Miss Noe Entertains Before Fraternity Ball

Resembling a Godet print were the young ladies in their old-fashioned gowns with hoop skirts and tight-fitting basques, who thronged the flower banked drawing rooms of the James A. Noe home when their daughter, Miss May Noe, entertained the younger set with an open house, before the Delta Sigma ball on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel Wednesday night.

Miss Noe might have stepped from between the pages of an ante-bellum novel, so romantic and picturesque was the gown she wore. It was fashioned of white satin with tight-fitting basque and hoop skirt looped up with bows of cerise velvet showing a lace petticoat. On her head she wore a huge bow of cerise velvet with streamers falling to the hem line in the back.

Equally as lovely was the guest of honor, Miss Marion Thibout, of Atlanta, Ga., who accompanied her roommate at Sophie Newcomb college, Miss Jean Terzia, to Monroe for the Thanksgiving holidays. Miss Thibout wore a horizon blue taffeta model with hoop skirt and tight-fitting basque.

Miss Terzia, a beautiful, dark-eyed girl, was wearing a black satin and tulle gown with black velvet bows down the full length of the gown in the back.

With few exceptions the young ladies were wearing hoop skirts and tight-fitting bodices, now so much in vogue.

The refreshment table in the dining room, where trays laden with pastries, sandwiches and other confections were passed among the guests by white clad attendants, was covered with a handsome banquet cloth of point Venise. For central ornamentation fruits suggestive of the harvest season—rosy-cheeked apples, crimson pomegranates, avocados and clusters of purple grapes—were piled high in a flaring silver urn.

The guests, numbering members of the Delta Beta Sigma sorority, members of the Delta Beta Delta Sigma and Phi Kappa fraternities, motored at 10 o'clock to the terrace, where Delta Sigma members were hosts at one of the most brilliant events of the holiday season.

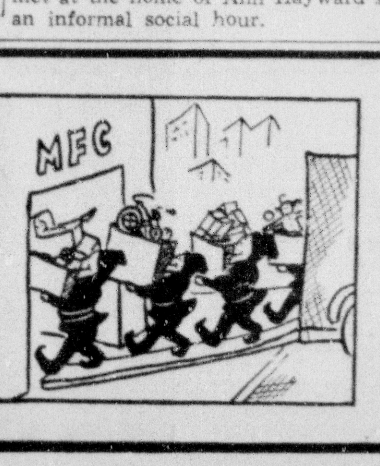
'A Saga of Santa

It was only a day or two ago
In the frozen land of the daws
That a worried old man whom you may know—
White bearded Santa Claus—
Scratched his head and blinked his eyes
And gently rubbed his jaws.

He was worried, perplexed, and frightened to death
And really he had good cause,
For his storehouse was filled with newborn gifts
And the blasted old senate had passed new laws
That prevented his reindeer from flitting at night
Over cities and treetops, Poor Claus!



Then he jostled his brain to a creative mood,
A clever old duffer was he!
And he took all his doodads and gadgets and things
From here and from over the sea—
Carloads and truckloads and boatloads of gifts—

Impressive Ceremony Marks Wedding Of Margaret Smith And Rene McCord

Rites Performed At Presbyterian Church

Couple Leaves On Trip To South Louisiana Following Marriage Rites On Thanksgiving Morning

Prominent among the nuptials of last week was that of Miss Margaret Neill Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Smith, and Mr. Rene Rives McCord, Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. McCord at the First Presbyterian church Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock, with the pastor, Rev. Ernest Duncan Holloway, officiating.

Superb bronze-colored chrysanthemums banked the chancel rail and altar and festooned the organ loft where the organist, Mr. Joseph Craig, was seated. He rendered a pre-nuptial concert and also accompanied the vocalist, Mrs. F. V. Allison, who sang in beautiful voice "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly."

The ushers were Mr. Arthur Smith, Jr., Mr. Frank Smith, Mr. Robert Cowden and Mr. W. B. Matthews.

The maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Katherine Doak Smith, wore a handsome ensemble of burgandy velvet and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. Charles Garretson served in the capacity of best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a smart costume of teal blue velvet with all accessories of the same lovely shade. Her corsage was of white camellias, bride's roses and valley lilies. For something old she wore the handsome heirloom brooch that belonged to her grandmother before her marriage.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCord left for New Orleans. Upon their return they will be at home at 519 Jackson street.

Mrs. McCord, a charming young woman and prominent in cultural, social and religious circles, is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High school, and attended Southwestern college at Memphis, Tenn., and Northeast Center of L. S. U. She is a member of the Crosley school faculty.

Mr. McCord is a graduate of the Monroe City High school and is associated with P. F. Collier and Son.

As a reception was not planned after the wedding, the cake was cut the night before, following rehearsal at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. McReynolds, with the bride's brothers, Messrs. Frank and Arthur Smith, the hosts.

The coffee table in the dining room, covered with [illegible] lace, had for central decor the beautifully embossed wedding cake. It was cut by the bride-to-be and served with coffee and [illegible] confections.

The guests were limited to members of the wedding party and members of the two families.

Miss Frances Spencer And Edwin Tanner Wed

Of interest to their many friends in this city is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Spencer of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Spencer, to Mr. Edwin G. Tanner, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Tanner, also of this city, Saturday, November 12, in El Dorado, Ark., with Rev. Daniels officiating.

Mrs. Tanner is a student of Ruth Mathis institute and Mr. Tanner is a former student of the same institution but is now connected with the Lane Wilson Seed company.

Mr. and Mrs. Tanner are now at home to their friends in this city.

Book Club Entertained By Mrs. H. V. Collins

Paper On Subject, 'New England's Progress Since The Pilgrim Fathers' Read By Mrs. D. H. Duncan

Mrs. H. V. Collins, assisted by Mrs. J. T. Sorrett and Mrs. J. Lodd Webb, entertained with charming informality the members of the Welcome Reading Book club Wednesday afternoon.

After a brief business session, a report was given by Mrs. Dudley Stone, committee chairman, describing the hundreds of fine volumes the G. B. [illegible] library [illegible] through the club project.

A Thanksgiving poem, "I Thank Thee Lord," was read by Mrs. George Fink. A quotation by O'Reilly, "Here, on this rock, and on this sterile soil began the kingdom, not of kings, but New England," was read in unison.

"New England's Progress Since the Pilgrim Fathers" was read by Mrs. D. H. Duncan. She said in part: "No Thanksgiving program would be complete without mention of those pioneers who are responsible for this great land, 'Our Pilgrim Fathers.'

"We know they came to the rocky and barren coast of New England not for exploration reasons nor the greed of riches as did the Spaniards and Frenchmen, but they came to build a country in which to found homes and to reproduce in the wilderness the self supporting, self governing rural community of the old country.

"We can think of their daring and heroism, the hardships endured by them, and wonder at their courage.

"The name, 'New England,' though no longer a governmental significance, is still applied to the group of states in the extreme northeastern corner of the United States. It was first applied in 1614 by Captain John Smith to the territory between Penobscot and Cape Cod.

"The states are Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"New England was settled over three hundred years ago by Conformists and as a result, in spite of the harshness of the Puritan creed, New England pioneered into political democracy, fired the first gun at the British, drove wagons and rails across the Western Reserve, started new religions, founded public schools and libraries and in the nineteenth century gave us a philosophy and a literature.

"New England also was, from the first days in Plymouth, concerned with industry, was far better adapted to meet it than the rest of the country. Now the leadership is being challenged.

"New England has one industry that no one can take from it—the summer resort industry; another that shares its troubles with the country, agriculture; and one which is highly potential for the future, timber growing.

"In the early days it may safely be said that New England, chiefly Massachusetts and Virginia, supplied the bulk of intellectual curiosity to the nation.

"Liberalism in religion was born in the Puritan [illegible] and [illegible] an ardent champion in Thomas Jefferson of Virginia.

"Harvard [illegible] William and Mary college [illegible] of being the first American college.

"New England as a whole is still progressing as well as holding its own in many ways. [illegible] for a long time [illegible] dominated by traditions of [illegible] ness, sound taste, and Puritan conscientiousness."

Mrs. Duncan concluded her paper with the statement:

"Vermont still leads all the states of the Union in the per cent of native [illegible] White, and Massachusetts is a close second, as a recent survey showed."

Mrs. Grady Hicks' paper, "The Rise of Silas Lapham," by W. D. Howells, was charmingly presented in her absence by Mrs. Warren Gregory.

Members present were Mrs. Frank E. Black, Mrs. John C. Beer, Mrs. Henson Clem, Mrs. H. F. Collins, Mrs. J. Norman Clem, Mrs. D. H. Duncan, Mrs. J. Thomas Eubanks, Mrs. W. C. Faulk, Mrs. George Fink, Mrs. R. H. R. Gibson, Mrs. E. C. [illegible], Mrs. Warren Gregory, Mrs. M. R. Hatcher, Mrs. M. L. Johnson, Mrs. Marvin Johnson, Mrs. E. E. Lawson, Mrs. Lewis Langford, Mrs. H. A. Moore, Mrs. J. D. Petty, Mrs. Joe Barnes, Mrs. J. F. Sorrett, Mrs. Dean Selig, Mrs. Dudley Stone, Mrs. Charles [illegible], Mrs. J. Lodd Webb and Mrs. J. R. White. Visitors were Mrs. H. E. Thain and Mrs. George Phelps.

Miss Frances Kathan Weds Emmett C. Craig

A wedding which claimed the interest of a wide circle of friends in northeast Louisiana was that of Miss Frances Kathan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Joseph Kathan of Tendal, and Mr. Emmett Cox Craig, son of the late William S. Craig and Mrs. Bertha Monette Craig, which was solemnized at the Tallulah Methodist church November 20.

White cathedral tapers in tall candelabra with baskets of large white chrysanthemums against a background of green formed a beautiful setting for the impressive double ring ceremony read by the pastor, Rev. D. W. Poole.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. James Gilfoil, who also accompanied Mr. George Kimbrough, who sang "A Perfect Day" and "I Love You Truly." Mendelssohn's wedding march was used for the processional and Lohengrin's for the recessional. During the ceremony "Indian Love Call" was played.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Joan Kathan, maid of honor, Mrs. Ward Edwards, matron of honor, Mrs. Tovell Marston of Houston, Tex., [illegible]

He rendered a pre-nuptial concert and also accompanied the vocalist, Mrs. F. V. Allison, who sang in beautiful voice "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly."

The ushers were Mr. Arthur Smith, Jr., Mr. Frank Smith, Mr. Robert Cowden and Mr. W. B. Matthews.

The maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Katherine Doak Smith, wore a handsome ensemble of burgandy velvet and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. Charles Garretson served in the capacity of best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a smart costume of teal blue velvet with all accessories of the same lovely shade. Her corsage was of white camellias, bride's roses and valley lilies. For something old she wore the handsome heirloom brooch that belonged to her grandmother before her marriage.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCord left for New Orleans. Upon their return they will be at home at 519 Jackson street.

Mrs. McCord, a charming young woman and prominent in cultural, social and religious circles, is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High school and attended Southwestern college at Memphis, Tenn., and Northeast Center of L. S. U. She is a member of the Crosley school faculty.

Mr. McCord is a graduate of the Monroe City High school and is associated with P. F. Collier and Son.

As a reception was not planned after the wedding, the cake was cut the night before, following rehearsal at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. McReynolds, with the bride's brothers, Messrs. Frank and Arthur Smith, the hosts.

The coffee table in the dining room, overlaid with handsome lace, had for central decor the beautifully embossed wedding cake. It was cut by the bride-to-be and served with coffee and numerous other confections.

The guests were limited to members of the wedding party and members of the two families.

One of the gracious courtesies extended Miss Smith before her marriage to Mr. McCord was a supper party on board the Brown Kraft, with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Moore hosts, who took this opportunity to present their guest of honor with a piece of silver in the Buttercup pattern.

Book Club Entertained By Mrs. H. V. Collins

Paper On Subject, 'New England's Progress Since The Pilgrim Fathers,' Read By Mrs. D. H. Duncan

Mrs. H. V. Collins, assisted by Mrs. J. T. Surrett and Mrs. J. Lady Webb, entertained with charming informality the members of the Welcome Branch Book club Wednesday afternoon.

After a brief business session, a report was given by Mrs. Dudley Stone, committee chairman, describing the hundreds of fine volumes the G. B. Cooley sanatorium library is receiving through the club project.

A Thanksgiving poem, "I Thank Thee Lord," was read by Mrs. George Fink. A quotation by O'Reilly, "Here, on this rock, and on this sterile soil, began the kingdom, not of kings, but New England," was read in unison.

"New England's Progress Since the Pilgrim Fathers" was read by Mrs. D. H. Duncan. She said in part: "No Thanksgiving program would be complete without mention of those pioneers, who are responsible for this great land, 'Our Pilgrim Fathers.'

"We know they came to the rocky and barren coast of New England not for explorative reasons nor the greed of riches, as did the Spaniards and Frenchmen, but they came to build a country in which to found homes and to reproduce in the wilderness the self-supporting, self-governing rural community of the old country.

"We can think of their daring and heroism, the hardships endured by them, and wonder at their courage.

"The name, 'New England,' though no longer a governmental significance, is still applied to the group of states in the extreme northeastern corner of the United States. It was first applied in 1614 by Captain John Smith to the territory between Penobscot and Cape Cod.

"The states are Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"New England was settled over three hundred years ago by Conformists and as a result, in spite of the harshness of the Puritan creed, New England pioneered into political democracy, fired the first gun at the British, drove wagons and rails across the Western Reserve, started new religions, founded public schools and libraries and in the nineteenth century gave us a philosophy and a literature.

"New England also was, from the first days in Plymouth, concerned with industry, was far better adapted to meet it than the rest of the country. Now the leadership is being challenged.

"New England has one industry that no one can take from it—the summer resort industry; another that shares its troubles with the country, agriculture; and one which is highly potential for the future, timber growing.

"In the early days it may safely be said that New England, chiefly Massachusetts and Virginia, supplied the bulk of intellectual curiosity to the nation.

"Liberalism in religion was born in the Puritan church and found an ardent champion in Thomas Jefferson of Virginia.

"Harvard and William and Mary college ran a close race for the honor of being the first American college.

"New England as a whole is still progressing, as well as holding its own in many ways and seems destined for a long time to be the site of educational institutions of great influence, dominated by traditions of thoroughness, sound taste, and Puritan conscientiousness."

Mrs. Duncan concluded her paper with the statement:

"Vermont still leads all the states of the Union in the per cent of native sons in 'Who's Who,' and Massachusetts is a close second, as a recent survey showed."

Mrs. Grady Hicks' paper, "The Rise of Silas Lapham," by W. D. Halvells, was charmingly presented in her absence by Mrs. Warren Gregory.

Members present were Mrs. Frank E. Black, Mrs. John C. Best, Mrs. Henson Coon, Mrs. H. F. Collins, Mrs. J. Norman Coon, Mrs. D. H. Duncan, Mrs. J. Thomas Eubanks, Mrs. W. C. Faulk, Mrs. George Fink, Mrs. R. H. B. Gibson, Mrs. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. Warren Gregory, Mrs. M. R. Hausher, Mrs. M. L. Johnson, Mrs. Marvyn Johnson, Mrs. E. E. Lawson, Mrs. Lewis Langford, Mrs. H. A. Moore, Mrs. J. D. Petty, Mrs. Joe Ramey, Mrs. J. F. Surrett, Mrs. Dean Selig, Mrs. Dudley Stone, Mrs. Charles Swain, Mrs. J. Lord Webb and Mrs. J. R. White. Visitors were Mrs. H. E. Thain and Mrs. George Phebus.

Miss Frances Kathan Weds Emmett C. Craig

A wedding which claimed the interest of a wide circle of friends in northeast Louisiana was that of Miss Frances Kathan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Joseph Kathan of Tendal, and Mr. Emmett Cox Craig, son of the late William S. Craig and Mrs. Bertha Monette Craig, which was solemnized at the Tallulah Methodist church November 20.

White cathedral tapers in tall candelabra with baskets of large white chrysanthemums against a background of green formed a beautiful setting for the impressive double ring ceremony read by the pastor, Rev. D. W. Poole.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. James Gilfoil, who also accompanied Mr. George Kimbrough, who sang "A Perfect Day" and "I Love You Truly." Mendelssohn's wedding march was used for the processional and Lohengrin's for the recessional. During the ceremony "Indian Love Call" was played.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Joan Kathan, maid of honor, Mrs. Ward Edwards, matron of honor, Mrs. Tovell Marston of Houston, Tex., Miss Helen Margan of Rayville, and Miss Alice Ware. They wore floor-length hoop models of moire taffeta in the new fall shades of Dutch tile, Spanish raisin, cerise, vert royal and celebration, respectively, with heart-shaped hats to match and carried muffs with old fashioned bouquets. Mr. Craig had as his best man his brother, Mr. Frank Craig. The ushers were Mr. Cliff Adams, Mr. Arthur Bray, Mr. Walter Scott, Jr., and Dr. George M. Webb of Shreveport. Little David Lee Hurley carried the rings in a large white chrysanthemum.

The bride, who entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, wore a beautiful Duchess satin model with finger tip corded veil and seed pearl coronet. Her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley.

A reception for members of the bridal party, relatives and intimate friends was held at the home of the bride's parents immediately following the ceremony. Mrs. R. N. Ware, Jr., welcomed the guests. Mrs. J. M. Haynie of Helens, Ark., and Mrs. G. S. Meehan of Hope, Ark., presided at the lace-draped refreshment table which was centered with the tiered wedding cake flanked by white tapers in crystal candelabra. Assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. C. T. Hudson of Houston, Miss Hazel Kathan, Mrs. D. C. Johnson and Mrs. J. Maurice Frazier of Waverly and Monroe.

Mrs. Craig changed her wedding raiment for a smart black wool tailleur with cross fox chubby coat and black accessories. Following a honeymoon trip the couple will reside at Mansford plantation. The bride is a graduate of the Tallulah High school and Stevens college. Mr. Craig graduated at Tallulah High school, University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., and Tyler Business college, Tyler, Tex. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

George Patterson of Louisiana State university is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Patterson.

FAMILY GROUP IN RADIO PROGRAMS

Mrs. Louie Carlisle Kimple and two children, Kathleen and Billy, of Dallas, Tex., formerly of this city, who are appearing in a series of radio programs broadcast over station KRLD.

Mrs. Kimple will be remembered here as Miss Gladys Halsell, formerly a member of the Crosley school faculty.

Mrs. Kimple and her two talented children are appearing in an educational broadcast giving the early history of Texas in dramatic form, with the skits written especially for them.

Her children are harmony singers, instrumentalists on accordion, clarinet and saxophone, and also take part in the skits written especially for them. Adult parts in the script are taken by members of the Civic theater of Dallas. It is an almost unprecedented occurrence for a mother and three children to take part on the same program, and letters to the deputy superintendent of schools indicate great interest and appreciation in these programs.

The plays are written by Mr. David Switzer who is now doing research work on Indian lore in order to write three more impressive "Little Tejas" stories which will be presented after Christmas, with Billy Kimple taking the part of "Little Tejas."

The Kimple children have been presented in revues since they were three years old. They were presented to an audience of five thousand people while vacationing at Daytona Beach, Fla., photographed in their colorful cowboy costumes for the Daytona Beach Sun Record and invited to appear at many clubs and on radio while there. Louie, Jr., not in the picture, was clarinet soloist with the greater Dallas band at the world's fair in Chicago at the age of 12, and they were presented by Vincent Lopez in his all-star revue in Dallas.

Mrs. Kimple has two sisters, Mrs. Fred Meyer and Mrs. C. E. Fauntleroy, also a brother, John C. Halsell, residing in this city.

Georgia Tucker P.-T. A. Holds Varied Program

Students Present 'New Trends In Education,' Written And Directed By Mrs. Seymour Solomon

The November meeting of the Georgia Tucker Parent-Teacher association was held in the school auditorium Monday afternoon and a most interesting and instructive program on "New Trends in Education" was presented, interpreted by children of the Georgia Tucker school and written and directed by Mrs. Seymour Solomon.

Carolyn Rose Strauss announced each part on the program, which was opened by selections by the band, led by Miles Sager in the absence of the band master.

The numbers given by the band were "Assembly Hour Overture," "Lead on March," and "Stand By the Schools."

Elmer Richards, Jr., a member of the band, made a brief talk, stating that his experience in the band had taught him to work harmoniously in the spirit of good team work for the good of all.

A playlet, "A Library Conversation," was presented by Ann Crandall, Roderick Johnson and Alfred Barlow.

The method of school work in physical education was explained by Suzanne Phebus.

A group of fourth grade girls demonstrated the work by singing and dancing the "Shoemaker's Dance."

A talk on art was made by Betty Jo Neblett, and a poster drawn by Jimmie La Pietra and portraying the formation of good habits, was exhibited.

A group of sixth grade girls sang two selections, "Midsummer Night" and the "Singing Bird," directed by Miss Gertrude Hart.

Miss Patsy Snelling spoke on the music of the school.

The duties of the junior patrol leaders were explained by Tommy Sandridge, Harvey Cragon, Tommy Wright, Gladden Walters, Jimmie Clark and Luther Steward.

Pupils of the first grade, under the direction of Mrs. A. R. Doughty, demonstrated methods of reading from stories flashed on the screen.

The program was concluded with an invitation extended by Carolyn Rose Strauss to visit the library.

During a short business session of the association, Mrs. Elmer Richards presided and the minutes were read by Mrs. X. Holt. Mrs. B. B. Handy, chairman of the membership committee, made a report and urged more parents to become members of the P.-T. A. Mrs. Preston Fergus, finance chairman, Mrs. J. M. Drouett, and Mrs. Sam Smith, publications chairman, also made reports.

Announcement was made by Miss Myrtle Rodgers that a dedication ceremony of the bird sanctuary would be made Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Bernstein park. The sanctuary will be called the Pearl Lowery bird and wild life sanctuary, in honor of Mrs. George Lowery, who has devoted her life to this enterprise.

Miss Rodgers named Mrs. Elmer Richards, Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. R. W. Cretney and Mrs. Seymour Solomon members of a committee for the equipment curriculum study course.

Miss Marjorie Oliver, guest speaker, was introduced by Mrs. Richards and made a splendid talk on "New Trends in Education."

Miss Oliver described the changes that are being incorporated into the schools of Louisiana and into the school system of Monroe. She stated that the procedure of the new curriculum was accomplished by setting up a little democracy in the school room. Children are taught to plan so that they may intelligently think an undertaking through, she said.

According to Miss Oliver, the teacher is not the "prima donna," but remains in the background, allowing the child to take the responsibility. She does none of the things for him that he can profitably do for himself. Though she is in the background, her position is one of even greater importance, in the capacity of a wise and skillful guide.

In closing, Miss Oliver stated that the schools are trying to give to society that which society has been asking for—children better fitted to take their places in the world and to live in a democracy.

The program was followed by a business session.

At the conclusion sandwiches and tea were served in the home economics room by Miss Rogillio and Mesdames Elbert, Thompson, Manning and Gillis.

Grayson

The Grayson P.-T. A. met in the home economics room with 26 members present. Mrs. Gove Davis presided in the absence of Mrs. J. J. McKeithen, president.

The program consisted of an old-fashioned spelling lesson, in which each person tried to turn the other down, as compared to the new method which was interestingly presented by Mrs. Lucille Woolridge and a few members of her second grade class.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and reports of the various committees were given. Mrs. F. L. Johnston announced the winners of the membership campaign: Miss Clydia Biggs, first, with 28 members; and Mrs. Joe Sanders, second, with 23 members.

Floyd Johnston, reporting on the bench project, said that work had begun on one-half of the benches.

A few announcements of local interest were made and the meeting adjourned to meet again Wednesday, November 30.

Marion

During National Book week, "Books as Partners in Progress" was the theme of an interesting program presented by the Library club at a meeting of the Marion P.-T. A. The program gave the history of Children's Book week and afforded much pleasure for children and parents by parading book characters such as "Dr. Doolittle," "Alice in Wonderland," Rip Van Winkle," "Daniel Boone" and others, in costumes.

The president presided over the business meeting at which a motion was put before the house and carried that the P.-T. A. sponsor a kindergarten as a project for the year. The fifth grade won the room award.

Miss Alethia Cole, a WPA recreational director, assisted in getting up the program and also with serving refreshments in the gaily decorated school library.

Semper Fidelis Class Holds Hotel Banquet

Semper Fidelis class of the West Monroe First Methodist church held their annual banquet in the Cameo room of Hotel Virginia, Friday evening. Thirty members of the class and their guests were seated around the handsomely appointed table. Plaques of white chrysanthemums, the class flower, and tall white tapers were placed along the board in cathedral-esque arrangement. The place cards and program were symbolic of the Thanksgiving season.

Mrs. O. N. Reynolds, as toastmistress, presided in charming and gracious manner, interspersing witticisms with clever bits of verse throughout the interesting and inspirational program. The invocation was given by Mrs. F. C. McConnell. Mrs. Reynolds presented the officers, introducing first Mrs. C. Karlos Smith, the class teacher, expressing appreciation for her "Hour of Sabbath Talks" and for her kind and sympathetic leadership. Mrs. Smith's response was a beautiful and touching tribute to the group of young women.

Mrs. J. E. Whitaker, president of the class, Mrs. E. L. Page, vice-president and Mrs. Gregory Warren, secretary, were introduced. Miss Betty Rinehart delighted the group with two vocal numbers, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Babbi." Miss Maida McClendon accompanied Miss Rinehart and also contributed several brilliant piano selections.

Mrs. J. Norman Coon, one of Monroes most versatile entertainers, received an ovation when she was introduced. She is a great favorite and is especially welcome when she gives dramatic readings. A clever little skit, "Love In Any Language," called for an encore and Mrs. Coon responded with characteristic grace.

The evening's program was concluded with Mrs. A. D. Tisdale's illuminating review of "The Citadel," by Cronnen. Considerable time had been devoted to the study of this novel as manifested in the brilliant review.

Parker Redmond, who is attending Rice Institute, Houston, Tex., and Matthew Redmond, Jr., student at Louisiana Tech, Ruston, are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Redmond, during the Thanksgiving vacation.

Early Ouachita History Recounted In Address

Charles Mitchell Lifts Veil Separating Progress Of Today From Period Shrouded In Antiquity

If there is something you would like to know about the history of the Ouachita valley ask Mr. Charles Mitchell. He has lifted the veil that separates this parish from the things of today and the things of yesterday and glimpsed the old Indian trails leading to the river where all the commerce of early days was carried on. He is considered authority because he has plunged beneath the surface of things and tells in accurate manner of the settlement of the Ouachita country.

Speaking before the Ouachita Valley Historical society, recently organized in this city, he said in part:

"When we speak of the Ouachita Valley or Ouachita country it may be from a geographic standpoint or it may be that we are referring to it as a political subdivision. From the earliest accounts of this territory we find it spoken of as the Ouachita country. When Don Juan Filhiol was sent up here as resident commandant it was as civil commandant over the Ouachita country.

"While very little is known of the early history of the Ouachita valley, we do know that it dates back to the age of the mound builders. All about us we see evidence of their former occupancy. Further we know that the culture of some of these former inhabitants was of the highest order as evidenced by the pottery removed from the Glendora site and from other mound sites in the Ouachita valley. Some of the pieces found on the Glendora site were really beautiful works of art. The account of this expedition was reported by Clarence B. Moore in his "Antiquities of the Ouachita Valley" which was published by the Philadelphia Academy of Science in 1909. This work is beautifully illustrated, in colors, with some of the places that were recovered, and Dr. Moore's account of his excavations is most interesting and instructive.

"The written history of the Ouachita valley dates from 1542 when De Soto passed this way and visited at several Indian villages on the Ouachita. In 1687, the survivors of La Salle's second expedition traversed the Ouachita country, and in 1700, while Bienville was with the Taensa, he met some Ouachitas who had come to the Lake of the Taensa, now called Lake St. Joseph, to trade salt. So he made a trip to the Ouachita. From this evidence we know that this immediate territory has been occupied for at least 400 years.

"Very little is known of the first white settlers, and what we do have is very fragmentary. We do, however, find the names of some of these early sojourners perpetuated in the names of some of our rivers, bayous, prairies and points along the river. This could be made the subject of a paper to be given at some future date and would prove both interesting and instructive—I refer to a paper on "Place Names of the Ouachita Valley."

"It is quite probable that the mounds scattered over the valley of the Ouachita were the works of Indians long before the period when the French and Spanish governments alternately occupied it.

"The early history of the Ouachita valley is wrapped in twilight—Indian traditions are lost—and all that speaks of the events of the hundreds of years beyond the year 1782 are those silent mounds. It is true there are grand old swamps with their oaks covered all over with moss like flowing beard—the same hills behind whose summits the same sun sank to rest, and the same river as when these woods were peopled with Indians, but all else how changed. "Lo, the poor Indian, whose untutored mind, saw God in the clouds, and heard him in the wind," has left faint trace of his habits and life.

The Acadians, or Normans, who visited the country about the year 1640 saw a vast wilderness peopled with Indians who were engaged in hunting and fishing and in preparing bears oil as they did one hundred years ago. Could those adventurers revisit the place now, they would find naught but the hum of busy life. If the year when the Norman or Acadian first left his foot print on the banks of the Ouachita is the one from which to date the "age of Monroe," then the Bulletin is mistaken in fixing the time in 1782.

"It may be proper for the citizens of Monroe to celebrate its second centennial. The orator of the occasion will have a beautiful and interesting subject, and there might be a little romance thrown into it. He could tell of the dusky form of the hunter when seen in the shades of the evening returning from the hills, or from the swamps after the chase for the deer was over, or of the happy Indian maid as she floated upon the waters in her twilight canoe. Then he could tell of the burial rites of the Indian, two dead centuries past. These rites are still preserved by the few Indians who linger among us. They have gone towards the setting sun, but the Choctaw Indian has noble traits—he was and is the friend of the white man.

"Where Monroe is situated was certainly the camping ground, or village, or home of these Indians two centuries past—everything indicates it. They made no resistance when the French occupied the province of Louisiana in 1699 under D'Iberville. On the contrary, they assisted in every warfare against the Spanish. The adventurous Acadian or Norman, who visited the locality about the year 1640 in all probability reported the condition of the country, its resources and its fertility, to the French authorities and perchance D'Iberville established the first post where the city is situated. Certain it is, however, that upon the authority of Monette, some Frenchmen stood on the banks of the Ouachita river as stated, over two hundred years ago, where Monroe is situated."

Miss Stella Vinson Becomes Bride Of Clarence Few Of New Orleans

Small, Intimate Group Present At Ceremony

Monroe Artist And Groom Will Reside At Crescent City Following Honeymoon Trip To Memphis

Weddings came into prominence last week, rivaling in interest the Thanksgiving festivities. Of paramount interest was the marriage of Miss Stella Vinson talented and cultured daughter of the late Michael Rinehart Vinson and Nannie Haltom Vinson, and Mr. Clarence Pruitt Few, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Ignatuis Steven Few of Texarkana, Thanksgiving morning at 9 o'clock at the Methodist parsonage, with Rev. Walter Scott officiating. The double ring ceremony was used.

The ceremony, characterized by simplicity, was witnessed by a few intimate friends and relatives.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Walter Rinehart Vinson, wore a stunning hunter's green tailleur with a short jacket and deep wide collar of fox fur. Her accessories were of brown and she wore an exquisite corsage of green orchids and valley lilies.

Immediately following hte ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Few left for a honeymoon in Memphis, Tenn. They will be at home later in New Orleans, headquarters for Mr. Few, who is auditor for a large concern with business interests in Oklahoma, Mississippi and Kentucky.

The bride, a prominent figure in cultural circles of this city, where she has maintained an art studio for several years, was graduated from Louisiana Tech in Ruston. She is a finished musician and has been associated with music clubs since residing in Monroe. The departure of Mrs. Few will be deeply regretted as the niche occupied by one so gifted is always hard to fill.

Mr. Few is a descendant of a prominent North Carolina family. William P. Few was one of the signers of the constitution.

FAMILY GROUP IN RADIO PROGRAMS

Mrs. Louie Carlisle Kimple and two children, Kathleen and Billy, of Dallas, Tex., formerly of this city, who are appearing in a series of radio programs broadcast over station KRLD.

Mrs. Kimple will be remembered here as Miss Gladys Halsell, formerly a member of the Crosley school faculty.

Mrs. Kimple and her two talented children are appearing in an educational broadcast giving the early history of Texas in dramatic form, with the skits written especially for them.

Her children are harmony singers, instrumentalists on accordion, clarinet and saxophone, and also take part in the skits written especially for them. Adult parts in the script are taken by members of the Civic theater of Dallas. It is an almost unprecedented occurrence for a mother and three children to take part on the same program, and letters to the deputy superintendent of schools indicate great interest and appreciation in these programs.

The plays are written by Mr. David Switzer who is now doing research work on Indian lore in order to write three more impressive "Little Tejas" stories which will be presented after Christmas, with Billy Kimple taking the part of "Little Tejas."

The Kimple children have been presented in revues since they were three years old. They were presented to an audience of five thousand people while vacationing at Daytona Beach, Fla., photographed in their colorful cowboy costumes for the Daytona Beach Sun Record and invited to appear at many clubs and on radio while there. Louie, Jr., not in the picture, was clarinet soloist with the greater Dallas band at the world's fair in Chicago at the age of 12, and they were presented by Vincent Lopez in his all-star revue in Dallas.

Mrs. Kimple has two sisters, Mrs. Fred Meyer and Mrs. C. E. Fauntleroy, also a brother, John C. Halsell, residing in this city.

Georgia Tucker P.-T. A. Holds Varied Program

Students Present 'New Trends In Education,' Written And Directed By Mrs. Seymour Solomon

The November meeting of the Georgia Tucker Parent-Teacher association was held in the school auditorium Monday afternoon and a most interesting and instructive program on "New Trends in Education" was presented, interpreted by children of the Georgia Tucker school and written and directed by Mrs. Seymour Solomon.

Carolyn Rose Strauss announced each part on the program, which was opened by selections by the band, led by Miles Sager in the absence of the band master.

The numbers given by the band were "Assembly Hour Overture," "Lead on March," and "Stand By the Schools."

Elmer Richards, Jr., a member of the band, made a brief talk, stating that his experience in the band had taught him to work harmoniously in the spirit of good team work for the good of all.

A playlet, "A Library Conversation," was presented by Ann Crandall, Roderick Johnson and Alfred Barlow.

The method of school work in physical education was explained by Suzanne Phebus.

A group of fourth grade girls demonstrated the work by singing and dancing the "Shoemaker's Dance."

A talk on art was made by Betty Jo Neblett, and a poster drawn by Jimmie La Pietra and portraying the formation of good habits, was exhibited.

A group of sixth grade girls sang two selections, "Midsummer Night" and the "Singing Bird," directed by Miss Gertrude Hart.

Miss Patsy Snelling spoke on the music of the school.

The duties of the junior patrol leaders were explained by Tommy Sandridge, Harvey Cragon, Tommy Wright, Gladden Walters, Jimmie Clark and Luther Steward.

Pupils of the first grade, under the direction of Mrs. A. R. Doughty, demonstrated methods of reading from stories flashed on the screen.

The program was concluded with an invitation extended by Carolyn Rose Strauss to visit the library.

During a short business session of the association, Mrs. Elmer Richards presided and the minutes were read by Mrs. X. Holt. Mrs. B. B. Handy, chairman of the membership committee, made a report and urged more parents to become members of the P.-T. A. Mrs. Preston Fergus, finance chairman, Mrs. J. M. Drouett, and Mrs. Sam Smith, publications chairman, also made reports.

Announcement was made by Miss Myrtle Rodgers that a dedication ceremony of the bird sanctuary would be made Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Bernstein park. The sanctuary will be called the Pearl Lowery bird and wild life sanctuary, in honor of Mrs. George Lowery, who has devoted her life to this enterprise.

Miss Rodgers named Mrs. Elmer Richards, Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. R. W. Cretney and Mrs. Seymour Solomon members of a committee for the equipment curriculum study course.

Miss Marjorie Oliver, guest speaker, was introduced by Mrs. Richards and made a splendid talk on "New Trends in Education."

Miss Oliver described the changes that are being incorporated into the schools of Louisiana and into the school system of Monroe. She stated that the procedure of the new curriculum was accomplished by setting up a little democracy in the school room. Children are taught to plan so that they may intelligently think an undertaking through, she said.

According to Miss Oliver, the teacher is not the "prima donna," but remains in the background, allowing the child to take the responsibility. She does none of the things for him that he can profitably do for himself. Though she is in the background, her position is one of even greater importance, in the capacity of a wise and skillful guide.

In closing, Miss Oliver stated that the schools are trying to give to society that which society has been asking for—children better fitted to take their places in the world and to live in a democracy.

The program was followed by a business session.

At the conclusion sandwiches and tea were served in the home economics room by Miss Rogillio and Mesdames Elbert, Thompson, Manning and Gillis.

Grayson

The Grayson P.-T. A. met in the home economics room with 26 members present. Mrs. Gove Davis presided in the absence of Mrs. J. J. McKeithen, president.

The program consisted of an old-fashioned spelling lesson, in which each person tried to turn the other down, as compared to the new method which was interestingly presented by Mrs. Lucille Woolridge and a few members of her second grade class.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and reports of the various committees were given. Mrs. F. L. Johnston announced the winners of the membership campaign: Miss Clydia Biggs, first, with 28 members; and Mrs. Joe Sanders, second, with 23 members.

Floyd Johnston, reporting on the bench project, said that work had begun on one-half of the benches.

Semper Fidelis Class Holds Hotel Banquet

Semper Fidelis class of the West Monroe First Methodist church held their annual banquet in the Cameo room of Hotel Virginia, Friday evening. Thirty members of the class and their guests were seated around the handsomely appointed table. Plaques of white chrysanthemums, the class flower, and tall white tapers were placed along the board in cathedralesque arrangement. The place cards and program were symbolic of the Thanksgiving season.

Mrs. O. N. Reynolds, as toastmistress, presided in charming and gracious manner, interspersing witticisms with clever bits of verse throughout the interesting and inspirational program. The invocation was given by Mrs. F. C. McConnell. Mrs. Reynolds presented the officers, introducing first Mrs. C. Karlos Smith, the class teacher, expressing appreciation for her "Hour of Sabbath Talks" and for her kind and sympathetic leadership. Mrs. Smith's response was a beautiful and touching tribute to the group of young women.

Mrs. J. E. Whitaker, president of the class, Mrs. E. L. Page, vice-president and Mrs. Gregory Warren, secretary, were introduced. Miss Betty Rinehart delighted the group with two vocal numbers, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Babbi." Miss Maida McClendon accompanied Miss Rinehart and also contributed several brilliant piano selections.

Mrs. J. Norman Coon, one of Monroes most versatile entertainers, received an ovation when she was introduced. She is a great favorite and is especially welcome when she gives dramatic readings. A clever little skit, "Love In Any Language," called for an encore and Mrs. Coon responded with characteristic grace.

The evening's program was concluded with Mrs. A. D. Tisdale's illuminating review of "The Citadel," by Cronnen. Considerable time had been devoted to the study of this novel as manifested in the brilliant review.

Early Ouachita History Recounted In Address

Charles Mitchell Lifts Veil Separating Progress Of Today From Period Shrouded In Antiquity

If there is something you would like to know about the history of the Ouachita valley ask Mr. Charles Mitchell. He has lifted the veil that separates this parish from the things of today and the things of yesterday and glimpsed the old Indian trails leading to the river where all the commerce of early days was carried on. He is considered authority because he has plunged beneath the surface of things and tells in accurate manner of the settlement of the Ouachita country.

Speaking before the Ouachita Valley Historical society, recently organized in this city, he said in part:

"When we speak of the Ouachita Valley or Ouachita country it may be from a geographic standpoint or it may be that we are referring to it as a political subdivision. From the earliest accounts of this territory we find it spoken of as the Ouachita country. When Don Juan Filhiol was sent up here as resident commandant it was as civil commandant over the Ouachita country.

"While very little is known of the early history of the Ouachita valley, we do know that it dates back to the age of the mound builders. All about us we see evidence of their former occupancy. Further we know that the culture of some of these former inhabitants was of the highest order as evidenced by the pottery removed from the Glendora site and from other mound sites in the Ouachita valley. Some of the pieces found on the Glendora site were really beautiful works of art. The account of this expedition was reported by Clarence B. Moore in his "Antiquities of the Ouachita Valley" which was published by the Philadelphia Academy of Science in 1909. This work is beautifully illustrated, in colors, with some of the places that were recovered, and Dr. Moore's account of his excavations is most interesting and instructive.

"The written history of the Ouachita valley dates from 1542 when De Soto passed this way and visited at several Indian villages on the Ouachita. In 1687, the survivors of La Salle's second expedition traversed the Ouachita country, and in 1700, while Bienville was with the Taensa, he met some Ouachitas who had come to the Lake of the Taensa, now called Lake St. Joseph, to trade salt. So he made a trip to the Ouachita. From this evidence we know that this immediate territory has been occupied for at least 400 years.

"Very little is known of the first white settlers, and what we do have is very fragmentary. We do, however, find the names of some of these early sojourners perpetuated in the names of some of our rivers, bayous, prairies and points along the river. This could be made the subject of a paper to be given at some future date and would prove both interesting and instructive—I refer to a paper on "Place Names of the Ouachita Valley."

"It is quite probable that the mounds scattered over the valley of the Ouachita were the works of Indians long before the period when the French and Spanish governments alternately occupied it.

"The early history of the Ouachita valley is wrapped in twilight—Indian traditions are lost—and all that speaks of the events of the hundreds of years beyond the year 1782 are those silent mounds. It is true there are grand old swamps with their oaks covered all over with moss like flowing beard—the same hills behind whose summits the same sun sank to rest, and the same river as when these woods were peopled with Indians, but all else how changed. "Lo, the poor Indian, whose untutored mind, saw God in the clouds, and heard him in the wind," has left faint trace of his habits and life.

The Acadians, or Normans, who visited the country about the year 1640 saw a vast wilderness peopled with Indians who were engaged in hunting and fishing and in preparing bears oil as they did one hundred years ago. Could those adventurers revisit the place now, they would find naught but the hum of busy life. If the year when the Norman or Acadian first left his foot print on the banks of the Ouachita is the one from which to date the "age of Monroe," then the Bulletin is mistaken in fixing the time in 1782.

"It may be proper for the citizens of Monroe to celebrate its second centennial. The orator of the occasion will have a beautiful and interesting subject, and there might be a little romance thrown into it. He could tell of the dusky form of the hunter when seen in the shades of the evening returning from the hills, or from the swamps after the chase for the deer was over, or of the happy Indian maid as she floated upon the waters in her twilight canoe. Then he could tell of the burial rites of the Indian, two dead centuries past. These rites are still preserved by the few Indians who linger among us. They have gone towards the setting sun, but the Choctaw Indian has noble traits—he was and is the friend of the white man.

"Where Monroe is situated was certainly the camping ground, or village, or home of these Indians two centuries past—everything indicates it. They made no resistance when the French occupied the province of Louisiana in 1699 under D'Iberville. On the contrary, they assisted in every warfare against the Spanish. The adventurous Acadian or Norman, who visited the locality about the year 1640 in all probability reported the condition of the country, its resources and its fertility, to the French authorities and perchance D'Iberville established the first post where the city is situated. Certain it is, however, that upon the authority of Monette, some Frenchmen stood on the banks of the Ouachita river as stated over two hundred years ago, where Monroe is situated."

Realizing the serious situation in which we are and conscious of the doubts which arise every day, we are speaking this morning to our confidence and stability. The theme is, "Clouds, Darkness and the Morning Star." Is Tennyson presenting truth when he writes:

Buy at Home---An Aid to Everyone . . .

THE RELATIONSHIP between a store and its patrons in communities like Monroe and West Monroe is one of the truly pleasing things about such cities. In most cases it is evidence of friendship, integrity and mutual satisfaction. It is enough to know when you trade at home you usually trade with a friend who is interested in you and the welfare of your family.

There are innumerable reasons why you should trade at home; few reasons you should not. Because of its pertinence, we repeat an editorial from a leading small city newspaper of not long ago.

"The proposition of trading at home," it sets forth, "has been too often construed for the help of the merchant alone. There is no greater economic fallacy. The merchant may gain the first or primary benefit; the results may show up first in his own cash register; but by no means is the 'business man' the sole heir of local patronage. We are all 'business' people. It is a broad term, and includes those who toil or add anything to the total of human welfare.

"The merchant, the banker, the farmer, the housewife, the teacher, the preacher, the lawyer, the doctor, the laborer, the contractor—in short, 'the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker'—are all in the same class when it comes to making a home town what it should be. Set any one of these trades or professions going and the others it deals with or pays wages to are helped accordingly. It means more savings, more bank deposits and more business.

"We are living in an age of keen competition with the big cities. That the large city has its advantages and accommodations, all will admit. But it has its disadvantages. If life is to survive in its fullness, richness and culture in the suburban and rural sections and in the smaller cities and towns of this country, the economic side of the questions must be given first consideration. Without economic prosperity, all would have to move out.

"The business of the people at home is to do business at home, if it can be done with reason and propriety. And we believe it can. Every dollar spent at home, like any other cumulative dividend, makes it that much easier for the other fellow to spend his money at home.

"Investing in your home community is like getting compound interest, with the privilege to cash in on the principal.

"Industries bring money to a community, but the community benefits only when that money is spent at home. It gets no benefit from the money if it passes directly from the pay envelope to distant cities, the degree it does benefit being in direct ratio to the length of time it remains in local circulation."

Counts Beauty Out In Seeking For Real Fame

Anita Louise Seeks To Be Esteemed For Acting Ability

ANITA LOUISE as one of the younger sisters of Bette Davis in the Warner Bros. film version of Myron Brinig's novel, "The Sisters," showing at the Paramount Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, proves that the first decade of the present century had its good points as well as its foolish ones as far as women's fashions were concerned.

This was the corset era, when fashionable ladies boasted of sixteen-inch waists, six-inch pompadours and wore birds on their hats. All of these fashion foibles are staging a comeback, according to Orry-Kelly, Warner Brothers designer, who planned the clothes that Miss Davis, Miss Louise and Jane Bryan wear in the picture.

Hollywood's designers love to hang clothes on Anita, whose nearly perfect beauty seems equally suitable to modern as well as costume roles. She appeared in "Marie Antoinette" with Norma Shearer and she set off the eighteenth century costumes in a way that proved her beauty to be timeless.

She would, however, rather be known as an actress than as a great beauty and no one in Hollywood works harder to earn such a reputation. Anita is 21 years old and has been "in pictures" for almost eighteen years.

When she was three years old she was familiar to the readers of newspapers and magazines as the "Post Toastie Girl." She posed for commercial artists who put her pretty face and blonde curls on all sorts of products and thereby gave Anita and her mother a comfortable income.

At five she started work in motion pictures. At nine, her mother took Anita to Europe where the girl played the love interest—the role of a girl of fifteen—in "The Life of Franz Shubert."

She played Greta Garbo as a child in a flash-back scene in "A Woman of Affairs." For that role she learned to ride a bicycle in one afternoon. She needed the role. Most of the grocery money had been spent for the bicycle. The Garbo role improved her fortunes and she was offered many good jobs for the next few years.

In 1929, her mother planned to take her to Europe to study music. They had gotten as far as New York when the falling exchange forced them to change their plans.

They returned to Hollywood, where Anita has worked steadily since, most of the time for Warner Brothers, where she is under long term contract.

Gang Girl's Frantic Fight Seen In Film

'Passport Husband' Will Be Shown At Capitol Tuesday

"PASSPORT HUSBAND," a 20th Century-Fox screen comedy developed from the theme of a gangster's moll trying to avoid deportation, comes to the Capitol theater on Tuesday.

The passport husband is, according to the Hollywood interpretation, a person "of unassailable virtue and spotless reputation" who by guile or force is induced to marry a woman who entered the United States without proper credentials.

The movie, according to advance reviewers, gives Stuart Erwin in the role of the "Passport Husband" one of the funniest screen performances of his career—and does a hilarious job of making fun of gangsters, rackets and night clubs.

Erwin is portrayed as a bus-boy in a night club where a fiery Spanish dancer is an attraction (Joan Woodbury). He has a typical "fan" crush on the dancer while the cigarette girl (Pauline Moore) really pines for him.

The unobtrusive bus-boy gets no one's attention until he bashes a gangster for getting gay with the cigarette girl. The dancer's sweetheart, Tiger (Douglas Fowley), is deported and Blackie (Harold Huber) plots to keep the Spanish charmer for himself. So the hunt begins for a reputable citizen to marry her and save her from a fate similar to the Tiger's.

The "Passport Husband" finds himself hurled into the midst of gang wars and slot machine rackets—from a mild-mannered life of oblivion. The lamb becomes a lion, with a newspaper man (Robert Lowery), aiding and abetting the denouement.

Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel selected James Tinling to direct the film. Karen De Wolf and Robert Chapin wrote the screen play based on an original story by Hilda Stone.

Trips and concerts are being given over the week-end by boys and girls of the Louisiana Baptist Children's home. One group directed by Superintendent B. F. Wallace gave a program last night at Sikes and today will appear similarly at Baptist churches in Winnfield and Harmony Grove.

The boys and girls had an enjoyable Thanksgiving with a big turkey dinner furnished by Mrs. H. Flood Madison, Sr., of Bastrop. Many trucks loaded with groceries and other supplies arrived at the home over the Thanksgiving period, coming from various cities and towns of the state.

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

CHAPTER XII

[illegible]

"Mac!" exclaimed Sally. "Good heavens! I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Watkin want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

"I've made it a lifelong habit to marry girls who run cockeyed hotels. And that reminds me that I think I [illegible] place. It ought to have been called Haywire House. I wonder what kind of a nut this new woman will turn out to be."

"I wouldn't know. But she'll be a nut without doubt. We seem to attract the [illegible] and [illegible]. Incidentally, though, Mr. Parker, I haven't heard you murmuring about wanting to sell the place lately."

"Me? When did I say I wanted to sell it?"

"The very first day you came. You were quite definite about it. You wouldn't [illegible] in the bushes in an old firetrap like that. You weren't ready for a wheel chair yet. Not you."

• • •

Kinks grinned. "You've got me mixed up with a couple of other guys named Joe."

"Oh, no, I haven't. I remember every word you said."

"And I," said Kinks, "remember just how you looked that day. I'll tell you now in one word. Swell. I was knocked for a loop and I'm still looping. Gee, Sally, couldn't you take a few minutes off to marry me and put me out of my misery?"

Sally said: "Keep your eye on the hotel business, Mr. Waldorf." But she added: "You're rather a sweet person, Kinks. I don't know what I'd do without you."

"And consider this, girl," said Kinks, slightly exalted by the crumb she'd tossed him. "If you don't marry me, you'll be faced with a drab, gray vista of Parkerless years. Think of it. Why, no woman's life is complete without Parker."

"Greta Garbo's doing all right, I hear," said Sally. And just then the Pennington-Parker Restatorium loomed before them.

An alien car stood in the driveway. And on the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-gold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head. Her age was indeterminate. She might have been either 30 or 40. She wore a cream-colored, raglan coat. And in her lap reposed a book, a magazine, a cigaret case, a handbag, and a dachshund.

Sally opened her mouth to speak, but the dachshund beat her to the punch.

"Yip," said the dachshund.

The tall woman tapped its head sharply.

"Ganz ruhig, Wolfgang," she said. And to the assembled company: "I have to speak to him in German."

"I'll brush up on my Goethe," murmured Kinks inaudibly.

Mr. Harkness took the floor.

"This is Miss Clara Fenimore," he said to Sally. "She thinks she'd like to stay with us for a while."

"I'm a nerve case," announced Miss Fenimore abruptly. "My nerves are all on edge. I haven't had a night's sleep in six months. No, seven. What I require is absolute rest. That is why your billboard attracted me. Have you a clean, comfortable room with a southern exposure? I hope you allow dogs." She spoke in jerky fashion, like a locomotive making a tough grade.

"Well," said Sally, "you understand, of course, that this isn't like a sanitarium? I mean, we—we don't provide medical attention."

"Mr. Harkness has explained the nature of the place," said Miss Fenimore. "I am not in need of medical attention. All that I want is relaxation and no one to bother me."

"It's as quiet as a grave around here," said Kinks, who felt that a little selling talk might be necessary.

"All right," said Sally briskly. "I do have a room that I think you'd like. Would you care to see it?"

Miss Fenimore arose. It was apparent at once that she was the kind of woman who sheds things. She shed now in a heterogeneous shower.

In good order the book, the magazine, the cigaret case, the handbag, and Wolfgang, the dachshund, descended to the porch. Kinks, gallantly, retrieved all but Wolfgang.

"Well," he said to Mr. Harkness, as Sally and Miss Fenimore departed, "there's another one. I hope you don't mind the mixed company around here."

Miss Clara Fenimore

Mr. Harkness made no reply. He was gazing wolfishly after Wolfgang, the dachshund. Kinks, perceiving his trend of thought, respected it with silence. It was obvious that Mr. Harkness was considering Wolfgang as a subject for electrification.

On the following day a major tragedy occurred. Mr. Harkness lost his pliers.

Up to that point the business of installing batteries in the various mounted animal heads had been progressing by leaps and bounds. Now, however, it was suddenly suspended. And the electrical genius moaned about dolefully, searching everywhere and constantly getting under the feet of Sally and Mrs. Clipstack.

"If that little man asks me if I've seen his pliers just once more," Sally told Kinks exasperatedly, "I'm going to take him across my knee. He's pestered me to death."

"What's he making so much fuss about?" asked Kinks. "I mislaid my tobacco pouch this morning, but you haven't heard me squawk."

"Et tu, Brute?" said Sally. "It seems to be a day for losing things. Mrs. Clipstack can't find her potato peeler."

They had been down to the river and were now approaching the house across the back lawn.

"How's the Fenimore liking the place?" Kinks asked.

Sally laughed. "She says her nerves are better already. She's gone off in her car, happy as a lark."

Kinks' reply was cut short by the sudden appearance of Mr. Bull Griffin. A look of alarm dominated Mr. Griffin's rock-ribbed countenance.

"Hey," he said agitatedly, "I've lost me rod."

"Your what?" said Sally.

"Me gat, me iron."

Sally turned to Kinks.

"What on earth," she demanded, "is the man talking about?"

"He's lost his gun," Kinks translated.

"Dat's it," said Bull. "Me gun. I leave it in me coat, an' me an' Spaldini goes for a walk an' now it's gone."

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need . . ."

She stopped abruptly. A second-story window had opened. The head of Mrs. Clipstack was thrust out.

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstack in a portentous voice, "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

Sally and Kinks hurried upstairs. Mrs. Clipstack stood in the room recently assigned to Miss Clara Fenimore. One hand was raising a corner of the mattress off the bed. The other pointed to a collection of articles lying on the springs. And the Clipstackian face wore a severe expression.

"I don't know what's goin' on in this house," said Mrs. Clipstack. "I was doin' this room and look what I found."

Kinks and Sally looked. Huddled together on the bed springs were three spools of silk, an ash tray, a small china ornament from the living room mantelpiece, Mrs. Clipstack's potato peeler, Kinks' tobacco pouch, Mr. Harkness' pliers, and Bull Griffin's revolver.

Sally put a hand to her head.

"My Lord," she exclaimed. "What is the woman? A junk collector?"

Kinks saw light suddenly.

"No," he said. "Unless I'm way off, she's a kleptomaniac."

ABSTRACT COMPANY IN NEW QUARTERS

The Ouachita Abstract company, Inc., of which John R. Humble is president and general manager, has been established in a new location at 109-1-2 North Second street in the Bernhardt building. A complete plant is located there and the public is invited to make inspection.

The company is a combination of the Ouachita Abstract and Title Guarantee company, Ltd., established in 1907, and of the Monroe Abstract company, Inc., established in 1921.

As the purchaser of property is becoming more and more insistent that an abstract be furnished by the seller, this company expects to furnish an abstract of title with every sale. Its abstracts, with an attorney's opinion, furnish the only way the public can be sure that the title is as represented.

Mr. Humble has had 25 years experience in the abstract business here. In addition to the abstract business, Mr. Humble also maintains a photostatic machine that is said to be the best obtainable.

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN GAINS

Christmas Seal Sale Will Be More Extensive This Year

Everybody in the Twin Cities and Ouachita parish will be afforded opportunity to aid the fight on tuberculosis by purchasing Christmas seals, announced G. B. Cooley, president of the Ouachita Tuberculosis and Public Health association, Saturday. More than 6,000 seals will be mailed out within the next few days parish-wide. Besides these seals, there will be a solicitation made, under the direction of Chairman Claude Harrison, for so-called larger gifts.

The public is asked to rally to the support of the campaign. It may be that one may think that tuberculosis is far off, that it will hit someone else, but that is all too often not so. It comes into homes of high and low, striking with deadly effect. Thus even from a selfish point of view, protecting one's own family, one should rally to the aid of the cause, it is pointed out.

More cash than ever is needed this year as the campaign calls for wider activities. Monroe is well acquainted with the plans to open the new tuberculosis sanatorium at Pine Top. This is another incentive to renewed activity, it is pointed out.

This year no school children will sell seals but they will be enabled to buy some seals through their schools so that they may have a part in this great work.

The seal sale starts annually on Thanksgiving day and ends on Christmas. The public is urged to lend its hearty support to this worthwhile project.

BOOSTER CLUB HOLDS MEETING

J. P. Roquemore Is Principal Speaker; Prizes Awarded

The Missouri Pacific Booster club's meeting, held at the clubhouse on Ouachita avenue, proved an outstanding success Friday night. The meeting was in charge of L. L. Richardson, chief booster.

Following the invocation by Rev. J. P. Lowery, pastor of the Church of Christ, community singing was held, led by Charles Gaushell, director of the bands of the city schools. Mrs. Gaushell presided at the piano.

Selections were presented by the Hawaiian School of Music, after which J. P. Roquemore, master mechanic, delivered the principal address. He pointed out the leading role the railroads play in the community and extended thanks to the merchants here for their past support and urged that it be continued.

The Pierce quartet, directed by D. L. Pierce, presented several well received selections.

L. L. Hoskins played unique selections on a saw on which he used a violin bow. Mrs. Hoskins rendered two guitar selections and two vocal solos.

An interesting feature was the awarding of door prizes which comprised cakes, groceries and even a live goose.

A social hour completed the night's program.

TWO ENGLISH DEBATORS OPPOSE TECH SPEAKERS IN DEBATE DECEMBER 10

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Two debaters from England, representing the Oxford and Cambridge union societies, will oppose two Louisiana Tech speakers here on December 10 at 7:30 p.m., Elton Abernathy, Tech debating director, has announced.

Darwin Shrell, Ruston, and James W. Parkerson, Benton, will be the Tech entries in the debate, the subject of which will be "Resolved, That the United States Should Form an Alliance With Great Britain." The Tech representatives will uphold the negative side.

An admission charge of 25 cents will be made to offset the expense of bringing the Britishers to Ruston and to provide for their local accommodations.

The debate will be a non-decision affair but the audience will be given ballots to express opinions on the question after the topic has been discussed, Mr. Abernathy said.

The Oxford representative will be Christopher Paget Mayhew, son of Sir Basil and Lady Mayhew of Norwich, England. He is 23 years old, won the Oxford university award in economics in 1937, represented the university in Rugby football, was president of the Oxford Union Society, and is listed as a Socialist and member of the British Labor party.

The Cambridge entry will be Philip R. Noakes, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noakes of Chipstead, Surrey, England. Noakes is "politically and by nature a conservative." He likewise was a Rugby football player and the recipient of various scholastic awards and formerly president of the Cambridge Union society.

The English debaters are conducting an itinerary of the United States under the sponsorship of the National Student Federation of America.

CELEBRATED WRITER TO TELL EXPERIENCES

Dr. Joseph Dunner, celebrated German sociologist, newspaper correspondent, and columnist, will be the guest speaker in the B' Nai Israel annex at the annual dinner of the congregation tonight at 7 o'clock.

He will tell of his flight from Germany in 1933 and of conditions that exist today under the regime of Adolf Hitler.

The Columbia river has an average flow of 280,000 feet per second.

DR. PHILLIPS TO TALK AT CENTER

French Instructor Will Tell Of His Recent Mexican Trip

The Monday morning assembly program at Northeast Center, held at 10:30 a.m., will this time assume special interest as Dr. Hosea Phillips, director of the department of French at Northeast Center, will be the speaker.

During the past summer, Dr. Phillips made an extended tour through Mexico. He will tell of his experiences and of conditions as he found them in that southern republic.

While not assured, it is possible that views of his travel trip will be displayed in connection with his talk.

The program was arranged by the special committee at Northeast Center having charge of Monday morning programs of which W. R. Hammond is chairman.

The public is always welcome to attend these Monday morning entertainments. No admission is charged.

ANOTHER STEP TAKEN IN BIG CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM FOR COLLEGE

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—With bids being advertised this week for construction of a new dormitory for women at Louisiana Tech, another step was taken toward beginning a two-million-dollar expansion program at the college here.

The state board of education will meet about the middle of December to consider the bids for the dormitory construction, President E. S. Richardson said. The building must be started "not later than December 31, 1938," according to specifications of the PWA, which is providing a total of $867,272.72 for the Tech development, with the state appropriating $1,060,000.

The additional dormitory for women will be erected east of the present girls' hall. It was chosen as the first building to be erected not only because there is an urgent need for additional dormitory accommodations but because such a structure can be built with less delay than would attend a larger building, it was pointed out. The new dormitory will house about 100 girls.

The other seven buildings expected to be completed before the deadline, June 30, 1940, include an additional boys' dormitory, an engineering building, an auditorium and fine arts building, a dining hall, an agriculture building, a power plant and a laundry.

The order in which the buildings will be erected has not been determined. "We may have several of them going at the same time," President Richardson stated.

SIX RUSTON CHURCHES PLAN LAYMEN'S BANQUET

Among the local people assisting in arranging the banquet are Moreland Lewis, Rev. S. E. McFadden, E. C. DeFreese, A. A. Barnard, A. C. Morris, Frellsen F. Smith, L. J. Fox, T. L. Scarborough, Norman McDonald, H. L. McKnight, C. E. Tooke, Ross C. Neill and C. W. Robertson.

RAISE CHRISTMAS FUND FOR NEEDY YOUNGSTERS

JENA, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—John Russell post, American Legion, with the cooperation of Miss Ethel Muse, parish child welfare chairman, is sponsoring a campaign to raise funds to be used as a toy fund for LaSalle parish needy children. Contributions are being made to T. S. Butler, post finance officer, P. C. Girlinghouse, post commander, and D. Floyd, post adjutant.

Former Monroe Man Writes Entrancing Travel Book

'Vagabond Voyaging' By Larry Nixon Lauds Freighter Trips

"Vagabond Voyaging," the story of freighter travel, by Larry Nixon, well known newspaper man, has been circulated by Little, Brown and company only four months but in that time, four issues have been necessitated. Monroe people are interested in the book not only because of its value but also from the fact that Larry Nixon is a son of the late John Nixon, who was associated with the Daily News of Monroe, forerunner of the News-Star. Mrs. Dorothy Younse, instructor in English at the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university, is a sister of the author.

Larry Nixon, who has had wide experience on metropolitan newspapers, bought and issued a trade paper called "Travel Trade." This connection caused a flood of inquiries from persons eager to experience the joys of "vagabond voyaging." He was deluged with inquiries and this caused him to decide to write a book. The present volume is the natural sequence of these circumstances.

This book is a capable attempt to answer questions that may arise but it is even more. It carries, in vivid description, the reader around the world.

The interesting volume begins with an informative chapter in praise of freighters and gives in detail an inside description on costs, routes, food, service, recreation, the clothes that are required and other details. Nixon proceeds to list freighter routes by time and by cost, and gives the names of leading freight lines that accept passengers.

He makes it clear that a freight-carrying boat is no floating hotel nor is it a private yacht. It is a work boat but possesses many luxuries. In fact he assures that the accommodations offered are often far more modern than tourist class on the biggest of boats. The "freighter" of 1938 is compared to the "cabin ship" of a quarter of a century ago—not that it is that much behind the times, but in that it is unpretentious, leisurely and cheap. And with it all, the passengers get to know the officers of the ship as close friends and comradeship is the general rule of things.

With careful financing, if one desires to make a trip around the world, this can be possible for as little as $600, the book discloses, if a "freighter" is the liner on which the passenger travels. Coastwise trips, trips on the North Atlantic, Alaska (from the west coast) and the West Indies, can be visited for as little as $100.

The book is really delightful reading and many students, college professors and other educators as well as professional men and women will, after reading this book, be eager to arrange bookings for that next summer trip. But so great is the popularity of this way of travel, which has become increasingly in vogue, that it is necessary to make arrangements far in advance to avoid being disappointed for numbers of passengers are always very limited.

The book is exceedingly interesting and Monroe people will be specially pleased to know that its author is so closely associated with this community.

FATHER VANDEGAER HAS SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Word received by Father M. F. Walsh, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church, was to the effect that Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of the church, has just undergone a successful operation on his eye in de Paul hospital in St. Louis, Mo.

It was found that removal of the eyeball will not be required. Father Vandegaer will be able to return home in about two weeks, it was stated.

The recall in American politics first was used during the time of the Continental congress. Pennsylvania's delegates refused to sign the Declaration of Independence, were recalled and other delegates sent in their places.

LOCAL CLINIC TO BE INSPECTED

Maternity Unit At St. Francis To Be Studied By Dr. Arnell

Dr. R. E. Arnell, formerly of the Chicago Lying-in hospital, and now clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology in the Louisiana State university medical center, will inspect the Monroe maternity welfare clinic on Friday.

Dr. Arnell is specially interested in clinics of this type inasmuch as Drs. De Lee and Adair inaugurated the first home delivery service at the Chicago Lying-in hospital and are at this time the national leaders for improved obstetrical care.

The Monroe clinic is a small model of the maternity center in Chicago and was founded by Dr. W. F. Guerriero under the sponsorship of the Catholic Daughters of America and the Louisiana state board of health. It has the distinction of being the first in Louisiana and has given care to more than 250 cases since it was instituted here.

Dr. Guerriero is now serving as instructor in obstetrics at the Louisiana State university medical center under Dr. Arnell and will return to Monroe later to resume his position as director of the clinic. He was recently elected to membership in the American Congress of Obstetrics and Gynecology and to the American Committee of Maternal Welfare for his interest in this work.

While in the city, Dr. Arnell and Dr. Guerriero will present papers before the Fifth District Medical society.

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

Miss Clara Fenimore

CHAPTER XII

"I could kill Spencer Ames," Sally said venomously, as she headed the car out of Winstock. "Babbling about his board of directors. I know darn well he could give us that extension if he wanted to."

"Seems to me he could," said Kinks. "Didn't old Kenworthy say he just about owns that bank?"

"Wilton was decent about it, anyhow," said Sally.

"He made an impassioned plea, all right," Kinks admitted. "But listen, beautiful, don't you go getting any wild notions in your head. I positively forbid you to marry Wilton Ames no matter how expert he becomes at bawling out his father."

"Marry?" exclaimed Sally. "Good heavens, I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Wilton want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

"I've made it a lifelong habit to marry girls who run cockeyed hotels. And that reminds me that I think I misnamed our place. It ought to have been called Haywire House. I wonder what kind of a nut this new woman will turn out to be."

"I wouldn't know. But she'll be a nut without doubt. We seem to attract the bizarre and outlandish. Incidentally though, Mr. Parker, I haven't heard you murmuring about wanting to sell the place lately."

"Me? When did I say I wanted to sell it?"

"The very first day you came. You were quite definite about it. You wouldn't rusticate in the bulrushes in an old fire-trap like that. You weren't ready for a wheel chair yet. Not you."

* * *

Kinks grinned, "You've got me mixed up with a couple of other guys named Joe."

"Oh, no, I haven't. I remember every word you said."

"And I," said Kinks, "remember just how you looked that day. I'll tell you how in one word. Swell. I was knocked for a loop and I'm still looping. Gee, Sally, couldn't you take a few minutes off to marry me and put me out of my misery?"

Sally said: "Keep your eye on the hotel business, Mr. Waldorf." But she added: "You're rather a sweet person, Kinks. I don't know what I'd do without you."

"And consider this, girl," said Kinks, slightly exalted by the crumb she'd tossed him. "If you don't marry me, you'll be faced with a drab, gray vista of Parkerless years. Think of it. Why, no woman's life is complete without Parker."

"Greta Garbo's doing all right, I hear," said Sally. And just then the Pennington-Parker Restatorium loomed before them.

An alien car stood in the driveway. And on the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-gold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head. Her age was indeterminate. She might have been either 30 or 40. She wore a cream-colored, raglan coat. And in her lap reposed a book, a magazine, a cigaret case, a handbag, and a dachshund.

Sally opened her mouth to speak, but the dachshund beat her to the punch.

"Yip," said the dachshund.

The tall woman tapped its head sharply.

"Ganz ruhig, Wolfgang," she said. And to the assembled company: "I have to speak to him in German."

"I'll brush up on my Goethe," murmured Kinks inaudibly.

Mr. Harkness took the floor.

"This is Miss Clara Fenimore," he said to Sally. "She thinks she'd like to stay with us for a while."

"I'm a nerve case," announced Miss Fenimore abruptly. "My nerves are all on edge. I haven't had a night's sleep in six months. No, seven. What I require is absolute rest. That is why your billboard attracted me. Have you a clean, comfortable room with a southern exposure? I hope you allow dogs." She spoke in jerky fashion, like a locomotive making a tough grade.

"Well," said Sally, "you understand, of course, that this isn't like a sanitarium? I mean, we—we don't provide medical attention."

"Mr. Harkness has explained the nature of the place," said Miss Fenimore. "I am not in need of medical attention. All that I want is relaxation and no one to bother me."

"It's as quiet as a grave around here," said Kinks, who felt that a little selling talk might be necessary.

"All right," said Sally briskly. "I do have a room that I think you'd like. Would you care to see it?"

Miss Fenimore arose. It was apparent at once that she was the kind of woman who sheds things. She shed now in a heterogeneous shower. In good order the book, the magazine, the cigaret case, the handbag, and Wolfgang, the dachshund, descended to the porch. Kinks, gallantly, retrieved all but Wolfgang.

"Well," he said to Mr. Harkness, as Sally and Miss Fenimore departed, "there's another one. I hope you don't mind the mixed company around here."

Mr. Harkness made no reply. He was gazing wolfishly after Wolfgang, the dachshund. Kinks, perceiving his trend of thought, respected it with silence. It was obvious that Mr. Harkness was considering Wolfgang as a subject for electrification.

On the following day a major tragedy occurred. Mr. Harkness lost his pliers.

Up to that point the business of installing batteries in the various mounted animal heads had been progressing by leaps and bounds. Now, however, it was suddenly suspended. And the electrical genius mooned about dolefully, searching everywhere and constantly getting under the feet of Sally and Mrs. Clipstack.

"If that little man asks me if I've seen his pliers just once more," Sally told Kinks, exasperatedly, "I'm going to take him across my knee. He's pestered me to death."

"What's he making so much fuss about?" asked Kinks. "I mislaid my tobacco pouch this morning, but you haven't heard me squawk."

"Et tu, Brute?" said Sally. "It seems to be a day for losing things. Mrs. Clipstack can't find her potato peeler."

They had been down to the river and were now approaching the house across the back lawn.

"How's the Fenimore liking the place?" Kinks asked.

Sally laughed. "She says her nerves are better already. She's gone off in her car, happy as a lark."

Kinks' reply was cut short by the sudden appearance of Mr. Bull Griffin. A look of alarm dominated Mr. Griffin's rock-ribbed countenance.

"Hey," he said agitatedly, "I've lost me rod."

"Your what?" said Sally.

"Me gat, me iron."

Sally turned to Kinks.

"What on earth," she demanded, "is the man talking about?"

"He's lost his gun," Kinks translated.

"Dat's it," said Bull. "Me gun. I leave it in me coat, an' me an' Spaldini goes fer a walk an' now it's gone."

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need . . ."

She stopped abruptly. A second-story window had opened. The head of Mrs. Clipstack was thrust out.

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstack in a portentous voice, "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

Sally and Kinks hurried upstairs. Mrs. Clipstack stood in the room recently assigned to Miss Clara Fenimore. One hand was raising a corner of the mattress off the bed. The other pointed to a collection of articles lying on the springs. And the Clipstackian face wore a severe expression.

"I don't know what's goin' on in this house," said Mrs. Clipstack. "I was doin' this room and look what I found."

Kinks and Sally looked. Huddled together on the bed springs were three spools of silk, an ash tray, a small china ornament from the living room mantelpiece, Mrs. Clipstack's potato peeler, Kinks' tobacco pouch, Mr. Harkness' pliers, and Bull Griffin's revolver.

Sally put a hand to her head.

"My Lord," she exclaimed. "What is the woman? A junk collector?"

Kinks saw light suddenly.

"No," he said. "Unless I'm way off, she's a kleptomaniac."

ABSTRACT COMPANY IN NEW QUARTERS

The Ouachita Abstract company, Inc., of which John R. Humble is president and general manager, has been established in a new location at 109-1-2 North Second street in the Bernhardt building. A complete plant is located there and the public is invited to make inspection.

The company is a combination of the Ouachita Abstract and Title Guarantee company, Ltd., established in 1907, and of the Monroe Abstract company, Inc., established in 1921.

As the purchaser of property is becoming more and more insistent that an abstract be furnished by the seller, this company expects to furnish an abstract of title with every sale. Its abstracts, with an attorney's opinion, furnish the only way the public can be sure that the title is as represented.

Mr. Humble has had 25 years experience in the abstract business here. In addition to the abstract business, Mr. Humble also maintains a photostatic machine that is said to be the best obtainable.

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN GAINS

Christmas Seal Sale Will Be More Extensive This Year

Everybody in the Twin Cities and Ouachita parish will be afforded opportunity to aid the fight on tuberculosis by purchasing Christmas seals, announced G. B. Cooley, president of the Ouachita Tuberculosis and Public Health association, Saturday. More than 6,000 seals will be mailed out within the next few days parish-wide. Besides these seals, there will be a solicitation made, under the direction of Chairman Claude Harrison, for so-called larger gifts.

The public is asked to rally to the support of the campaign. It may be that one may think that tuberculosis is far off, that it will hit someone else, but that is all too often not so. It comes into homes of high and low, striking with deadly effect. Thus even from a selfish point of view, protecting one's own family, one should rally to the aid of the cause, it is pointed out.

More cash than ever is needed this year as the campaign calls for wider activities. Monroe is well acquainted with the plans to open the new tuberculosis sanatorium at Pine Top. This is another incentive to renewed activity, it is pointed out.

This year no school children will sell seals but they will be enabled to buy some seals through their schools, so that they may have a part in this great work.

The seal sale starts annually on Thanksgiving day and ends on Christmas. The public is urged to lend its hearty support to this worthwhile project.

BOOSTER CLUB HOLDS MEETING

J. P. Roquemore Is Principal Speaker; Prizes Awarded

The Missouri Pacific Booster club's meeting, held at the clubhouse on Ouachita avenue, proved an outstanding success Friday night. The meeting was in charge of L. L. Richardson, chief booster.

Following the invocation by Rev. J. P. Lowery, pastor of the Church of Christ, community singing was held, led by Charles Gaushell, director of the bands of the city schools. Mrs. Gaushell presided at the piano.

Selections were presented by the Hawaiian School of Music, after which J. P. Roquemore, master mechanic, delivered the principal address. He pointed out the leading role the railroads play in the community and extended thanks to the merchants here for their past support and urged that it be continued.

The Pierce quartet, directed by D. L. Pierce, presented several well received selections.

L. L. Hoskins played unique selections on a saw on which he used a violin bow. Mrs. Hoskins rendered two guitar selections and two vocal solos.

An interesting feature was the awarding of door prizes which comprised cakes, groceries and even a live goose.

A social hour completed the night's program.

TWO ENGLISH DEBATORS OPPOSE TECH SPEAKERS IN DEBATE DECEMBER 10

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Two debaters from England, representing the Oxford and Cambridge union societies, will oppose two Louisiana Tech speakers here on December 10 at 7:30 p.m., Elton Abernathy, Tech debating director, has announced.

Darwin Shrell, Ruston, and James W. Parkerson, Benton, will be the Tech entries in the debate, the subject of which will be "Resolved, That the United States Should Form an Alliance With Great Britain." The Tech representatives will uphold the negative side.

An admission charge of 25 cents will be made to offset the expense of bringing the Britishers to Ruston and to provide for their local accommodations.

The debate will be a non-decision affair but the audience will be given ballots to express opinions on the question after the topic has been discussed, Mr. Abernathy said.

The Oxford representative will be Christopher Paget Mayhew, son of Sir Basil and Lady Mayhew of Norwich, England. He is 23 years old, won the Oxford university award in economics in 1937, represented the university in Rugby football, was president of the Oxford Union Society, and is listed as a Socialist and member of the British Labor party.

The Cambridge entry will be Philip R. Noakes, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noakes of Chipstead, Surrey, England. Noakes is "politically and by nature a conservative." He likewise was a Rugby football player and the recipient of various scholastic awards and formerly president of the Cambridge Union society.

The English debaters are conducting an itinerary of the United States under the sponsorship of the National Student Federation of America.

CELEBRATED WRITER TO TELL EXPERIENCES

Dr. Joseph Dunner, celebrated German sociologist, newspaper correspondent, and columnist, will be the guest speaker in the B' Nai Israel annex at the annual dinner of the congregation tonight at 7 o'clock.

He will tell of his flight from Germany in 1933 and of conditions that exist today under the regime of Adolf Hitler.

DR. PHILLIPS TO TALK AT CENTER

French Instructor Will Tell Of His Recent Mexican Trip

The Monday morning assembly program at Northeast Center, held at 10:30 a.m., will this time assume special interest as Dr. Hosea Phillips, director of the department of French at Northeast Center, will be the speaker.

During the past summer, Dr. Phillips made an extended tour through Mexico. He will tell of his experiences and of conditions as he found them in that southern republic.

While not assured, it is possible that views of his travel trip will be displayed in connection with his talk.

The program was arranged by the special committee at Northeast Center having charge of Monday morning programs of which W. R. Hammond is chairman.

The public is always welcome to attend these Monday morning entertainments. No admission is charged.

ANOTHER STEP TAKEN IN BIG CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM FOR COLLEGE

RUSTON, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—With bids being advertised this week for construction of a new dormitory for women at Louisiana Tech, another step was taken toward beginning a two-million-dollar expansion program at the college here.

The state board of education will meet about the middle of December to consider the bids for the dormitory construction, Pr ident E. S. Richardson said. The building must be started "not later than December 31, 1938," according to specifications of the PWA, which is providing a total of $867,272.72 for the Tech development, with the state appropriating $1,060,000.

The additional dormitory for women will be erected east of the present girls' hall. It was chosen as the first building to be erected not only because there is an urgent need for additional dormitory accommodations but because such a structure can be built with less delay than would attend a larger building, it was pointed out. The new dormitory will house about 100 girls.

The other seven buildings expected to be completed before the deadline, June 30, 1940, include an additional boys' dormitory, an engineering building, an auditorium and fine arts building, a dining hall, an agriculture building, a power plant and a laundry.

The order in which the buildings will be erected has not been determined. "We may have several of them going at the same time," President Richardson stated.

SIX RUSTON CHURCHES PLAN LAYMEN'S BANQUET

Among the local people assisting in arranging the banquet are Moreland Lewis, Rev. S. E. McFadden, E. C. DeFreese, A. A. Barnard, A. C. Morris, Frellsen F. Smith, L. J. Fox, T. L. Scarborough, Norman McDonald, H. L. McKnight, C. E. Tooke, Ross C. Neill and C. W. Robertson.

JENA, La., Nov. 26.—(Special)—John Russell post, American Legion, with the cooperation of Miss Ethel Muse, parish child welfare chairman, is sponsoring a campaign to raise funds to be used as a toy fund for LaSalle parish needy children. Contributions are being made to T. S. Butler, post finance officer, P. C. Girlinghouse, post commander, and D. Floyd, post adjutant.

Former Monroe Man Writes Entrancing Travel Book

'Vagabond Voyaging' By Larry Nixon Lauds Freighter Trips

"Vagabond Voyaging," the story of freighter travel, by Larry Nixon, well known newspaper man, has been circulated by Little, Brown and company only four months but in that time, four issues have been necessitated. Monroe people are interested in the book not only because of its value but also from the fact that Larry Nixon is a son of the late John Nixon, who was associated with the Daily News of Monroe, forerunner of the News-Star. Mrs. Dorothy Younse, instructor in English at the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university, is a sister of the author.

Larry Nixon, who has had wide experience on metropolitan newspapers, bought and issued a trade paper called "Travel Trade." This connection caused a flood of inquiries from persons eager to experience the joys of "vagabond voyaging." He was deluged with inquiries and this caused him to decide to write a book. The present volume is the natural sequence of these circumstances.

This book is a capable attempt to answer questions that may arise but it is even more. It carries, in vivid description, the reader around the world.

The interesting volume begins with an informative chapter in praise of freighters and gives in detail an inside description on costs, routes, food, service, recreation, the clothes that are required and other details. Nixon proceeds to list freighter routes by time and by cost, and gives the names of leading freight lines that accept passengers.

He makes it clear that a freight-carrying boat is no floating hotel nor is it a private yacht. It is a work boat but possesses many luxuries. In fact he assures that the accommodations offered are often far more modern than tourist class on the biggest of boats. The "freighter" of 1938 is compared to the "cabin ship" of a quarter of a century ago—not that it is that much behind the times, but in that it is unpretentious, leisurely and cheap. And with it all, the passengers get to know the officers of the ship as close friends and comradeship is the general rule of things.

With careful financing, if one desires to make a trip around the world, this can be possible for as little as $600, the book discloses, if a "freighter" is the liner on which the passenger travels. Coastwise trips, trips on the North Atlantic, Alaska (from the west coast) and the West Indies, can be visited for as little as $100.

The book is really delightful reading and many students, college professors and other educators as well as professional men and women will, after reading this book, be eager to arrange bookings for that next summer trip. But so great is the popularity of this way of travel, which has become increasingly in vogue, that it is necessary to make arrangements far in advance to avoid being disappointed for numbers of passengers are always very limited.

The book is exceedingly interesting and Monroe people will be specially pleased to know that its author is so closely associated with this community.

FATHER VANDEGAER HAS SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Word received by Father M. F. Walsh, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church, was to the effect that Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of the church, has just undergone a successful operation on his eye in de Paul hospital in St. Louis, Mo.

It was found that removal of the eyeball will not be required. Father Vandegaer will be able to return home in about two weeks, it was stated.

LOCAL CLINIC TO BE INSPECTED

Maternity Unit At St. Francis To Be Studied By Dr. Arnell

Dr. R. E. Arnell, formerly of the Chicago Lying-in hospital, and now clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology in the Louisiana State university medical center, will inspect the Monroe maternity welfare clinic on Friday.

Dr. Arnell is specially interested in clinics of this type inasmuch as Drs. De Lee and Adair inaugurated the first home delivery service at the Chicago Lying-in hospital and are at this time the national leaders for improved obstetrical care.

The Monroe clinic is a small model of the maternity center in Chicago and was founded by Dr. W. F. Guerriero under the sponsorship of the Catholic Daughters of America and the Louisiana state board of health. It has the distinction of being the first in Louisiana and has given care to more than 250 cases since it was instituted here.

Dr. Guerriero is now serving as instructor in obstetrics at the Louisiana State university medical center under Dr. Arnell and will return to Monroe later to resume his position as director of the clinic. He was recently elected to membership in the American Congress of Obstetrics and Gynecology and to the American Committee of Maternal Welfare for his interest in this work.

While in the city, Dr. Arnell and Dr. Guerriero will present papers before the Fifth District Medical society.
